RAIDER MOEWE'S CAPTIVE TELLS GRAPHIC STORY OF HOW GERMANS SUNK PREY

Most Pathetic of Scenes Captain of Hallbjorg Witnessed Were the Efforts of 1200 Horses, Sent Down With Georgic, to Save Themselves—Moving Pictures Taken of All Sinkings.

By Captain A. Andersen,

Commander of the Norwegian steamer Hallbjorg. He was a prisoner on board the German raider Moewe and on the captured British steamer Yarrowdale, which, with American prisoners aboard, ran the British blockade and reached Swinemunde, Germany. Capt. Andersen and his men were the first of the raider's captives to be freed.

MY ship, the Hallbjorg, steamed from New York on Nov. 23, 1916, for France. The first day out we had unusually fine weather and everything went smoothly. When we reached 20 degrees V. L., one day out, we were not expecting anything unusual to happen, and I had gone down to dinner when the bridge signalled that a steamer had been sighted.

There was nothing extraordinary in that in these waters, but, nevertheless, I hurried to the bridge and picked up a ship approaching from the north and steering a southerly course. I noted this was a strange course to be laying and was further surprised by the maneuvers of the approaching steamer, her skipper changing his course and swinging her at frequent intervals. She was low lying and blackish dirty, resembling an English tramp.

We thought she wanted to signal us about something and stood by, until the stranger was right down on us when she veered off and headed across our bow. I signalled to change our course to avoid a collision when suddenly the stranger broke out the international signal.

"Heave to, at once!"

So far she had shown no flag, not strange in these times, but now suddenly the German flag was run up and we know her to be a raider. The stranger we had taken for a peaceful British tramp now stripped off her disguise by dropping false sides, used as a mask, and disclosed several menacing guns covering my ship. If there had been any chance for us to mistake the masquerade by this time, she also showed us several gaping torpedo tubes. We noted four torpedo tubes, as well as several heavy guns amidships.

The Hallbjorg Boarded.

The German now lowered two boats, commanded by two officers and manned by 30 of the crew, all armed to the teeth, and they soon ran alongside my ship, bringing with them several bombs. Between the two officers and a couple of the sailors, I was escorted to my cabin, where they demanded the ship's papers.

I showed them freely everything they asked for and told them my ship was from New York to Bordeaux, with a mixed cargo of which very little was contraband. The officers, however, without hesitation, determined to sink the Hallbjorg, and signalled this information back to the raider standing by. We were ordered to pack up what personal belongings we could in a hurry and abandon the steamer.

While I was collecting the ship's papers and some of my belongings, the officers broke up the mahogany sideboard and ordered the German sailors to take the silver with them. In the meantime the rest of the Germans were distributing the bombs in the vitals of my ship. It was quick work.

We were sucessful in saving 500 cans of preserves before we took to the boats, but we derived little benefit from salvaging these, as they were promptly confiscated when we came aboard the raider.

Raiders Took Moving Pictures.

As soon as we were on the deck of the German, I was much surprised to see a moving picture camera and one of the crew preparing to operate it. The Germans evidently take pictures of all the ships they sink and preserve them as records—not a bad idea—Teuton efficiency, I suppose they call it. Many times afterward, when the death blow was to be delivered, I saw this camera rigged up and cranked. This note is in a small diary I secretly kept, made the day of our capture—Nov. 24, 1916:

"The ship is not the Moewe, but its name is Puyme."

Since being released from the German prison camp, however, I have discovered I was wrong in this observation, being misled through the fact that the crew managing the steamer wore insignia from the German man-of-war "Puyme." It was the Moewe as suspected at first and as announced by the Germans themselves since.

As soon as I came aboard I went to the commander of the raider and protested against the sinking of the Hallbjorg. I noticed in the commander's cabin a picture of a ship that closely resembled the one on which I was, and this strengthened my convictions at the time our captor was not the famous and feared Moewe. Over the picture was the emblem of the Imperial German navy and the words, "S. M. S. Puyme."

The commander refusing to pay any attention to my protests against the sinking of the ship, I said to him:

"Will you give me permission to photograph my steamer as she goes down?" I had saved a small camera.

"Certainly," he replied, "but you will have to hurry, because in just two minutes the first bomb will explode. That is the one placed in the engine room of your ship."

Prisoners in Cargo Hold.

He stood holding his watch, and, exactly as he had predicted, the explosion occurred to the minute, and the Hallbjorg's vitals were hurled high in the air, parts of machinery flying in all directions.

"In three minutes the next bomb will explode," quietly announced this German commander, still holding his watch, which had a split-second hand.

Again he was right to the minute. In 49 degrees north and 26 degrees west, at 3:45 in the afternoon of Nov. 24, saw the last of my dear ship, the Hallbjorg, as she buried her nose into the sea and went down bow first. My crew looked at one another in a melancholy manner, for it was a sad minute for us all, and we didn't know what was ahead.

"All the time the man turned the crank of the moving picture camera relentlessly. He was on the upper deck, from which his machine could get the best view, and the coolness of it all astonished my men. However, we were to become used to this camera man for the future, for his work seemed to be as much a part of the program as the placing of bombs when a ship was sunk. They made moving pictures of each victim.

After the Hallbjorg was sunk my crew was ordered down into the cargo hold, where they found 93 men of the British steamer Voltaire, the Lamport & Holt liner, from Liverpool, which they told us, had been sunk the day before. These men were held strict prisoners.

The Voltaire was on her way to New York in ballast when the raider met her. She had fired four shots, which struck the Britisher, but none on board had been killed. The sea had been very heavy, however, and the Voltaire's crew had been forced to spend three hours in open boats in the Atlantic before they were taken aboard. Held prisoners in the

THE GERMAN SPY MENACE IN AMERICA

Stern Repression for Guilty and Resort to Secrecy Necessary, Noted Authority Says

Two Hundred Thousand German Reservists in the United States Are As Completely Under Control of Berlin as if They Lived There, and Counterspies Must Watch Them.

Congress Must Enact Immediately Laws With Adequate Penalties, and Forbid the Publication of the Intimate Affairs of the Government, Such as Facts on the Status of the Army and Navy.

By Henry N. Hall.

A Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, April 7.

TWO hours before Count von Bernstorff handed Germany's declaration of ruthless submarine warfare to Secretary of State Lansing—which the Germany Ambassador knew must result in the rupture of diplomatic relations—a secret order to disable their ships was flashed to the masters of 91 German liners, steamships, freighters, tramps and sailing vessels, which since the outbreak of the war have been self-detained in the United States and its possessions. As a result every German vessel tied up in an American port, from Boston to the Philippines, was crippled and put out of service—a striking illustration of how complete were Germany's plans of action in the United States in the event of a severance of relations between the two countries.

I was discussing this and other matters with John B. Stanchfield, whose high standing at the New York bar and wide experience as a criminal lawyer have won for him an international reputation. To him Germany's action was a mere matter of course and anything else would have surprised him. He has devoted much time to the study of alien activities on American soil and believes very firmly that the problems of preparedness and of national defense include not only provision against the dangers of open aggression, but also against the equally ominous risk of surreptitious attack within. Speaking on the perils of espionage, he said:

"Some day—sooner or later—even the most trusting and peace loving American must realize that the foreign spy is in our midst, that he is part of a thoroughly trained and very highly organized army and that he is requiting our hospitality in times of peace by preparing for the successful prosecution of a destructive war against us. Even in the very recent past there have been plentiful indications that through their subterranean operations foreign agents have attempted to undermine the machinery of our diplomatic service and to sow dissension between our State Department and the accredited representatives of Powers with which we are at peace.

Spying Recognized Military Agency

"To deny these facts is not only to shut one's eyes to what has been and is happening every day in our midst, but also to ignore the records and teaching of history from the earliest times. The Bible tells the story of Joshua, the leader of Israel's hosts, of the secret service methods he employed and of the spies with whose assistance he captured Jericho. Every child knows the passage in Genesis in which Joseph's brothers, when he accuses them of having come to Egypt to spy upon the nakedness of the land, answer him, 'We are true men, thy servants are no spies.'

"Every great military campaign has owed its success to information previously supplied by informers who in times of peace had penetrated every portion of the defeated country. It is literally true of the conquests of Alexander, Mithridates, Scipio, Hannibal, Pompey and Caesar, and the Greek historian, Polyanus, made a list of some 900 strategems which were available in civil and political life, as well as in warfare. Many of these are in use today, although, of course, the scope, character and utility of espionage has made wonderful progress in modern times, and it has been brought to the highest perfection and scientific organization by the German Government.

"Every thinking man must realize what a great advantage a foreign enemy can derive from advance information about the strength or weakness, as the case may be, of our national defenses, and the more this subject is looked into the more evident the colossal importance which attaches to espionage as it is practiced today by the great Powers. Not only are spies used to obtain information about a potential adversary, but spies are actually placed in direct contact with the internal machinery of defense.

"In the case of the United States, we must not only prevent the discovery of facts vital to our national defense and to the safeguarding of our state secrets, but we must prepare to cope with the danger of the actual destruction by spies of our fortresses and battleships, railroads, telegraph and telephone system.

30,000 Spies in France Before War

"Some years before the war broke out, it was stated that there were 30,000 trained German spies within the confines of France alone, and that this organization, in point of numbers and efficiency, the equal of an army corps, was busy at work in times of peace to ferret out and report state secrets, and the details of France's military and naval establishments, and also to endeavor at all times to weaken French industries through the production of strikes and labor troubles. The spontaneous patriotism of the French people was their great safeguard against this danger. But who will say that in the United States our lack of a homogeneous native population would not make the work easier than it was in France? Surely the United States must now be on its guard.

JOHN B. STANCHFIELD.

"I do not mean by this that we should doubt the loyalty of the millions of German-American citizens who have thrown in their lot with us, whose children and whose children's children have been born here, and who play so large a part in our national life. I for one believe in the loyalty of our German-American citizens, but we must not overlook the fact that there are in this country at least 200,000 German reservists who owe absolutely no allegiance to the United States and who are as completely under the control of their Government as if they were in Germany itself. We can only count on the restraining influence which American citizens of German birth or extraction will exercise on this large body of unnaturalized aliens, now that Congress has declared that a state of war exists between Germany and the United States."

I asked Mr. Stanchfield if he thought that the general espionage bill reported to the Senate by the Judiciary Committee would afford the necessary protection, and his reply brought out very forcibly the comparative futility and impotency of punitive legislation. He said:

"The spy enters upon his undertaking with full notice of the hazards of his venture. He is a soldier who obeys orders and takes the risks, whatever they are. He is willing, if need be, to pay the penalty of death. Why should he be deterred in peace time by the provisions of a penal code, when in war time he is not restrained by the dangers of a drumhead courtmartial and summary execution? Of course, we must have laws for the punishment of offenses against our safety as a nation, but more important, of course, are measures that will make the offenses impossible of commission. There are three things which we must do:

We Must Resort to Secrecy

"We must, first of all, adopt a policy of much greater secrecy with matters of national defense, and we must protect our national secrets better than we do now. At present a spy, if he knows English, can get all the details of our armed strength by reading the Congressional Record. The other day the Secretary of the Navy was compelled to submit to Congress a report showing the vulnerability of our coast and naval defenses and setting forth in detail how a hostile force could get by our protective barriers, land upon our shores and seize our important cities. That would not happen in any other civilized country. Again, where else on earth would the authorities permit the use of great fortresses and battleships for holiday excursions? Not long ago a visitor to Fort Monroe, not knowing the impropriety of his action, took photographs of the great disappearing guns and was allowed to depart with the negative in his pocket.

"In the second place, we must have a properly organized system of counter espionage; in other words, we must have a secret service especially engaged in watching foreign agents and spying upon spies. At the present moment the allies maintain in this country a very efficient secret service, not for purpose of spying on us, because we hide nothing, but for watching and spying upon the German agents and spies who are working in the United States. At present, it is true, the Department of Justice is watching certain well-known agents, but this work ought not to be included in the already long list of duties of our versatile investigators. No general investigator—no matter how varied his accomplishments—can acquire the qualifications and efficiency of the man whose whole life is devoted to espionage and its detection. It is my belief that there should be established at once a separate bureau, attached, if possible to the War Department, and that all the energies of its operatives should be directed to the discovery, observation and restraint of foreign spies. Such a system exists in one form or another in every country in Europe.

"Lastly, of course, we must have punitive legislation. As I have said, it may not be very effective as a deterrent, but with the enforcement of a strict policy of secrecy and with the aid of an active and well developel system of counter espionage, there ought to be some virtue in a drastic and thoroughgoing set of legislative measures. We cannot afford to allow crimes against the safety of the nation to go unwhipped of justice. At present our laws dealing with espionage are woefully deficient, they are unsound in principle and not nearly broad enough. The sections dealing with obtaining information concerning national defense make no distinction between the procurement of such information by an alien spy in the employ of a foreign Government and the betrayal of such secrets by an American citizen or official to whom they have been intrusted. There is a great moral and ethical distinction between the two acts. When committed by an alien spy it is espionage; when perpetrated by a national it is treason and should be punished as such.

Stern Repression Necessary

"Our legislation fails entirely to protect the secrets, documents and archives of the Department of State and the factories, mines, railroads and other privately owned properties which in time of war would be most intimately connected with the national defense. Without some comprehensive system for the protection of our industrial auxiliaries of national defense, the nation will always be vulnerable. If a modern, up-to-date system of espionage is to be able to destroy or entice workmen from our privately owned ammunition plants and from our copper mines. and to foment strikes and industrial disorders on our railroads and to cripple our means of communication, we shall be utterly at the mercy of a foreign enemy, no matter how strong or well protected from secret scrutiny may be the actual military and naval arms of the Government.

"Of course, any estimate of the extent to which foreign espionage is carried on in the United States today must be more or less a matter of conjecture, but that it exists is absolutely certain. We have the authority of the President that spies have invaded even our affairs in government. There are still some people who think the peril is negligible, just as these same persons insist that military and naval resources are unnecessary to defend our territory from outside aggression and to uphold our national rights and honor. Others are willing to believe the most extravagant reports that there are actually in this country today organized alien forces ready at a word from a foreign chancellory to spring to arms and capture our principal cities.

"Between the two there is a sane middle ground, which I believe most thoughtful Americans take. Personally I am convinced of the presence here of numerous foreign agents, organized and directed with more or less system toward the discovery of all-important facts relating to political, industrial, naval and military conditions in the United States. You have only to read the papers to learn every now and again that some foreigner has been arrested with plans of our defense in his pocket, or of the mysterious disappearance of a secret naval code or of plans for the wiring of some great battleship. And how many such incidents are hushed up and go unreported?"

Official Negligence a Menace

In this connection we ought to have a law making negligence in permitting such secrets to fall into the possession of unauthorized persons a crime. An official or employe of the United States should be held to a more strict accountability than that merely for positive wrongdoing or breach of trust. Such an official should be charged affirmatively with the safety of the secrets or properties committed to his care. He must exercise the highest degree of diligence for their protection and his failure so to do should be punished as a crime. We have no right to allow our national interests to suffer by laxity and negligence any more than by positive treachery. It should also be made criminal for any person within the United States to have knowledge or reasonable grounds for believing espionage is taking place and not to report it immediately to the proper authorities.

"I do not wish to be an alarmist, but we can judge of the present and of the future only by studying the past. It is known that for example, the Prussian invasion and the defeat of Sadowa were planned two years in advance of the war by Stieber, the famous chief of the German secret service and the arch exponent of modern espionage. He did the same thing in France in 1868, when thousands of secret agents were placed at fixed posts throughout the country and periodically inspected and supervised by itinerant secret service officers, until everything was ready for successful invasion of France, which resulted in the capitulation of Paris and the creation of the German empire."

Effect of War Upon the Monroe Doctrine

May Strengthen, Not Weaken It

While Washington Warned Against Permanent Entangling Alliances With Foreign Nations, He Specifically Declared Temporary Alliances for Definite Defense Ends Might Be Wise.

By Sterling E. Edmunds,

Lecturer on International Law, St. Louis University Law School.

IN his address to Congress April 2, asking a recognition of a state of war as existing between the United States and Germany, President Wilson said:

"It will involve the utmost practicable co-operation in counsel and action with the Governments now at war with Germany and, as incident to that, the extension to those Governments of the most liberal financial credits, in order that our resources may, so far as possible, be added to theirs."

The Berlin Tageblatt condoles with us on this "proclamation of the policy of imperialism," saying:

"It means the end of the Monroe Doctrine. It means the end of the policy of avoiding entangling alliance, which, since the days of Washington, has been an article of faith."

Former Secretary Bryan is equally horrified.

"If, after all," he says, "we must have a war, I would rather wait and have a war of our own; one that would be our own war, in which we would have something to say about when to commence, when to get through, and the terms of peace. God forbid that we should entangle ourselves in the quarrels of the Old World."

War May Strengthen Doctrine.

If the Berlin Tageblatt and Bryan are sincere, they have wholly misread the Monroe Doctrine and equally fail to understand Washington's warning. The Monroe Doctrine in essence is a declaration to the world that the United States will forbid by arms if necessary all oppressions of American states by foreign states, and all acquisition of territory from them by conquest or otherwise. It is not a piece of idealism, but it is founded solely in consideration of our own safety. Its strength lies only in our physical power to maintain it. Since our entrance into the war will at once immensely augment our prepared military and naval strength, it is difficult to understand how the results can be otherwise than to strengthen the doctrine correspondingly.

The Monroe Doctrine had its origin in our fear of aggressions on the part of the absolute monarchs of Europe. It is conceivable that the end of the Monroe Doctrine's usefulness may come with the overthrow of the imperial institutions of Germany and Austria, and the democratization of Europe; it is not conceivable, however, that the Monroe Doctrine is weakened as our military strength increases. Since Germany is known long to have coveted territory in the Americas, it might even be asserted that our co-operation to defeat the Hohenzollerns is, to that extent, a vindication of the Monroe Doctrine.

A Traditional Policy.

The deep disapproval of "entangling alliances," as a traditional policy of the United States, dates back to 1793, when England declared war on France, following the execution of Louis XVI, and France demanded that we join her as an ally under the treaty of 1778. The United States had no interests in the war and did not wish to enter it. Finally the treaty of alliance was declared to have been nullified by French violations of its provisions.

The farewell address of Washington in 1796 emphasized the unwisdom of placing the United States in such position in the future, through "permanent alliances" requiring it to go to war without cause on its own part. But he qualified the warning, saying:

"Taking care always to keep ourselves by suitable establishments on a respectable defensive posture, we can safely trust to temporary alliances for extraordinary emergencies."

The present war is distinctly our war, our citizens have been murdered by the score and our essential rights as a sovereign state are denied. Nothing is plainer than that the present situation is such a one as Washington points out where "we can safely trust to temporary alliances." It must be remembered, however, that while the President, as Commander in Chief of the army and navy, has in war the sole power in the disposition of our forces; that while he can come to understandings with the entente Governments with respect to joint operations, the Senate or Congress must determine all international agreements in the nature of treaties. The President cannot make a treaty of alliance, though he can execute military plans contemplating joint action, and the like.

Requires Consent of Congress.

It would likewise require the consent of Congress to bind us to partnership in the commercial war on the central Powers after the war, as also with respect to concluding peace only in common with the entente Powers. Yet the President's war powers are very large, and through protocols and executive agreements he can conclude alone many understandings contemplating only the period of the war.

It cannot be doubted that from the time the United States enters the war it will ever thereafter play a larger part in world affairs; in fact, the entente group may then be considered the nucleus out of which an ultimate world organization of states will develop, looking to the preservation of peace after the manner of the Presi-

JEFFERSON, TOO, WAS READY FOR ENGLISH DEFENSIVE ALLIANCE

THAT Thomas Jefferson was not opposed to a permanent alliance with England, under certain contingencies, is revealed in his letter to Robert Livingston during his presidency, in April, 1802, when, discussing the rumored transfer of Louisiana from Spain to France, he wrote:

*"The day that France takes possession of New Orleans * * * seals the union of two nations, who, in conjunction, can maintain exclusive possession of the ocean. From that moment we must marry ourselves to the British fleet and nation."*

Again as late as 1823, replying to President Monroe's request for advice on the proposition of the British Foreign Minister, Canning, for a jointly-proclaimed Monroe Doctrine, Jefferson promptly approved, saying that if war came, it would be our war of American liberty against European despotism.

"Great Britain," he wrote, "is the nation that can do us the most harm of any one or all on earth; and with her on our side we need not fear the whole world. With her, then, we should most sedulously cherish a cordial friendship; and nothing would tend more to knit our affections than to be fighting once more side by side in the same cause."

Jefferson made it plain, however, that he would accept the co-operation of a foreign Power in war only where the safety and welfare of this country were menaced; he reprobated as positively as Washington engaging in European wars which did not concern us directly. — STERLING E. EDMUNDS.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

A Stirring American Hymn.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

A daughter of Julia Ward Howe has lately told the story of that work by which her mother won high fame and aided in kindling to intenser heat the fires of patriotism in our land half a century ago by her "Battle Hymn of the Republic." A part of that story has to do with the way in which the Battle Hymn sung its way first in our own land and later in other countries in its original English form and in translations into other tongues, companioned by the stirring tune to whose music it was at first composed. The latest example cited in this little volume is in the statement that an English lady has had printed and distributed through the Y. M. C. A. a number of copies of this hymn to British soldiers in the present European war, "somewhere in France."

As our nation is facing the inevitable in the awful struggle of democracy with absolutism what better rallying cry can be adopted for army and navy than this same Battle Hymn? It records the high water mark of patriotism and faith in the god of battles. As Senator Hoar pointed out, it is our true national anthem, compared with which England's national anthem is "cheap and vulgar." Wedded to a tune hardly less stirring than the "Marseillaise," there is in it nothing of the fierce, revengeful spirit that inspired France's tragic revolution. But there is in the opening lines and others that follow a splendid appeal to a Higher Power that will surely one day bring low the pride of that despot who thought to bring the world under his feet.

Mine eyes have seen the glory of the coming of the Lord;
He is trampling out the vintage where the grapes of wrath are stored;
He hath loosed the fateful lightning of his terrible swift sword
His truth is marching on.

What better way to break the power of Germany's autocrat than to put the spirit of that hymn into those who oppose him. F. H.

Wear the Flag on Easter.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

What a glorious sight it would be if everyone on Easter would carry or wear our national flag. Its bright, beautiful colors would enhance the beauty of flowers and brilliant-hued costumes in the Easter parade, and brighten the plainer garb of the men. American patriots, show your colors!

Monks' Mound.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

In view of the recent reintroduction into the Illinois Legislature of the bill to purchase historic Monks' Mound, or Cahokia Mound, as some call it, it seems timely to call public attention to what has been said by the Government concerning this ancient edifice. In the "Handbook of American Indians," published by the Bureau of American Ethnology of the Smithsonian Institution, occurs the following excellent descriptive article:

"Cahokia Mound is the largest prehistoric artificial earthwork in the United States, and is situated in Madison County, Ill., in what is known as the American Bottom, about six miles east of St. Louis, Mo., and in plain view of the railroads entering that city from the east. Before their partial destruction by the plow the principal mound was surrounded by an extensive group, numbering 45 mounds or pyramids, besides a great number of small artificial elevations. The name Cahokia is that of a tribe which formerly occupied a neighboring village of the same name. In from the tumulus is a quadrangular pyramid with an apron, or terrace, extending from the south side. The dimensions are as follows: The base north and south, 998 feet; east to west, 721 feet; height, 99 feet; height of lower terrace, 30 feet; outward extent of terrace about 200 feet, width about 500 feet The area of the base of the mound is estimated at about 16 acres. On the west side, some 30 feet above the first terrace, there was a second slight terrace, now scarcely distinguishable. Omitting the lower terrace and counting the diameters of the base as 721 and 798 feet, and the height as 99 feet, without regard to the upper level, the contents somewhat exceed 18,690,0000 cubic feet. Adding the terrace, 3,000,000 cubic feet, the total contents amount to 21,690,000 cubic feet. According to the usual method of calculation it would have required the labor of 1000 persons for four and three-quarters years, with the means that prehistoric Indians had at hand, to build Cahokia Mound. The places from which the earth was taken are apparent from the depressions surrounding the mound."

OUR WAR WORK.

Proposals to send men at once to the firing lines in Europe and to plunge into spectacular war stunts are plentiful, but the test of utility should be rigidly applied to all of them.

Our immediate work is laid out for us by the conditions of the war. Our men are probably not needed now on any of the fronts. Certainly none but highly trained men are wanted. More men may be needed before the war is over, so that our first duty is to prepare a great army for future contingencies and prepare and equip it thoroughly for modern warfare.

It might be desirable to send a small force of regulars to France for moral effect, but that is yet to be determined. There is no hurry.

On the other hand, the navy can co-operate effectively with the British and French navies in policing the seas and dealing with raiders and submarines. We should do our full part in naval work of this kind.

For the rest, our most useful work is that of sending supplies needed by the armies in the field. We must see that ample food and war materials actually get to England and France. We must see that they do not lack either money or supplies. It is our business to aid effectively in keeping sea lanes to England and France open and to help supply the ships needed for transportation of supplies.

There is not much glory or thrill in playing the part of a war supply commissioner, but it makes up in practical usefulness and effectiveness what it lacks in showiness. We know that with enough men to hold the lines and do the work at the front, the conditions of victory lie in ample supplies to sustain man power and keep the guns going.

In the art of organizing and conducting business we have few equals and no superiors. We can fight as well as any people and we may have fighting to do before the war ends, but our best immediate service is to give the allies the benefit of our business ability and vast material resources.

In the final stroke the great navy we shall build and the army we shall train may be decisive factors—they may give the coup de grace to our enemies—but we may do much to hasten the stroke by using sound judgment as to our part of the work at this stage of the war.

REDUCED COST OF DYING.

The joke that has come down to us from the seventeenth century about the man who sticks around to save funeral expenses will have to be shelved. It is cheaper now to have a first-class funeral than to stick around.

It is partly due to the high cost of living and partly to the low cost of dying. Or the lower cost of dying, at least. We all know about the high cost of living. We have it from the undertakers that funerals are coming down. They had a meeting over at Alton the other day and discussed the latest styles in obsequies. Their dictum was that simplicity will be the keynote of this season's funerals. There will, to be sure, be two kinds of simplicity, regular and elegant, but ostentation will be outre.

For this we are truly grateful. It deprives some of us of the classical excuse for sticking around, but there is consolation in the reflection that our going will be less a liability and more an asset than ever before.

It is not to be supposed that expensive funerals will go altogether out of fashion. Undertakers will still keep a few of these on hand. It is a well-known fact that possessors of wealth cannot take it with them and the undertakers are still willing to keep peace among the heirs by taking all that is left. But the average citizen will be able to go hence at least as cheaply as he will be able to stay here.

NO INJURY TO GERMANS.

It was hardly necessary for Secretary Tumulty, in behalf of the President, to reassure the Mayors of several New Jersey cities with regard to the treatment of Germans in this country. Hatred and persecution are not in the blood and spirit of America.

Nevertheless, the formal assurance that German subjects in this country will be secure in their liberty and property, if they conduct themselves properly, will set at rest fears of contrary action.

Americans do not hate Germans—they do not want to injure them. They hate only the wrongs that the German Government has done and the demonstrated methods of purpose of the German military autocracy. Americans everywhere should exercise the tolerance and good will towards Germans living in America which becomes those who fight for the liberty and security of all peoples.

MAKING ASSETS OF LIABILITIES.

If the high cost of living siege lasts long enough, we may discover that most of our community liabilities are in reality assets. Much progress along this line already has been made.

Next week there will be a meeting of cut-over land owners in New Orleans. These men will discuss the best means of placing these lands under cultivation, which, in fact, means the best method of getting them into the hands of small farm owners or, in larger tracts, in the hands of cattle raisers. For a long time these lands have been considered in the nature of a liability for the community in which they were situated because the high cost of clearing and the lack of a market appeared to make small farming an impossibility. Now comes the high price of meat, the Federal farm banks and the general advance in the knowledge of farming, and the land owners see a possibility of disposing of these tracts to the advantage of themselves and the future owners. Back of this is the fact that methods have been found of raising cattle in the South and of farming cut-over lands, and the high cost of living makes it worth while to carry these methods out. This movement, when completed, will put 100,000,000 acres under the plow.

In Oklahoma the State Board of Agriculture announces that 4 per cent more land is under cultivation this year than ever before in that State. This was so-called waste land that the high prices have induced farmers to put under the plow.

In Texas Gov. Ferguson has vetoed the jackrabbit bounty law, giving as his reason that these rabbits are needed as meat and it is worth while to kill them now for that purpose.

In Kansas it has been the inclination to permit winter-killed wheat fields in the western part of the State to remain idle until wheat planting season again. But this year the dry country forage crops are being planted.

From one end of the country to the other come reports of tin-can dumps that are being made into gardens. Economy and efficiency are advancing.

FOUR BIG SUFFRAGE STRIDES.

With war and alarums of war glutting the news columns, but scant attention has been paid to the remarkable strides made by the woman's suffrage movement in the past few weeks—undoubtedly the greatest steps forward in the history of the agitation.

Since the middle of March four great European countries have gone on record in favor of equalizing the franchise—Great Britain, Russia, France and Italy. Actual legislation putting the reform into effect has not yet been accomplished, but so well have the women wrought during the great war that the bitterest foes of suffrage have become its supporters and there will be little or no opposition when the time arrives for final action. This is assured by preliminary steps taken by the Governments of the four countries.

The opposition of conservative England to the movement broke into fragments when former Premier Asquith, the bitterest foe to suffrage in Europe, and Lloyd George, the present Premier, went over whole-heartedly to the women's camp. The House of Commons followed their lead and by an overwhelming majority agreed that the time had come to give the vote to the women.

In France the Parliamentary Committee on Suffrage has gone unanimously in favor of giving women the right at once to vote in municipal elections and to hold office and it has been practically agreed to confer full franchise rights on the women after the war. Owing to the excellent work done by the women in the past two distressful years, France greets the chance of rewarding them with enthusiasm.

The provisional rulers of Russia, too, have promised their support of the movement. While no steps will be taken until the first constitutional Parliament meets, it is almost assured that the part played by women in the revolution that overthrew the Romanoffs will gain them the equality of franchise.

In Italy a bill has been introduced in Parliament providing for the absolute equality of sexes in the matter of property rights. The measure was brought up by the Minister of Justice, speaking for the Government, and there is no doubt, according to the Italian newspapers, that the bill will be passed. It is regarded as the first step toward giving the vote to women, a move which would meet with slight opposition in that country.

GERARD ON WILSON.

In bright contrast with the utterances of certain disgruntled men who have been entrusted with responsible positions in the larger affairs of the country is former Ambassador Gerard's tribute to the character and ability of the Chief Executive. Gerard has been placed so that perhaps better than any other American he has understood all the difficulties that have arisen in our diplomatic intercourse with Germany. As the official mouthpiece of the United States at Berlin he knew at first hand what both Governments were trying to do; he had splendid facilities for getting at the point of view of each. After asserting that the President made every possible move to preserve peace, Gerard says:

> Nobody knows better than I do the masterful efforts the President made. His work in this connection will show like silver in the dark pages of this dreadful war. The President and his Cabinet have been doing a wonderful work to prepare, but he always works, whether for peace or for war, without the accompaniment of a brass band.

Mr. Gerard's appreciation comes with all the better grace that he himself has been exonerated of German accusations of pernicious activity in his office. Foreign Secretary Zimmermann has branded the charges as untrue. Gerard's successful handling of his tremendously difficult and delicate responsibilities as Ambassador proves his caliber.

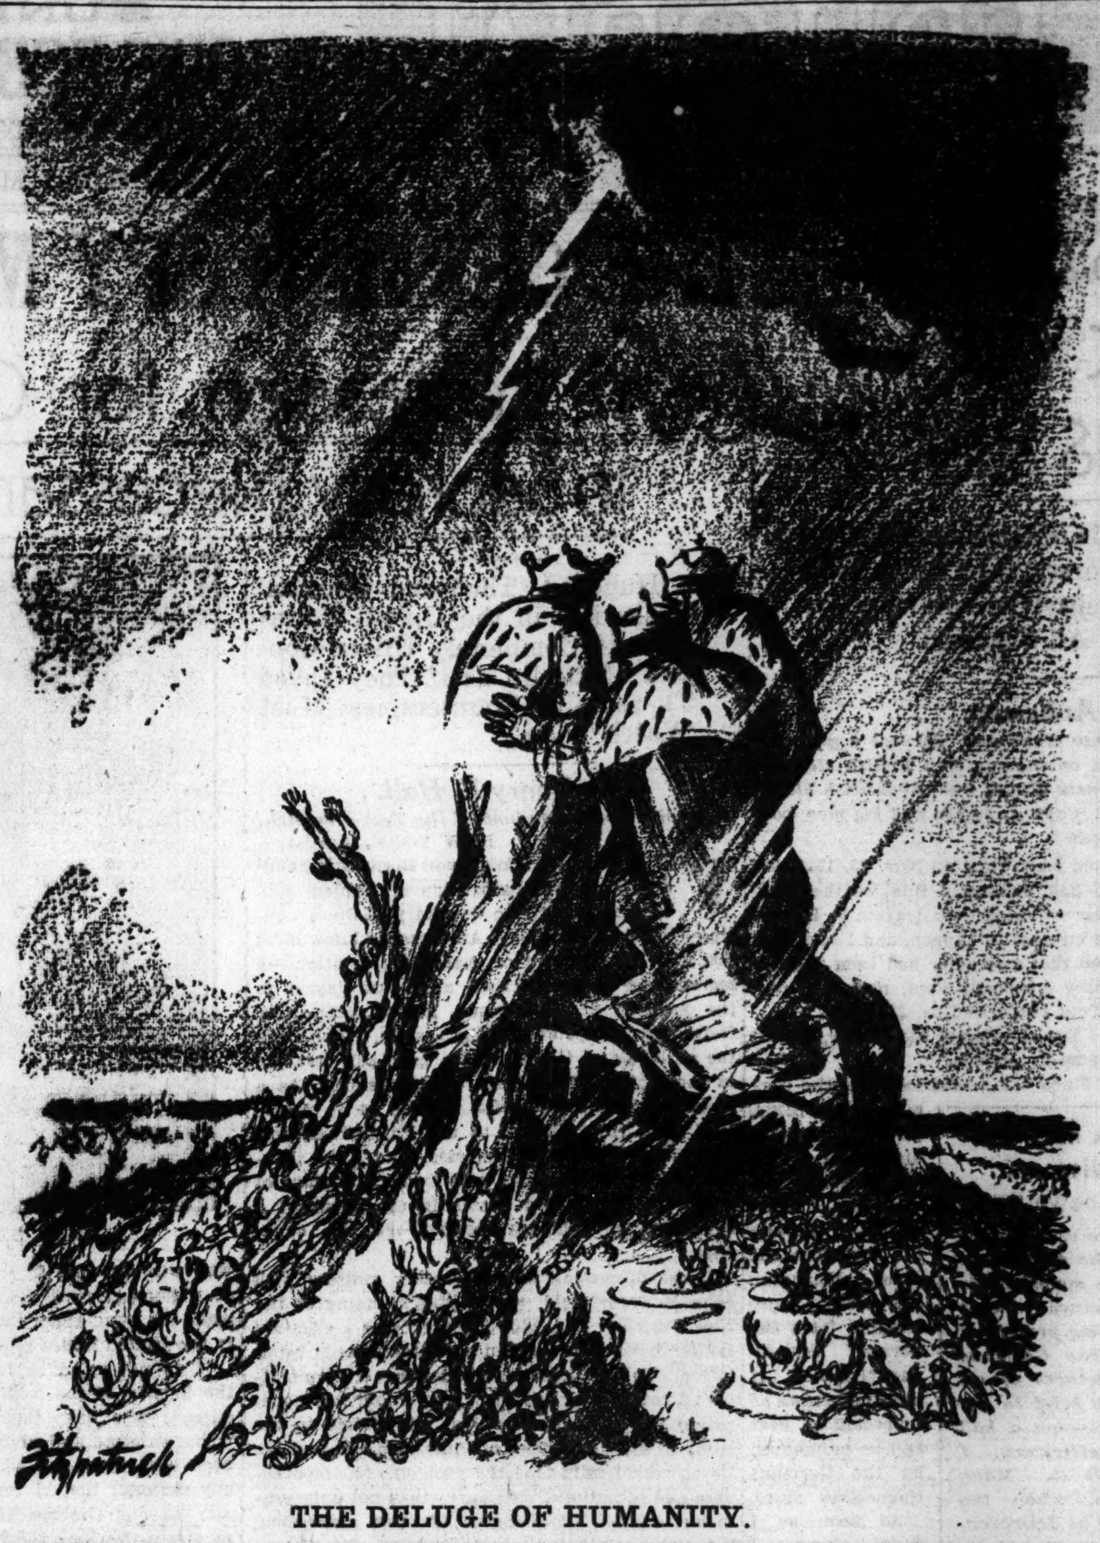
THE NEGRO EXODUS.

The great exodus of negro laborers from the South to the East and North has already brought difficulties to the states which have offered them asylum. It is estimated that 25,000 negroes have entered New York City within the last few months, while a careful census shows an increased negro population of 10,000 in Newark. Other cities in the great industrial centers of the country are having the same experience.

There is no doubt that increased wages for unskilled labor as a consequence of the enormous growth of munitions manufacture is mainly responsible. But those districts were already filled with a more or less unstable industrial population. Any sharp decline of business means that to the hosts ordinarily thrown out of employment must be added the hordes of newcomers.

Finding suitable places for the immigrants to live is at present a harder task than finding work for them in the East. Moreover, they have brought with them many dependents. New orphanages and hospitals are necessary in the ghettoes which have already sprung up for their reception.

From every point of view the situation is full of social and economic dangers. The South has begun to worry over a prospective shortage in the labor which is essential to its own industrial welfare. If the hegira continues unabated, it may conceivably put new and even more difficult obstacles in the way of solving the distracting race problem instead of furnishing the rapid solution of it which optimists predicted when it began, several months ago.



THE DELUGE OF HUMANITY.

JUST A MINUTE

Written for the Post-Dispatch
By Clark McAdams

"THEY ALSO SERVE, ..."

"HO-LO, Ho-lo!
Our rugged hills
Shall see our ships no more.—
The green pine tree
Of our countree
Shall see our ships no more!
We Vikings bold,
Ho-lo, Ho-lo!
Ply a strong and fearless oar!
Ho-lo, Ho-lo!
We Vikings bold
Shall see our lands no more,
Ho-lo, Ho-lo!
Shall see our lands no more!"
And a woman watched with shaded eyes,
The rhythmic oar-line fall and rise,—
And the sun went down—still she heard the song
That travelled the great wide sea along,
And into her sleep the ditty wore,
"Ho-lo, Ho-lo!—our lands no more,
Ho-lo——Ho-lo!— —no more!—"

. . . .

On one side stood the English,
Their mail and banners flashing bright
When the sun peeped from the stormy sky.—
And to the south the Normans ranged.
Hemmed in by the sea
That kissed the fatal sands of Hastings.

Out of the Norman lines
Advanced a solitary warrior,
His palfrey prancing with arched neck.
The knight bared his sword
And tossed it jocundly into the air,
Singing a rollicking song.
"Rah-la! for the war,
The merry war.—
Rah-la! for the foe and friend,—
Brave Roland, brave Roland.—
Rah-la! for the war,
Rah-la! for the war!
Brave Roland is our King!"
On Hastings' groaning field
At the dead of night,
A woman passed between the dying,
And by the light of a flaming torch
Spied Harold, wounded unto death!

. . . .

He was her son, as young, as fair,
With his father's brow, and the golden hair.—
And the light that shown in his youthful eye
Was mild as a star in the morning sky.
But they needed men—and he went along
With the banners and drums and the trooping song,
Defending a rose of the tender vine
That bled on the Mason and Dixon line!

Two years wore on, and the day before
The siege of Appomattox fell,
His heart was stopped by the carnal gore
Of a well-aimed foeman's shell!
And over the hills,
Across the rills.—
Over the dead
The message sped.—
Through the storm and dark
Raced the fateful spark,
Bearing her word, who had starved and cried,
How bravely her youngest son had died!

. . . .

On Dover's cliffs he spread his sails,
Riding the course of the seven gales.—
He dipped and curled
O'er the spinning world,
And followed the sunbeam's trails!

Scaling the peaks of clouds in air,
The Matterhorn of the sky to dare!
He reigned alone
On a stellar throne,
Poised like an eagle monarch there!

Pouncing onto a soaring flock,
A warp, a veer, a sudden shock,
Then sheer descent
From the firmament
To the bed of the ocean's rock!
A dead man floating silently
Upon a crimson, fading sea—
And on the shore
The constant roar,
Drowning a woman's ecstasy.

ABOUT OUR MOTIVES.

NEITHER Germany nor anyone sympathizing with her is going to believe that our motives at this time are what the President declares them to be. We can only publish our white book and hope to wage war with such success that it shall still be in circulation when the war is over.

We must not expect anything else. We have been at war before, and therefore know something of its unfortunate effects upon the minds of men. Right clearly lies for us all upon the side of those with whom we sympathize in the conflict. War is essentially reason dethroned. We have left only our emotions. That calm dispassion in which we see all things clearly in peace is denied us in war. We are left without vision, and thus express only what we feel.

Let us, then, not demand of anyone that he be reasonable, or expect that in debate we can substitute for anyone's counter opinion our own. It has never been done since the world began, and more breath has been wasted trying to do it than has been knocked out of human breasts in battle. War is frenzy. One must make up a list of one's motives and duly proclaim them before the action. Beyond that the less said of them the better. Europe has gotten nowhere debating its motives. They remain as incredible to the enemy as they were at the beginning. One is only to one's self sincere—the rest are sophists.

This is the great weakness of war—the thing which shall ultimately be its destruction. Our emotions are dangerous. Anything that arouses them must be put down. We want to think, and we are finally going to have that right.

We can't think and feel at the same time.

ODE TO AN OLD AUTOMOBILE.

MY auto, 'tis of thee,
Short cut to poverty—
Of thee I chant.
I blew a pile of dough
On you two years ago,
And now you refuse to go,
Or won't, or can't.

Through town and country side
You are my joy and pride,
A happy day.
I loved thy gaudy hue,
Thy nice white tires so new,
But now you're down and out for true
In every way.

To thee, old rattle box,
Come many bumps and knocks,
For thee I grieve.
Badly thy top is torn,
Frayed are thy seats and worn,
The whooping cough affects your horn,
I do believe.

Thy perfume swells the breeze,
And good folks choke and sneeze,
While we pass by.
I paid for thee a price,
'Twould buy a mansion twice,
Now everybody's yelling "ice!"

FUN FOR THE CHILDREN.

VIOLET.—Amusement for a children's lawn party may be taken from a scheme made by Peter the Great, who had in his pleasure grounds animal groups that illustrated Aesop's fables; and on posts nearby the stories of these creatures, graven on pieces of tin, were fastened. To play the game, animal figures should be placed in cunning nooks and corners. The children are told that so many fables have been illustrated and are given cards with numbered spaces on them. They have to discover each quaint scene, name it and write a title down. It is only necessary to lay in a stock of miniature animals made of wood for the purpose, or the little water animals would answer very well. In setting such a fable as the Hare and the Tortoise the word Goal should be written or painted on a tiny sign-post, with the plodding tortoise just below it, the hare at a distance. The Travelers and the Bear may be illustrated by an appeal to the nursery for the figures of the two men who appear in the fable. The Frogs, asking for a King, might show a row of these green-coated little creatures seated upon the log, for which they had such contempt, watching the approach of King Stork. The Crow and the Pitcher, the Fox and the Grapes, the Lion and the Mouse, the Fox and the Crow, the Frog and the Ox, the Wolf and the Kid can be illustrated with the greatest ease. A part of the charm of arranging such a competitive amusement lies in the fact that delicious folk-tales may be discovered by a dip into the stories of other lands; it is possible to set scenes that are in themselves laughable. In arranging such an amusement, cards of invitation should state the character of the illustrations for which the children will have to search. The fables of Aesop alone give splendid opportunity, but other fables and folk-tales may be used. A prize should always be offered for the largest number of correct solutions and another for the cleverest original interpretation of any scene when the finder does not know the real story. Another novelty which children will appreciate is the illustration of proverbs. For these, besides figures, other simple accessories are needed; the proverbs are not nearly so easy to "find" as the illustrated fables. Any amount of cleverness and ingenuity may be displayed in arranging these. A tiny lane delicately made with hedges on either side: "It's a long lane that has no turning." Two toy birds on a bush, a third on the hand of a miniature figure set below: "A bird in the hand is worth two in the bush." A toy vane with a pile of straws close by: "Straws tell which way the wind blows." An elaborate bridge made of children's stone bricks may span a miniature lake or river made with the aid of lids of tins, moss, sprigs of plants, etc.: "Never attempt to cross a bridge until you reach it." A little heap of brass filings gleaming among the earth and rubbish of a tiny mound: "All that glitters is not gold." A group of toy birds pecking at one with different plumage: "Birds of a feather flock together."

The IVORY CHILD

BY H. RIDER HAGGARD

Glad enough were we to reach it, since all three of us were quite tired out with our terrible night journey and the anxious emotions that we had undergone. Indeed, after we had eaten we lay down and I rejoiced to see that, notwithstanding the state of mental excitement into which the discovery of his wife had plunged him, Ragnall was the first of us to fall asleep.

About 5 o'clock we were awakened by a messenger from Harut, who requested our attendance on important business at a kind of meeting house which stood at a little distance on an open place, where the White Kendah bartered produce. Here we found Harut and about 20 of the headmen seated in the shade of a thatched roof, while behind them, at a respectable distance, stood quite a hundred of the White Kendah. Most of these, however, were women and children, for as I have said the greater part of the male population was absent from the town because of the commencement of the harvest.

We were conducted to chairs, or rather stools, of honor, and when we two had seated ourselves, Hans taking his stand behind us, Harut rose and informed us that an embassy had arrived from the Black Kendah which was about to be admitted.

Presently they came, five of them, great, truculent-looking fellows of a surprising blackness, unarmed, for they had not been allowed to bring their weapons into the town, but adorned with the usual silver chains across their breasts to show their rank, and other savage finery. In the man who was their leader I recognized one of those messengers who had accosted us when first we entered their territory on our way from the south, before that fight in which I was taken prisoner. Stepping forward and addressing himself to Harut, he said:

"A while ago, O Prophet of the Child, I, the messenger of the god Jana, speaking through the mouth of Simba, the King, gave to you and your brother, Marut, a certain warning to which you did not listen. Now Jana has Marut, and again I come to warn you, Harut."

"If I remember right," interrupted Harut blandly, "I think that on that occasion two of you delivered the message and that the Child marked one of you upon the brow. If Jana has my brother, say, where is yours?"

"We warned you," went on the messenger, "and you cursed us in the name of the Child."

"Yes," interrupted Harut again, "we cursed you with three curses. The first was the curse of heaven by storm or drouth, which has fallen upon you. The second was the curse of famine, which is falling upon you; and the third was the curse of war, which is yet to fall on you."

"It is of war that we come to speak," replied the messenger, diplomatically avoiding the other two topics, which perhaps he found it awkward to discuss.

"That is foolish of you," replied the bland Harut, "seeing that the other day you matched yourselves against us with but small success. Many of you were killed, but only a few of us, and the white Lord whom you took captive escaped out of your hands and from the tusks of Jana, who, I think, now lacks an eye. If he is a god, how comes it that he lacks an eye and could not kill an unarmed white man?"

"Let Jana answer for himself, as he will do ere long, O Harut. Meanwhile these are the words of Jana, spoken through the mouth of Simba the King: The Child has destroyed my harvest and therefore I demand this of the people of the Child—that they give me three-fourths of their harvest, reaping the same and delivering it on the south bank of the River Tava. That they give me the two white Lords to be sacrificed to me. That they give the white lady who is Guardian of the Child to be a wife of Simba the King, and with her a hundred virgins of your people. That the image of the Child be brought to the banks of the River Tava, there to make obeisance to the god Jana in the presence of his priests and Simba the King. These are the demands of Jana, spoken through the mouth of Simba the King."

Watching, I saw a thrill of horror shake the forms of Harut and of all those with him as the full meaning of these, to them most impious requests sank into their minds. But he only asked very quietly:

"And if we refuse the demands, what then?"

"Then," shouted the messenger, insolently, "then Jana declares war upon you, the last war of all, war till every one of your men be dead and the Child you worship is burnt to gray ashes with fire. War till your women are taken as slaves and the corn which you refuse is stored in our grain pits and your land is waste and your name forgotten. Already the hosts of Jana are gathered and the trumpet of Jana calls them to the fight. Tomorrow or the next day they advance upon you, and ere the moon is full not one of you will be left to look upon her."

Harut rose, and walking from under the shed, turned his back upon the envoys and stared at the distant line of gray mountains which stood out far away against the sky. Out of curiosity I followed him and observed that these mountains were no longer visible. Where they had been was nothing but a line of black and heavy clouds. After looking for a while he returned and, addressing the envoys, said quite casually:

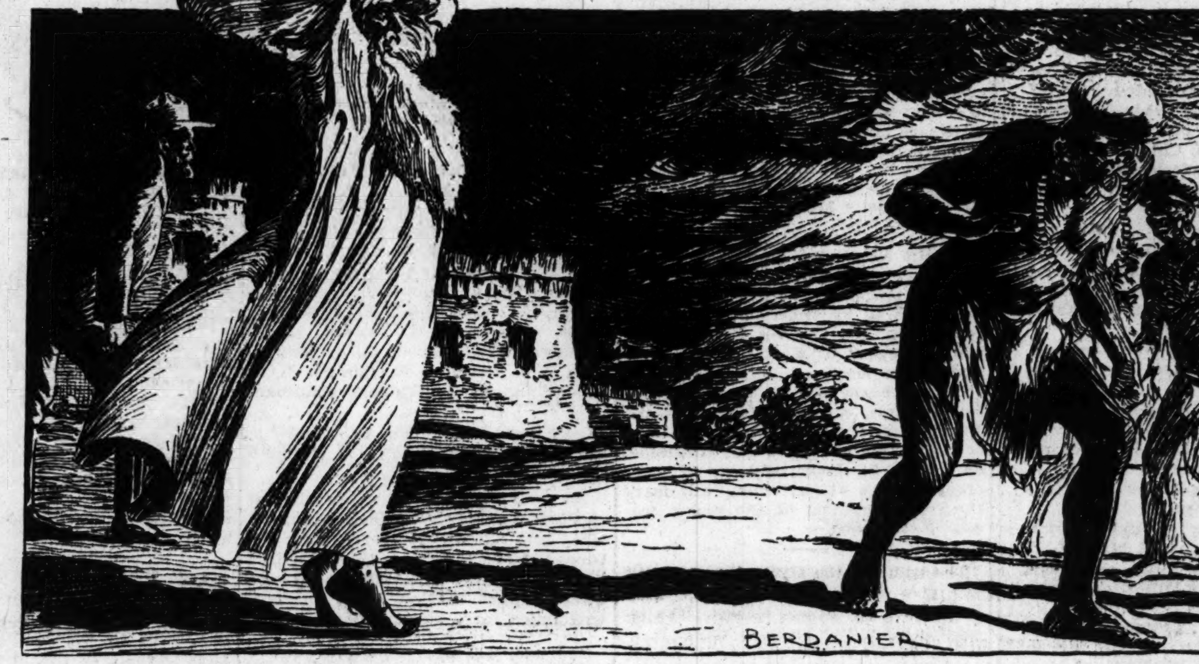
"If you will be advised by me, friends, you will ride hard for the river. There is such a rain upon the mountains as I have never seen before, and you will be fortunate if you cross it before the flood comes down, the greatest flood that has happened in our day."

This intelligence seemed to disturb the messengers, for they, too, stepped out of the shed and stared at the mountains, muttering to each other something that I could not understand. Then they returned and with a fine appearance of indifference demanded an immediate answer to their challenge.

"Can you not guess it?" asked Harut. Then changing his tone he drew himself to his full height and thundered out at them: "Get back to your evil spirit of a god that hides in the shape of a beast of the forest and to his slave who calls himself a King, and say to them: "Thus speaks the Child to his rebellious servants, the Black Kendah dogs: Swim my river when you can, which will not be yet, and come up against me when you will; for whenever you come I shall be ready for you. You are already dead, O Jana. You are already dead, O Simba the slave. You are scattered and lost, O dogs of the Black Kendah, and the home of such of you as remain shall be far away in a barren land, where you must dig deep for water and live upon the wild game, because there little corn will grow. Now begone, and swiftly, lest you stop here forever."

So they turned and went, leaving me full of admiration at the histrionic powers of Harut.

I must add, however, that being without doubt a keen observer of the weather conditions of the neighborhood, he was right about the rain upon the mountains, which, by the way, never extended to the territory of the People of the Child. As we heard afterwards, the flood came down just as the envoys reached the river; indeed, one of them was drowned in attempting its crossing, and for 14 days after this it remained impassable to an army.



"Get back to your evil spirit of a god that hides in the shape of a beast of the forest and to his slave who calls himself a king." . . .

That very evening we began our preparations to meet an attack which was now inevitable. Putting aside the supposed rival powers of the tribal divinities worshiped under the names of the Child and Jana, which, while they added a kind of Homeric interest to the contest, could, we felt, scarcely affect an issue that must be decided with cold steel and other mortal weapons, the position of the White Kendah was serious indeed. As I think I have said, in all they did not number more than about 2000 men between the ages of 20 and 55, or, including lads between 14 and 20 and old men still able-bodied between 55 and 70, say 2700 capable of some sort of martial service. To these might be added something under 2000 women, since among this dwindling folk, oddly enough, from causes that I never ascertained, the males outnumbered the females, which accounted for their marriage customs that were, by comparison with those of most African peoples, monogamous. At any rate, only the rich among them had more than one wife, while the poor or otherwise ineligible often had none at all, since intermarriage with other races and above all with the Black Kendah dwelling beyond the river was so strictly taboo that it was punishable with death or expulsion.

Against this little band the Black Kendah could bring up 20,000 men, besides boys and aged persons, who, with the women, would probably be left to defend their own country, that is, not less than 10 to 1. Moreover, all of these enemies would be fighting with the courage of despair, since quite three-fourths of their crops and many of their cattle and sheep had been destroyed by the terrific hailburst that I have described. Therefore, since no other corn was available in the surrounding land, where they dwelt along incircled by deserts, either they must capture that of the White Kendah or suffer terribly from starvation until a year later when another harvest ripened.

The only points I could see in favor of the People of the Child were that they would fight on the vantage ground of their mountain stronghold, a formidable position if properly defended. Also they would have the benefit of the skill and knowledge of Ragnall and myself. Lastly, the enemy must face our rifles. Neither the White nor the Black Kendah, I should say, possessed any guns, except a few antiquated flintlock weapons that the former had captured from some nomadic tribe and kept as curiosities. Why this was the case I do not know, since undoubtedly at times the White Kendah traded in camels and corn with Arabs who wandered as far as the Sudan or Egypt, nomadic tribes to whom even the firearms were known, although perhaps rarely used by them. But so it was, possibly because of some old law or prejudice which forbade their introduction into the country, or mayhap of the difficulty of procuring powder and lead, or for thme reason that they had none to teach them the use of such new-fangled weapons.

Now it will be remembered that on the chance of their proving useful, Ragnall, in addition to our own sporting arms, had brought with him to Africa 50 Snider rifles, with an ample supply of ammunition, the same that I had trouble in passing through the customs at Durban, all of which had arrived safely at the Town of the Child.

Clearly, our first duty was to make the best possible use of this invaluable store. To that end I asked Harut to select 75 of the boldest and most intelligent young men among his people, and to hand them over to me and Hans for instruction in musketry. We had only 50 rifles, but I drilled 75 men, or 50 per cent more, that some might be ready to replace any who fell.

From dawn to dark each day Hans and I worked at trying to convert these Kendah into sharpshooters. It was no easy task, with men, however willing, who till then had never held a gun, especially as I must be very sparing of the ammunition necessary to practice, of which, of course, our supply was limited. Still, we taught them how to take cover, how to fire and to cease from firing at the word of command, also to hold the rifles low and waste no shot. To make marksmen of them was more than I could hope to do under the circumstances.

With the exception of these men nearly the entire male population were working day and night to get in the harvest. This proved a very difficult business, both because some of the crops were scarcely fit and because all the grain had to be carried on camels to be stored in and at the back of the second court of the temple, the only place where it was likely to be safe. Indeed, in the end a great deal was left unreaped. Then the herds of cattle and breeding camels which grazed on the further side of the Holy Mount must be brought into places of safety, glens in the forest on its slope, and forage stacked to feed them. Also it was necessary to provide scouts to keep watch along the banks of the river.

Lastly, the fortifications in the mountain pass required unceasing labor and attention. This was the task of Ragnall, who fortunately, in his youth, before he succeeded unexpectedly to the title, was for some years an officer in the Royal Engineers and therefore thoroughly understood that business. Indeed, he understood it rather too well, since the result of his somewhat complicated and scientific scheme of defense was a little confusing to the simple native mind. However, with the assistance of the priests and of all the women and children who were not engaged in provisioning the Mount, he built wall after wall and redoubt after redoubt, if that is the right word, to say nothing of the shelter trenches he dug and many pitfalls, furnished at the bottom with sharp stakes, which he hollowed out wherever the soil could be easily moved, to discomfit a charging enemy.

Indeed, when I saw the amount of work he had concluded in 10 days, which was not until I joined him on the mountain, I was quite astonished.

About this time a dispute arose as to whether we should attempt to prevent the Black Kendah from crossing the river, which was now running down, a plan that some of the elders favored. At last the controversy was referred to me as head General and I decided against anything of the sort. It seemed to me that our force was too small, and that if I took the riflemen a great deal of ammunition might be expended with poor result. Also, in the event of any reverse or when we were finally driven back, which must happen, there might be difficulty about remounting the camels, our only means of escape from the horsemen, who would possibly gallop us down. Moreover, the Tava had several fords, any one of which might be selected by the enemy. So it was arranged that we should make our first and last stand upon the Holy Mount.

On the fourteenth night from new moon our swift camel scouts, who were posted in relays between the Tava and the Mount, reported that the Black Kendah were gathered in thousands upon the further side of the river, where they were engaged in celebrating magical ceremonies. On the fifteenth night the scouts reported that they were crossing the river, about 5000 horsemen and 15,000 foot soldiers, and that at the head of them marched the huge god-elephant Jana, on which rode Simba the King and a lame priest (evidently my friend whose foot had been injured by the pistol), who acted as a mahout. This part of the story I confess I did not believe, since it seemed to me impossible that anyone could ride upon that mad rogue, Jana. Yet, as subsequent events showed, it was in fact true. I suppose that in certain hands the beast became tame. Or perhaps it was drugged.

Two nights later, for the Black Kendah advanced but slowly, spreading themselves over the country in order to collect such crops as had not been gathered, through lack of time or because they were still unripe, we saw flames and smoke rising from the Town of the Child beneath us, which they had fired. Now we knew that the time of trial had come and until near midnight, men, women and children worked feverishly finishing or trying to finish the fortifications and making every preparation in our power.

Our position was that we held a very strong post, that is, strong against an enemy unprovided with big guns or even firearms, which, as all other possible approaches had been blocked, was only assailable by direct frontal attack from the east. In the pass we had three main lines of defense, one arranged behind the other and separated by distances of a few hundred yards. Our last refuge was furnished by the wall of the temple itself, in the rear of which were camped the whole White Kendah tribe, save a few hundreds who were employed in watching the herds of camels and stock in almost inaccessible positions on the northern slopes of the Mount.

There were perhaps 5000 people of both sexes and every age gathered in this camp, which was so well provided with food and water that it could have stood a siege of several months. If, however, our defenses should be carried there was no possibility of escape, since we learned from our scouts that the Black Kendah, who, by tradition and through spies, were well acquainted with every feature of the country, had detached a party of several thousand men to watch the western road and the slopes of the mountain, in case we should try to break out by that route. The only one remaining, that which ran through the cave of the serpent, we had taken the precaution of blocking up with great stones, lest through it our flank should be turned.

In short, we were rats in a trap and there we must either conquer or die—unless, indeed we chose to surrender, which for most of us would mean a fate worse than death.

CHAPTER XIX.

Allan Quatermain Misses.

I HAD made my last round of the little corps that I facetiously named "The Sharpshooters," though to tell the truth, at shooting they were anything but sharp, and seen that each man was in his place behind a wall, with a reserve man squatted at the rear of every pair of them, waiting to take his rifle if either of these should fall. Also, I had made sure that all of them had 20 rounds of ammunition in their skin pouches. More I would not serve out, fearing lest in excitement or in panic they might fire away to the last cartridge uselessly, as before now even disciplined white troops have been known to do. Therefore, I had arranged that certain old men of standing, who could be trusted, should wait in a place of comparative safety behind the line, carrying all our reserve ammunition, which amounted, allowing for what had been expended in practice, to nearly 60 rounds per rifle. This they were instructed to deliver from their wallets to the firing line in small lots when they saw that it was necessary, and not before.

It was, I admit, an arrangement apt to miscarry in the heat of desperate battle, but I could think of none better, since it was absolutely necessary that no shot should be wasted.

After a few words of exhortation and caution to the natives who acted as Sergeants to the corps, I returned to a bough shelter that had been built for us behind a rock to get a few hours' sleep, if that were possible, before the fight began.

Here I found Ragnall, who had just come in from his inspection. This was of a much more extensive nature than my own, since it involved going round some furlongs of the rough walls and trenches that he had prepared with so much thought and care, and seeing that the various companies of the White Kendah were ready to play their part in the defense of them.

He was tired and rather excited, too much so to sleep at once. So we talked a little while, first about the prospects of the morrow's battle, as to which we were, to say the least of it, dubious, and afterwards of other things. I asked him if, during his stay into his place, while I was below at the town or later, he had heard or seen anything of his wife.

"Nothing," he answered. "These priests never speak of her, and if they did, Harut is the only one of them that I can really understand. Moreover, I have kept my word strictly, and even when I had occasion to see to the blocking of the western road, made a circuit on the mountain top in order to avoid the neighborhood of that house, where I suppose she lives. Oh! Quatermain, my friend, my case is a hard one, as you would think if the woman you loved with your whole heart were shut up within a few hundred yards of you and no communication with her possible after all this time of separation and agony. What makes it worse is, as I gathered from what Harut said the other day, that she is still out of her mind."

"That has some consolations," I replied, "since the mindless do not suffer. But if such is the case, how do you account for what you and poor Savage saw that night in the Town of the Child? It was not altogether a fantasy, for the dress you described was the same we saw her wearing at the Feast of the First-fruits."

"I don't know what to make of it, Quatermain, except that many strange things happen in the world which we mock at as insults to our limited intelligence because we cannot understand them." (Very soon I was to have another proof of this remark.) "But what are you driving at? You are keeping something back."

"Only this, Ragnall. If your wife were utterly mad I cannot conceive how it came about that she searched you out and spoke to you even in a vision—for the thing was not an individual dream, since both you and Savage saw her. Nor did she actually visit you in the flesh, as the door never opened and the spider's web across it was not broken. So it comes to this: either some part of her is not mad but can still exercise sufficient will to project itself upon your senses, or she is dead and her disembodied spirit did this thing. Now, we know that she is not dead, for we have seen her and Harut has confessed as much. Therefore, I maintain that, whatever may be her temporary state, she must still be fundamentally of a reasonable mind, as she is of a natural body. For instance, she may only be hypnotized, in which case the spell will break one day."

"Thank you for that thought, old fellow. It never occurred to me and it gives me new hope. Now listen! If I should come to grief in this business, which is very likely, and you should survive, you will do your best to get her home; will you not? Here is a codicil to my will which I drew up after that night of the dream, duly witnessed by Savage and Hans. It leaves to you whatever sums may be necessary in this connection and something over for yourself. Take it, it is best in your keeping, especially as if you should be killed it has no value."

"Of course, I will do my best," I answered, as I put away the paper in my pocket. "And now don't let us take any more thought of being killed, which may prevent us from getting the sleep we want. I don't mean to be killed if I can help it. I mean to give those beggars, the Black Kendah, such a doing as they never had before, and then start for the coast with you and Lady Ragnall, as, God willing, we shall do. Good-night."

After this I slept like a top for some hours, as I believe Ragnall did also. When I awoke, which happened suddenly and completely, the first thing that I saw was Hans seated at the entrance to my little shelter smoking his corncob pipe and nursing the single-barreled rifle, Intombi, on his knee. I asked him what the time was, to which he replied that it lacked two hours to dawn. Then I asked him why he had not been sleeping. He replied that he had been asleep and dreamed a dream. Idly enough I inquired what dream, to which he replied:

"Rather a strange one, Baas, for a man who is about to go into battle. I dreamed that I was in a large place that was full of quiet. It was light there, but I could not see any sun or moon, and the air was very soft and tasted like food and drink, so much so, Baas, that if anyone had offered me a cup quite full of the best 'Cape smoke' I should have told him to take it away. Then, Baas, suddenly I saw your reverend father, the Predikant, standing beside me and looking just as he used to look, only younger and stronger and very happy, and so, of course, knew at once that I was dead and in hell. Only I wondered where the fire that does not go out might be, for I could not see it. Presently your reverend father said to me: Good-day, Hans. So you have come here at last. Now, tell me, how has it gone with my son, the Baas Allan? Have you looked after him as I told you to do?'

"I answered: 'I have looked after him as well as I could, O reverend sir. Little enough have I done; still, not once or twice or three times only have I offered up my life for him, as was my duty, and yet we both have lived.' And that I might be sure he heard the best of me, as was but natural, I told him the times, Baas, making a big story out of small things, although all the while I could see that he knew exactly just where I began to lie and just where I stopped from lying. Still he did not scold me, Baas; indeed, when I had finished he said:

"'Well done, O good and faithful servant,' words that I think I have heard him use before when he was alive, Baas, and used to preach to us for such a long time on Sunday afternoons. Then he asked: 'And how goes it with Baas Allen, my son, now, Hans?' to which I replied:

"'The Baas Allan is going to fight a very great battle, in which he may well fall, and if I could feel sorry here, which I can't, I should weep, O reverend sir, because I have died before that battle began and therefore cannot stand at his side in the battle and be killed for him, as a servant should for his master."

"'You will stand at his side in the battle,' said your reverend father, 'and those things which you desire you will do, as it is fitting that you should. And afterwards, Hans, you will make report to me of how the battle went and of what honor my son has won therein. Moreover, know this, Hans, that though while you live in the world you seem to see many other things, they are but dreams, since in all the world there is but one real thing, and its name is Love, which if it be but strong enough, the stars themselves must obey, for it is the King of every one of them, and all who dwell in them worship it day and night under many names and for ever and for ever, Amen.'

"What he meant by that I am sure I don't know, Baas, seeing that I have never thought much of women, at least not for many years since my last old vrouw went and drunk herself to death after lying in her sleep on the baby, which I loved much better than I did her, Baas.

"Well, before I could ask him, or about hell either, he was gone like a whiff of smoke from a rifle mouth in a strong wind."

Hans paused, puffed at his pipe, spat upon the ground in his usual reflective way and asked:

"Is the Baas tired of the dream or would he like to hear the rest?"

"I should like to hear the rest," I said in a low voice, for I was strangely moved.

"Well, Baas, while I was standing in that place which was so full of quiet, turning my hat in my hands and wondering what work they would set me to there among the devils, I looked up. There I saw coming towards me two very beautiful women, Baas, who had their arms around each other's necks. They were dressed in white, with the little hard things that are found in shells hanging about them, and bright stones in their hair. And as they came, Baas, wherever they set a foot flowers sprang up, very pretty flowers, so that all their path across the quiet place was marked with flowers. Birds, too, sang as they passed, at least I think they were birds, though I could not see them."

"What were they like, Hans?" I whispered.

"One of them, Baas, the taller, I did not know. But the other I knew well enough; it was she whose name is holy, not to be mentioned. Yet I must mention that name; it was the Missie Marie herself as last we saw her alive many, many years ago, only grown a hundred times more beautiful."

Now I groaned, and Hans went on:

"The two white ones came up to me, and stood looking at me with eyes that were more soft than those of bucks. Then the Missie Marie said to the other: 'This is Hans, of whom I have so often told you, O Star.'"

Here I groaned again, for how did this Hottentot know that name, or rather its sweet rendering?

"Then she who was called Star asked: 'How goes it with one who is the heart of all three of us, O Hans?' Yes, Baas, those shining ones joined me, the dirty little Hottentot, in my old clothes and smelling of tobacco, with themselves when they spoke of you, for I knew they were speaking of you, Baas, which made me think I must be drunk, even there in the quiet place. So I told them all that I had told your reverend father, and a very great deal more, for they seemed never to be tired of listening. And once, when I mentioned that sometimes, while pretending to be asleep, I had heard you praying aloud at night for the Missie Marie who died for you and for another who had been your wife whose name I did not remember, but who had also died, they both cried a little, Baas. Their tears shone like crystals and smelt like that stuff in a little glass tube which Harut said that he brought from some far land when he put a drop or two on your handkerchief, after you were faint from the pain in your leg at the house yonder. Or perhaps it was the flowers that smelt, for where the tears fell there sprang up white lilies shaped like two babe's hands held together in prayer."

Hearing this, I hid my face in my hands lest Hans should see human tears unscented with attar of roses, and bade him continue.

"Baas, the white one who was called Star asked me of your son, the young Baas Harry, and I told her that when last I had seen him he was strong and well and would make a bigger man than you were, whereat she sighed and shook her head. Then the Missie Marie said: 'Tell the Baas, Hans, that I also have a child which he will see one day, but it is not a son.'

"After this they, too, said something about love, but what it was I cannot remember, since even as I repeat this dream to you it is beginning to slip away from me fast as a swallow skimming the water. Their last words, however, I do remember. They were: 'Say to the Baas that we who never met in life, but who here are as twin sisters, wait and count the years and count the months and count the days and count the hours and count the minutes and count the seconds until once more he shall hear our voices calling to him across the night.' That's what they said, Baas. Then they were gone and only the flowers remained to show that they had been standing there.

"Now I set off to bring you the message and traveled a very long way at a great rate; if Jana himself had been after me I could not have gone more fast. At last I got out of that quiet place and among the mountains, where were dark kloofs, and there in the kloofs I heard Zulu impis singing their war songs; yes, they sang the ingoma or something very like it. Now suddenly in a pass of the mountains along which I sped, there appeared before me a very beautiful woman whose skin shone like the best copper coffee kettle after I have polished it, Baas. She was dressed in a leopard-hide mucha and wore on her shoulders a fur kaross, and about her neck a circle of blue beads, and from her hair there rose one crane's feather tall as a walking stick, and in her hand she held a little spear. No flowers sprang beneath her feet when she walked towards me and no birds sang, only the air was filled with the sound of a royal salute which rolled among the mountains like the roar of thunder, and her eyes flashed like summer lightning."

Now I let my hands fall and stared at her, for well I knew what was coming.

"'Stand, yellow man!' she said, 'and give me the royal salute.'

"So I gave her the Bayette, though who she might be I did not know, since I did not think it wise to stay to ask her if it were hers of right, although I should have liked to do so. Then she said: 'The Old Man on the plain yonder and those two pale White Ones have talked to you of their love for your master, the Lord Macumazana. I tell you, little Yellow Dog, that they do not know what love can be. There is more love for him in my eyes alone than they have in all that makes them fair. Say to the Lord Macumazana that, as I know well, he goes down to battle and that the Lady Mameena will be with him in the battle as, though he saw her not, she has been with him in other battles, and will be with him till the River of Time has run over the edge of the world and is lost beyond the sun. Let him remember this when Jana rushes on and death is very near to him today, and let him look—for then, perchance he shall see me. Begone, now, Yellow Dog, to the heels of your master, and play your part well in the battle, for of what you do or leave undone you shall give account to me. Say that Mameena sends her greeting to the Lord Macumazana and that she adds this, that when the Old Man and the White Ones told you that love is the secret blood of the worlds which makes them to be, they did not lie. Love reigns," and I, mameena, am its priestess and the heart of Macumazana is my holy house.'

"Then, Baas, I tumbled off a precipice and woke up here; and, Baas, as we may not light a fire I have kept some coffee hot for you buried in warm ashes," and without another word he went to fetch that coffee, leaving me shaken and amazed.

For what kind of a dream was it which revealed to an old Hottentot all these mysteries and hidden things about persons whom he had never seen and of whom I had never spoken to him? My father and my wife Marie might be explained, for with these he had been mixed up, but how about Stella and, above all, Mameena, although, of course, it was possible that he had heard of the latter, who made some stir in her time? But to hit her off as he had done in all her pride, splendor and dominion of desire!

Well, that was his story which, perhaps fortunately, I lacked time to analyze or brood upon, since there was much in it calculated to unnerve a man just entering the crisis of a desperate fray. Indeed, a minute or so later, as I was swallowing the last of the coffee, messengers arrived about some business, I forget what, sent by Ragnall, I think, who had risen before I woke. I turned to give the panniken to Hans, but he had vanished in his snake-like fashion, so I threw it down upon the ground and devoted my mind to the question raised in Ragnall's message.

Next minute scouts came in who had been watching the camp of the Black Kendah all night.

These were sleeping not more than half a mile away, in an open place on the slope of the hill with pickets thrown out round them, intending to advance upon us, it was said, as soon as the sun rose, since because of their number they feared lest to march at night should throw them into confusion, and, in case of their falling into an ambush, bring about a disaster. Such at least was the story of two spies whom our people had captured and threatened with death unless they spoke the truth.

There had been some question as to whether we should not attempt a night attack upon their camp, of which I was rather in favor. After full debate, however, the idea had been abandoned, owing to the fewness of our numbers, the dislike which the White Kendah shared with the Black of attempting to operate in the dark, and the well-chosen position of our enemy whom it would be impossible to rush before we were discovered by their outposts. What I hoped in my heart was that they might try to rush us, notwithstanding the story of the two captured spies, and in the gloom after the moon had sunk low and before the dawn came become entangled in our pitfall and outlying entrenchments, where we should be able to destroy a great number of them. Only on the previous afternoon that cunning old fellow, Hans, had pointed out to me how advantageous such an event would be to our cause, and, while agreeing with him, I suggested that probably the Black Kendah knew this as well as we did, as the prisoners had told us.

Yet that very thing happened, and through Hans himself. Thus: Old Harut had come to me just one hour before the dawn to inform me that all our people were awake and at their stations, and to make some last arrangements as to the course of the defense, also about our final concentration behind the last line of walls and in the first court of the temple, if we should be driven from the outer intrenchments. He was telling me that the Oracle of the Child had uttered words at the ceremony that night which he and all the priests considered were of the most favorable import, news to which I listened with some impatience, feeling as I did that this business had passed out of the range of the Child and its Oracle. As he spoke, suddenly through the silence that precedes the dawn, there floated to our ears the unmistakable sound of a rifle. Yes, a rifle shot, half a mile or so away, followed by the roaring murmur of a great camp unexpectedly alarmed at night.

"Who can have fired that?" I asked. "The Black Kendah have no guns."

He replied that he did not know, unless some of my 50 men had left their posts.

While we were investigating the matter, scouts rushed in with the intelligence that the Black Kendah, thinking apparently that they were being attacked, had broken camp and were advancing toward us. We passed a warning all down the lines and stood to arms. Five minutes later, as I stood listening to that approaching roar, filled with every kind of fear and melancholy foreboding such as the hour and the occasion might well have evoked, through the gloom, which was dense, the moon being hidden behind the hill, I thought I caught sight of something running toward me like a crouching man. I lifted my rifle to fire, but, reflecting that it might be no more than an hyena and fearing to provoke a fusillade from my half-trained company, did not do so.

Next instant I was glad indeed, for immediately on the other side of the wall behind which I was standing I heard a well-known voice gasp out:

"Don't shoot, Baas, it is I."

"What have you been doing, Hans?" I said as he scrambled over the wall to my side, limping a little as I fancied.

"LET THE BUYER BEWARE"

Events in the Social World

Social Set Will Emerge From Holy Week Into One of the Gayest Easter Weeks in Years With the Grand Opera Season and French War Exhibit as the Big Attractions—Several Notable Weddings.

By Frances Cabanne Scovel.

SOCIETY will step out of sack-cloth and ashes into the one of the gayest Easter weeks in years.

Monday will see the opening of the opera season, which shares interest with the big French War Exhibit and several notable weddings.

The bazar of the French War Exhibit for various relief societies, has completely run away with itself. So fast has it gone, or rather the representatives of the different booth in efforts to make their particular concession the most attractive, that it has been impossible to keep up with them.

The donations received—to be sold off in shares range from automobiles to a green hat and from a talking (swearing) parrot to a pearl necklace, and the list resembles attractions for a seven-ring circus.

There is a Russian wolfhound, Irish terrier and an animal described as "a dog and half long and a half dog high;" a horse; white fox fur; a $6000 pearl necklace and a $1000 pair of silver fox skins to be made up; Automobile tires, and a bicycle; a diamond bracelet and a diamond wrist watch; orders for clothes; mechanical musical instruments and everything else imaginable.

The booth for the Fatherless Children of France will be one of the most attractive there and will represent a portion of a French street with its sidewalk cafe, its pushcart filled with toys made by the soldiers of France and an octagon-shaped counter with all kinds of novelties for sale, among them paper cutters and rings and metal objects made from German shells. Each day a different matron and her group will preside in the booth.

Mrs. Edward J. Walsh's garden for the American fund for French wounded, will be one of the charming spots at the show. Saturday afternoon the tables from the tea garden will be moved into the ballroom "for the ball arranged by Mrs. Charles Cummings Collins, and there will be a big cabaret with the best attractions they can get. It will last all evening.

On Tuesday evening there will be a formal ball—like a charity ball. At that several of the opera singers will sing.

Thursday afternoon will be the Junior dance. There will be contests and dancing every afternoon and evening.

The Donegal Fair offers so many attractions it is difficult to separate them. Jack Ryan is to tell Irish stories, Con P. Curran will sing Irish songs, there will be Irish plays several afternoons in the week and "there's a horse goes with it."

The Polish booth will have Polish dances and if everyone who had given things and helped get the credit due them, everyone would be going around thanking everybody else.

Harry Trimp has been training the dancers for the cabaret—Misses Anne Collins, Mrs. Stuart G. Stickney, William Luytles and Val Phelan. Mr. Mahler will preside at the Junior dance.

Business men have formed committees to get donations and automobiles have been flying around all week with large signs advertising the bazar, fastened in the windows.

There is the Belgian Relief in charge of Mrs. Marc Seguin, a Servian, with Mrs. John H. Holliday in charge; Allience Francaise under Mrs. Walter Taylor Campbell. The Polish Relief, Mrs. Sidney R. Francis; Society Francaise, Mrs. C. V. R. Mechin; American Fund for French Wounded, Mrs. Edward J. Walsh; Fatherless Children of France, Mrs. Frank P. Crunden and Mrs. Jesse McDonald acting for Mrs. Henry Clarkson Scott, who is ill; the Shamrock Fund for Irish soldiers with the Countess of Kingston as chairman and the British-Canadian Relief with Mrs. J. P. Jamieson in charge.

The committee of the Fatherless Children of France and helper includes: Mmes. William Bagnell, Judson Bemis, Howard Benoist, Mary Boyce, Walter Campbell, B. E. Bradley, Pierre Chouteau, W. R. A SIMPLE WAY TO REMOVE DANDRUFF

There is one sure way that has never failed to remove dandruff at once, and that is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, common liquid arvon from any drug store (this is all you will need), apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning most, if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.—ADV.

Dr. Jack's Toilet Cream

Softens and Soothes Chapped and Rough Skin.

Dr. Jack's Toilet Cream is a delightful soothing lotion for tender, irritated skin. As an application for chapped or rough hands and face it is unexcelled—as well as for use after shaving. Used before motoring prevents chapping.

WAR LIKELY TO MAKE MONROE DOCTRINE EVEN STRONGER

dent's proposal of Jan. 22, last. There are many European problems in which we have long been sympathetically interested, such as the independence of Hungary, the reconstitution of Poland, the internationalization of the Dardanelles. When the time comes to discuss the subjects in conference we might follow the precedent in the Algeciras conference of 1906, concerning British, French and German interest in Morocco. The United States representatives, Andrew D. White, under instructions, signed the convention, with a reservation, however, "without purpose to depart from the traditional American foreign policy which forbids participation by the United States in the settlement of political questions which are entirely European in their scope." The Senate confirmed this agreement.

Whether we shall bind ourselves or not in maintaining in Europe the new order of things, after the war, is for Congress fully to consider when the time arrives. It must still be decided upon considerations of our peace and safety.

CAPTIVE ON RAIDER MOEWE TELLS HOW SHIPS WERE SUNK

Their Preserves Confiscated.

When my men from the Hallbjorg, 23 in all, joined the rest of the prisoners in the bottom of the German raider, they got out the 500 boxes of preserves which we had saved, but one of the ship's officers saw them and promptly confiscated the whole business. Subsequently, however, I did succeed in begging 20 boxes back for my own men, which we sharedwith the starving Englishmen.

I take parts from the brief log, secretly kept:

"Dec. 5 is quiet, with the weather calm; but on Dec. 6 a 150-ton schooner from Newfoundaind with fish for Gibraltar is sunk, thus increasing our population in the cargo hold by six men.

"On the evening of Dec. 6 the steamer Mount Temple, belonging to the Canadian Pacific Railroad Co., is sunk. She has 750 horses on board and also a mixed cargo of 5000 tons and a great many dogs."

The diary recalls this incident clearly now to me. As soon as the raider was within range of the Mount Temple she fired seven shots, and every one evidently took effect, for the Canadian steamer stopped immediately. The chief steward and one sailor on the Mount Temple were killed and three men wounded. The wounded were left lying on the deck until the 107 officers and men of the crew of the Canadian steamer had been brought aboard the German.

Then the ship was sunk by bombs as the others had been, with the moving-picture man mechanically recording the events as they transpired. The wounded men were taken over to the raider first, however. Among these were a firman, badly wounded, and the second officer, who had been hit in the back with a piece of shell. One of the horse tenders had had both legs broken.

A German doctor on the raider at once amputated both legs, but the poor fellow died in the night.

A Horse Ship Trapped.

The German bombs again did their deadly work in the case of the Mount Temple. Between the explosions could be heard the cries of the wounded and terrifed animals aboard, and, when the steamer broke up, many of the horses and dogs were released and hundreds of them were swimming around in the ocean. It was terrible to hear the whinnyings of the horses and the pitiful howls of the dogs. I shall never forget the sight of these poor animals, swimming desperately until exhausted around in mid-Atlantic. They had come early to the terrible war.

The next day, we have a funeral on board—that of a wounded man who died during the night and who was buried at sea, unwept. Wrapped in a German flag, he was sent to his last resting place at the bottom of the ocean, while the ensign on the raider was put at half mast out of respect to the dead enemy. In the wake of the ship drifted hundreds of dead horses, still haunting those who had caused their suffering.

Again the diary:

"December 8—We meet the British steamer King George, bound for Burnett. She carries a general cargo, including 750 tons of munitions for the British army. Her captors do not use bombs on this occasion, fearing the explosion when the cargo of munitions went up, so they open the sea cocks, and the ship starts slowly to sink. It takes eight hours for the King George to disappear completely. Impatiently the officers of the raider watch her, longing to fire a shot into her, but not daring for their own safety, because that amount of explosive would probably have destroyed the raider, too. Finally borne down by her own weight, she disappears beneath the waves.

"Dec. 8—We meet the English steamer Cambrion Range of Liverpool, from Baltimore to Liverpool, with a general cargo. The crew of 88 men is all saved, and the ship blown up with bombs. Moving pictures are made."

Sinking o the Georgic.

We meet the White Star liner Georgic of Liverpool, Dec. 10. She comes from Philadelphia with a general cargo of several thousand tons and also carries 1200 horses. She is bound for Brest. As soon as the raider is near enough they let go four shots, none of which, fortunately, wound any one on the Britisher. Thees shots, however, cause a great panic on board.

Her crew had evidently already seen the traces of the work of the raider when it passed the carcasses of the hundreds of dead horses and dogs that had been aboard the Mount Temple. Fifty men, evidently asleep on the Georgic when she meets the enemy raider, are awakened by the shots. In their panic they hurl themselves overboard, seized with the blind terror of what was to come. They had on only their night shirts when they leaped into the icy ocean and swam around wildly for some time as if they had completely lost their heads.

The German, as usual, lowered a boat and sent aboard a crew, heavily armed and carrying bombs. The crew of the Georgic is ordered into her boats and all the panic-stricken men in the ocean are saved, with one exception. As a large part of the cargo of the Georgic is cotton, it takes her a long time to sink and uses up many feet of film in the moving picture gun.

After waiting for five hours for the big ship to go down, the raider's commander became weary of the delay, and ordered a torpedo fired, this hitting its target squarely. The great steamer heeled over and, at the same time, the 1200 horses, most of them on her decks, tore themselves loose and leaped overboard.

Horse Silently Pleads for Mercy.

Many of them drowned at once, but hundreds of others swam around hopelessly clinging to life for some time, some succeeding in reaching the raider and, with their forelegs they drummed on her steel sides, whining pitifully and looking up with beseeching eyes at the German sailors clustered at the rail.

One there is that attracts my attention, especially, a beautiful gray horse a magnificent animal, who always holds his fine head high above those of the other animals. He first swam over to the raider, but not meeting with any success there, he returned to the Georgic, which now has turned all the way over on her side.

We see him swim all around the mortally wounded ship and then back toward her destroyer. When about five meters from the Moewe, he succeeds in lifting his forelegs out of the water by a great effort, and it seems as if he is stretching them toward the many men aboard asking for help, his begging eyes saying:

"Don't let me drown! Take me along!"

Some of the German sailors cannot stand this any longer, and mercifully succeeded in ending the misery of several of the horses with their revolvers, including the magnificent gray steed. Then it became dark and the raider sped away from this terrible spot—a black splotch on the sea.

DONATION DAY FOR THE POOR IS TO BE APRIL 16

Contribution Boxes Will Be Placed on Street Cars Near Fare Boxes.

PROCLAMATION ISSUED

Automobile Owners Will Be Asked to Send Their Gifts to Committee.

Monday, April 16, will be Donation day, when gifts for the poor will be received in boxes placed on the street cars, and when automobile owners and others who do not use street cars will be asked to send their contributions to a committee. Mayor Kiel yesterday issued a proclamation naming the day and appealing to the public to help in making the movement successful.

The receipts of the day will be divided, by the Donation Day Committee, among the Provident Association, the St. Vincent de Paul Society and the Federated Jewish Charities, for their relief work among the poor.

Each of the three charitable organizations is facing a deficit in its year's relief funds. Unless there is a liberal response to the coming appeal, officials of the societies say, it will be impossible to supply the most urgent needs of many destitute persons. An unusual call for charity has resulted from the great increase in the cost of food and other necessaries.

The collection in the street cars will be made in separate boxes, which will be placed, as they were last year, near the fare boxes. George Warren Brown will be in charge of the collection of funds from automobilists and letters will be sent to every automobile owner asking for a contribution.

The committee will meet tomorrow at the St. Louis Union Trust Co. A. J. Siegel is chairman and J. R. Cooke is treasurer. W. R. Tubbs and Oscar Leonard are secretary and assistant secretary. Others members are: George Warren Brown, Louis Blumenstock, Roger P. Annan Jr., W. H. Danforth, Aaron Fuller, Bernard Greensfelder, George A. Helein, C. M. Hubbard, H. H. Langenberg, Richard McCulloch, J. J. McKenna, H. H. Simmons, George M. Burbach, M. P. Linn, Percy Orthwein, Bert Barnett, E. Lansing Ray, Harmon J. Bliss and Aaron Waldheim.

Your Special Ruled Report Blanks, produced by our new process, saves half your former cost. Phone for quotation—whether you need 25 or 2500 copies. Ross-Gould List & Letter Co., 10th and Olive.

Does your complexion stand the test of bright lights?
Crème Tokalon
ROSEATED
Banishes every complexion blemish in three nights
In many instances

When YOU Look in the Mirror Does YOUR face Look Mottled, Discolored and Wrinkled or Clear, Fair and Lovely?

How a wrinkled, coarse, sallow skin can be made fresh, youthful and beautiful through simple osmosis of the skin produced by warm water and roseated cream

By Mlle. Simone Mareix, France's Great Prize Beauty.

"She seemed beautiful until I saw her under the bright lights—then all the imperfections of her skin and complexion stood out so that she looked positively ugly; that is why she and so many other women fail to hold admiration." I heard a man make this remark the other day, and I could not help thinking how wrinkles and complexion blemishes completely destroy every advantage of pleasing features, whereas a clear, velvety skin gives an appearance of a fresh, youthful beauty, even though the facial contour is plain. You need only look in you own mirror under a bright light to know whether or not you have crowsfeet or pouches around the eyes and deep lines or furrows in the forehead or about the mouth. You can easily see whether enlarged pores, blackheads and other complexion blemishes are keeping you in the ranks of the unattractive. Then if you feel you want to look younger and more beautiful, simply give your skin an opportunity to act freely and renew its youth. Many a hollow-cheeked, wrinkled, aged-looking woman has "come back" and made herself look most beautiful, youthful and charming in from two to three weeks' time, after she had given up all hope of ever regaining her girlish attractiveness, by means of this wonderful simple method. Merely wash your face in warm water at night and rub in a teaspoonful or two of Creme Tokalon Roseated, which you can obtain from the druggist. In the morning wash the face with cold water and rub in more cream. Day by day watch how the old, hardened, coarse, rough skin becomes new, fresh, soft and youthful-looking, all due to simple osmosis of the skin, produced by warm water and roseated cream. If you have wrinkles, get a box of Japanese Ice Pencils from your druggist and use them in connection with the cream, and you can get quick action on the deepest wrinkles, no matter of how long standing. There is no reason why any woman between thirty and sixty cannot make herself look from five to fifteen years younger by simply following these directions.

• The above is one of a series of articles on beauty specially written by Mlle. Simone Mareix of Paris, winner of two great international beauty prizes—one in Paris, the other in England. Mlle. Mareix personally guarantees success in every case with the products recommended in her newspaper articles or will refund the amount paid for them, provided you take your dealer's receipt at the time you make your purchase. Her American address is Simone Mareix, 20 West 22d Street, New York. Creme Tokalon Roseated and the Japanese Ice Pencils mentioned can be obtained absolutely fresh and guaranteed pure from Wolff-Wilson, Scruggs-Vandervoort-Barney, Johnson-Enderle-Pauley Co., Judge & Dolph, Nugents', or any good druggist or department store in this city.—ADVERTISEMENT.

WHEAT CROP SHORT ONE-TWELFTH THAT OF LAST WINTER

Figures Given Out by Government Show a Slump of 50.000,000 Bushels.

ACREAGE MUCH GREATER

Prospect of a Decline in Production Complicates the War Feeding Problem.

WASHINGTON, April 7.—A shortage of 50,000,000 bushels in the winter wheat crop, compared with the total of 673,947,000 last year is forecast in the official estimates of the Department of Agriculture, made public today. This is a slump of more than one-twelfth, although the acreage this year is much greater.

The Government report shows the condition of winter wheat on April 1 to be 63.4 per cent of a normal crop, and was the lowest figure ever announced for this time of the year. Last year the April 1 condition was 78.3 and in 1915 it was 88.8. The previous low figure was 76.5 in in 1904.

The smallest recorded winter wheat crop was 399,919,000 bushels, in 1912. The 1915 harvest was 673,947,000 bushels.

The food problem of the coming year being one of the paramount questions affecting the United States in the war, extraordinary interest centered in the Government's report today showing the condition and production forecast of the winter wheat crop planted last autumn.

Two-Thirds of Production.

The extent of the winter wheat crop, usually about two-thirds of the entire production of wheat in this country, is a vital question inasmuch as the allies will depend to a large degree upon American supplies and Argentine has placed an embargo on wheat and flour exports.

The winter wheat area last autumn was 40,090,000 acres, one of the largest acreages ever planted. How much of this acreage will have to be abandoned because of conditions which prevailed during the winter, has been a cause of much speculation. Reports from different sources reaching the department of agriculture have indicated that there was some winter killing of winter wheat in many sections of Kentucky, Tennessee, Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, Missouri, Oklahoma, Kansas and Texas, and of hard red winter wheat in the western and southwestern plains, particularly in Kansas and Oklahoma. Whether the extent of the damage is more than the average was uncertain. Lack of adequate snow covering during the winter has been reported and prolonged and severe drouth conditions have followed.

Cereal specialists of the department of agriculture are recommending to farmers that if the crop is not more than half killed to let it grow. Where more than that has been killed in the northern part of the belt seeing to spring wheat is recommended but in the northern part of the region planting of corn is proposed.

Secretary Houston to Attend a Food Conference Here

SECRETARY of Agriculture Houston will arrive here this evening for a conference tomorrow morning with agricultural experts of the Middle West on the increase and conservation of food supply of the country.

Representatives of the state agricultural departments and agricultural colleges from many states will attend the conference, at which methods of increasing the production of the farms and conserving the supplies of foodstuffs will be discussed. Secretary Houston expects soon to hold a similar conference in an Eastern city.

Secretary Houston's trip is the result of a Cabinet conference on food production and distribution for war period.

Wheat on St. Louis Exchange Jumps From 6½ to 12 Cents.

A sensational advance of 6½ to 12 cents in wheat was recorded on the Merchants' Exchange yesterday, following the posting of a Government crop report indicating a winter wheat yield of 430,000,000 bushels, compared with 481,744,000 bushels harvested a year ago.

July wheat, the new crop option, showed the widest advance, and sold at $1.84⅛, compared with the previous close to $1.72⅛. The May option mounted to $2.20¾, against $2.13⅞, and September reached $1.72½ compared with $1.60. All high records since the Civil War were broken by wide margins.

Market reports received by the Post-Dispatch showed corresponding jumps and increases in all other cities.

Wheat Prices Go Up Nearly Eight Cents in Chicago.

CHICAGO, April 7.—Wheat prices jumped skyward today on receipt of news that the Government crop report showed the domestic winter crop was in a condition far worse than even the most bullish forecasts had implied. Before the Washington official figures were at hand, the market had suffered a sharp drop on account of reports of the sighting of German sea raiders off Nantucket and the Virginia capes and because outbound merchant steamships for Europe had been ordered to return to American ports. All such factors, however, were ignored after the Government crop estimate came.

Excited trading carried the market to $2.12 for May wheat from $2.04⅝. Initial prices which were irregular, varying from ¼c off to 1⅞c up, with May at $2.06½ to $2.07 and July at $1.75 to $1.75½ were followed by a sharp decline all around and then a nearly unparalleled advance.

Wheat futures closed with the advance well held: May, $2.12 to $2.12¼; July, $1.88 to $1.88⅝; September, $1.74¼ to $1.75.

Heavy Selling of Securities Forces Down Stock Market Prices.

NEW YORK, April 7.—Selling of securities in large volume was renewed during today's short session on the Stock Exchange, the formal entry of this country into the war precipitating fresh investment liquidation and encouraging the short interest to greater activity.

Apprehension was heightened by reports of strange vessels off the Massachusetts and Virginia coasts and the circulation of other reports of a disquieting character.

Leading stocks opened at losses of 1 to 2 points but before the end of the first hour these were generally and in some instances greatly extended.

United States Steel, which was offered in round amounts, made extreme decline of 3⅝ points, with 2 to 4 points for related issues, almost 8 points for Bethlehem Steel, new stock, and 2 to 4 points for shipping and motors. Mexican petroleum broke over 4 points and Ohio Gas 8½.

Selling moderated slightly during the first hour, but the market manifested no rallying tendencies.

Supporting orders rallied the list 1 to 2 points in the more moderate trading of the final hour.

Rails were an exception, however, recording lower quotations on issuance of the Government report as of April 1, showing serious deterioration of winter wheat. Sales approximated 650,000 shares.

The bond market was irregular, international issues holding steady, while railroad bonds fell in sympathy with other shares.

MRS. KREISER'S TRIAL MAY 21

Bond Is Reduced When She Is Arraigned in Court.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., April 7.—Mrs. Mary Alice Kreiser, charged with first degree murder for killing her husband, Edward Kreiser, the organist, March 3, because of his attentions to other women, is to be placed on trial May 21. Bond given at the preliminary was $25,000, but Judge Latshaw reduced the new bond to $15,000 and it was arranged immediately.

Mrs. Kreiser said nothing as she sat in the courtroom while her attorneys presented her case before Judge Latshaw.

Eccentric Recluse Dies.

MAYLAND, England, April 7.—Herbert Samuel Childs, a member of a wealthy family who had for years lived as a recluse in a small hut constructed of railway sleepers, is dead. He dressed in sacks cut up roughly in the shape of clothes, refused to see anyone, and would only hold communication with visitors through a small hole in a wall of the hut.

EVANSVILLE TO RAISE FOOD ON VACANT LOTS

City Garden Club Will Plow and Harrow Ground Free for Gardeners.

EVANSVILLE, Ind., April 5.—Under the direction of Prof. F. H. Bosse, principal of a local school, the City Garden Club has been formed, and has made an appeal to the people of the city for the use of all vacant lots in the city.

The club not only lends the lots to prospective gardeners free of charge, but plows and harrows it free of cost. The only provision made is that a row of flowers must be planted on the sides that are bounded by streets, and vegetables that grow tall must be planted in the rear. All gardening will be done under the direction of school supervisors, who, in turn, will be instructed by the agricultural instructor in the Evansville High School. Persons who will plant gardens in their own yards are offered free instruction on best methods. School children are offered small pieces of land on lots near their school buildings and will plant vegetables and attend to the plants under the direction of the school authorities.

How Everyone Can "Do a Bit" to Win the War

Commander O'Ryan of the New York National Guard Tells How Men, Women and Children May Aid the Fighting Men to Overcome the Enemy.

By Jno. F. O'Ryan,
Major-General Commanding the New York Division, National Guard.

NEW YORK, April 7.

"HOW may the average man assist the Government in this national emergency?

"What can a woman do to help?"

We hear the questions many times a day. They are not hard to answer. There is something everybody can do; something very real and very earnest and very useful to those who are to compose our armies—regulars, guard and volunteers. There are many ways aside from military activities in which the average individual may be of genuine service to his country.

A call for 500,000 soldiers may seem large. In reality it is nothing, compared to the calls that have been made by the nations now on the firing line. This country has 110,000,000 population. If we turn out men in the same proportion that Canada has furnished them to the mother country's cause we would have 7,000,000 men in the field. And what could we do with them once we had them there?

No; today's call for soldiers is only for those who are soldiers by instinct; for men of military experience; for those who have no one materially dependent upon them; for the young and active and those who are physically very fit.

First Call for Martial Spirit.

The present call is not for service in an imaginary regiment in the Division of Dreams. It does not involve such mobilizations as have recently taken place in the columns of the press. "Vassar girls mobilize," their headlines said. But this is not a call that will drag the old men from their firesides or the school boys and girls from their books. It is a call for virile young men possessed of the martial spirit and fit to do the deeds their fathers did in our previous wars. But there is work for everybody to do while this state of war exists—work for the youth under 18, for the citizen over 45, for employer and employe, for man, woman and child.

One thing there is that we should not do. We should not tell the Government how to run the war. One day last week a column of fine, husky young men from the downtown districts passed in column squads in front of the city hall. Each man carried a wooden gun and ahead another husky youth hugged a banner inscribed: "We want rifles."

That is one of the things not to do. Every one of these young men can get a rifle in a minute. All he has to do is to enlist at the nearest regular army recruiting station or join the national guard regiment in his own neighborhood, and he will have a rifle handed to him at the proper time by the recruit inspector.

Let me quote the Secretary of War. Says Mr. Baker: "I am receiving on an average 50 or more inquiries a day from persons who wish to know how they may be of service to the country in the present crisis. The inquiries show a desire to be of real help to the nation. To some of them it may be said that the recruiting in the regular army and national guard afford a constant inlet."

How Employers May Help.

But we are speaking to the average citizen for whom the call has not yet come; of whom no real sacrifice is as yet required. How can he be of help? In a thousand ways.

First of all, there is the employer. He is serving his country to the full measure of patriotism when he posts a notice in the office where all may see it: "The positions of employes who enlist will be held for them until they return and their wages paid while they are away."

This is serving the country in the finest possible fashion. It sends the soldier off with the thought that those at home will not suffer in his absence; it relieves him at once of all worries about the loved ones. It saves the Government the money it otherwise must pay to dependent relatives and releases just so many more dollars to do their service at the front.

This means solely the employer who makes good his contract; not the one who makes the announcement when the flags are waving and the bands are playing and everybody is singing "The Star-Spangled Banner" and recalls it when the music stops. I have in mind employers who broke into print when we had the Mexican crisis last summer with announcements about "taking care of the boys until they came back from Mexico," only to lay down when they found out that the turning out of the national guard completely paralyzed the bandit uprising; that troops were merely needed to guard the border and not immediately to invade Mexico.

Next there is the employe. It is possible that he may do his share by staying home. Suppose in a shop or office there are 10 men. One goes out as a soldier. The employer is not financially able to pay the wages of the 10 and hire a substitute as well. If the nine who stay behind club together to do the work of the man who has gone, then they are doing a real service to the country. Their willingness to do a little extra labor day after day is a genuine test of devotion to the flag.

Co-ordination Everywhere.

The mobilization of our national resources, now being conducted by the Council of National Defense, furnishes every live man now engaged in business or trade with a way to place his own particular services at the disposal of the country. The plan as it is now working out is the co-ordination of every industry so the Government, through a small committee of organization, can put its hands at once upon any part of the nation's widespread activities. I urge that such men get in touch with their associates in trade so that the committee groups will be able to speak for all the elements of each particular line of activity when the time comes for Government service.

For women there is much the same opportunity offered. The National League for Service is in charge of all the branches of women's endeavor which wish to do their part in the crisis. Behind it are such very well known women of New York as Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt, Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, Miss Anne Morgan and Miss Maude Wetmore. Their national headquarters is at 105 West Fortieth street and their State headquarters at 38 East Thirty-ninth street.

Here any woman may enroll herself for almost any sort of service needed. For really serious women there are classes in wireless telegraphy and in ordinary telegraphy. Mrs. Montgomery Hare is teaching women how to prepare the army ration, and later trench cooking will be taught. There are classes in automobile driving, truck driving, first aid, ambulance work and Red Cross nursing.

Any woman who wishes to help might send in her name to the Active Service Auxiliary of New York State, of which Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt is the head. Its officers are at 35 West Thirty-ninth street These patriotic women are looking after the families of the men who go out with regiments of the New York division They did wonderful work while our men were down on the Mexican border and they stand ready again to help when the New York troops answer the present call.

Children for the Gardens.

The National Child Welfare League is beginning a splendid work, with Mrs. Walston Hill Brown at the head, starting the children at gardening, so that we will have no food crisis behind the lines. The aim is to make each family raise its own vegetables, even in a backyard, so that just so many more men may be released from the fields.

Our boys, too young to go on the firing line now, can begin to train, so that they may be fit and ready to go when it comes their turn. The State Military Training Commission is now forming the Corps of Cadets, S. N. Y., and a regiment of 1800 of them will go to the camp at Peekskill, beginning July 1. There they will receive a reasonable amount of military training and a good deal of physical training. We don't want to Prussianize our youth, but we do want to develop habits of order and obedience to authority, to have them acquire habits of concentration, thoroughness and discipline, which are not only essential to the soldier, but vital in the process of making citizens of the highest type.

There are men who have the desire to become soldiers who must of necessity be tied to home or business associations, unless a very urgent call should come. What can they do? Very much, indeed. Every regiment of New York troops that is called out must leave behind it, under our State laws, a unit which is called a depot battalion. Our military law requires that at all time there must be at least 10,000 men under arms in the service of the State. These depot units constitute this force. They take over the armories of the regiments who go out on active service, enlist men who wish to go to the front and give them their first training in the duties of a soldier. They also enlist men for the depot unit—men who cannot be separated from home ties, but who wish to be able to respond to a call in their own city.

I have received letters from patriotic citizens offering to provide things that might be needed but which are not furnished under the regulations. We do not desire to accumulate any authorized property which would become an encumbrance to a mobile command, but such useful adjuncts as automobiles and motor trucks are always in demand. Officers' mounts of the proper standard are also hard to find. If public-spirited citizens desire to offer such things as these they can be used to advantage in a score of ways.

A well-to-do business man could give a regiment a motor truck and be doing a highly patriotic duty. Another might offer the loan of his car for patrol or inspection duty, or give it. The owner of a good mount might sell it to some field officer for a nominal sum or donate it to a command. A group of individuals might subscribe to a motor truck or scout car and present it to a regiment.

There is work to do as registration officers. The registering of alien and enemy aliens, as well as the registering of citizens of military age are simple tasks in which the Government may be assisted by volunteers. There is home defense work to be done and police work, a separate duty. Many counties will require extra deputy sheriffs. Mechanics may come forward to work in the arsenals and navy yards.

Last of all, I may say with all certainty of hitting the nail on the head that the day of waving a flag and standing up for "The Star Spangled Banner" and letting it go at that is ended. The citizen who parades up Fifth avenue, cheering for preparedness and stops right there, thinking he has done his full duty is no longer a good citizen. There is something more for him to do, if he is to measure up to the full stature of a patriot. If nothing else he can stop criticizing the Government. But there is none so weak that he or she cannot help the American cause in substantial measure.

Mrs. Philip N. Moore Tells How Committee She Is Organizing Will Register 7,000,000 Women to Aid in War

Whole Country to Be Canvassed by Sub Committees

Noted St. Louis Clubwoman Probably Will Be Elected Chairman of New Body Co-operating With Department of Labor, Making Her Supreme Executive of All Feminine Activities in Support of the Nation in War.

MEASURES for the registration of 7,000,000 American women within 30 days and their enrollment as an important arm in the mobilization of the country's resources have been set afoot by Mrs. Philip N. Moore of St. Louis, president of the National Council of Women.

A new board, the executive of the National League for Women's Service, is to be organized at Washington in two weeks, and of this board it is expected Mrs. Moore will be elected chairman. The position would make her the supreme executive of all feminine activities in support of the nation in war.

In an interview with a Post-Dispatch reporter yesterday at her home, 3125 Lafayette avenue, Mrs. Moore, who had just returned from the national capital, outlined the measures already taken, and also some of those in prospect.

A week ago, she said, she prepared a telegram which was sent by the Secretary of Labor to the president of 15 out of the 27 most important national women's organizations, asking their co-operation in a movement to enlist the forces of their associations in the nation's military measures. These 15 organizations, she said, were those which were actively interested in the work of the National Council of Women, which was formed a year ago to oversee employment conditions of women and girls throughout the country. Of the 15 presidents appealed to, 12 have already returned favorable answers.

At a meeting Tuesday in Washington of the presidents and representatives of the various organizations, plans for a nation-wide registration of women were adopted, and a tender of services was made to President Wilson, to the Council of National Defense and the Advisory Civil Commission.

Thorough Canvass Planned.

It was decided that registration cards would be delivered to the national presidents of the women's organizations and by them forwarded to the various state presidents, who will have direct charge of the undertaking in each state, and be held responsible for a complete canvass, covering every city, town and district in the territory under their jurisdiction.

"In order to avoid duplications," said Mrs. Moore, "we ask that members of more than one organization register in only one of them. The 15 associations have probably 10,000,000 members, but with the elimination of duplications, the net enrollment will be about 7,000,000.

"The cards present a number of questions, designed to place the women in various classifications. Under the heading, 'Register of Service,' five choices are given, as follows: (A) Wherever called; (B) In the United States; (C) In your home city; (D) In your own home, and (E) Entire time or limited time, and in the latter case, how much time? The answers will indicate whether the writer is willing to serve abroad, or in any part of the United States, or only in her home city or her own home, etc.

"Under the next question, 'What work do you prefer?' there is space for stating three choices. Another query is: 'What work are you trained to do?' and the candidate is asked to state her experience and where it was gained. The final question gives a choice between volunteer and paid service. It is recognized that while some women are in a position to serve without pay, others being breadwinners in their families, must in fairness receive pay.

"Our plans also contemplate the enrollment of women who are not members of any of the organizations. These may be interested in various ways, one of which will probably be the holding of mass meetings, where registration cards will be distributed. I have received numerous inquiries by mail from such women, and shall aid them to register."

Mrs. Moore gave a list of eight branches of service in which, so far as the plans now go, women may be employed. The first concerns occupations which men will leave in order to enter the army and which women may fill. The second is service in connection with the American Red Cross, either as nurses' aids in active service, or as makers of bandages, sheets and other hospital supplies. This work, Mrs. Moore pointed out, may be done at home or in organizations of women, and she urges that model supplies be obtained from the local Red Cross chapters so that the products will be standardized according to the Red Cross regulations.

"The third branch," Mrs. Moore continued, "will be the organization of classes for teaching Americanism and national loyalty, in co-operation with the Department of Labor, the Bureaus of Immigration and Naturalization and the Americanization Committee of the National Chamber of Commerce.

"Another division will be devoted to the elimination of waste and the conservation of the nation's food supplies, and will call for the establishment of classes in which women may study farming, gardening, economical marketing and scientific household management. This work will have the co-operation of the Department of Agriculture.

Women to Drive Motors.

"The fifth branch is under the heading, 'Motor Service,' and candidates for this department will be trained in knowledge of automobile mechanism and driving. One may recall that in many European countries women have taken over the taxicab and street car services, thus releasing thousands of men for the battlefield."

The other three classes of service, according to Mrs. Moore, are listed as "Industrial Service"—in munition plants, factories, mines, etc.; "General Social and Welfare Service"—in connection with camps, housing, recreation, army canteens and the like; and "Office Service," including stenography, care of files and records, telegraph and telephone service, clerking and executive functions. These, said Mrs. Moore, are some of the duties which the women of the country may volunteer to take over, or to which they may be assigned on the basis of their experience and training.

"It is expected," she said, "to have the cards so tabulated that at a moment's notice hands may be laid upon the groups of women in any part of the country willing and able to discharge whatever duties may arise. The cards will be tabulated at the state offices of the various organizations and stored at their respective national headquarters. However, it is possible that in time all the records will be installed at the office of the National League for Women's Service, at Washington."

The Affiliated Organizations.

The league's Executive Board, of which Mrs. Moore is slated for chairman, will consist of Immigration Commissioner Caminetti, Miss Julia Lathrop, chief of the Federal Children's Bureau, the presidents of the 15 women's organizations concerned and the presidents of two or three other women's associations.

Mrs. Moore, who has been for years one of the country's most distinguished and active women, is an honorary president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, and was for four years its president.

Some of the organizations affiliated with the National League for Women's Service are the National American Woman Suffrage Association, the National Association Opposed to Woman Suffrage, the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, the Congress of Mothers and the General Federation of Women's Clubs.

Peace by Negotiation Has Become a Tragic Dream For Germany, Says Simonds

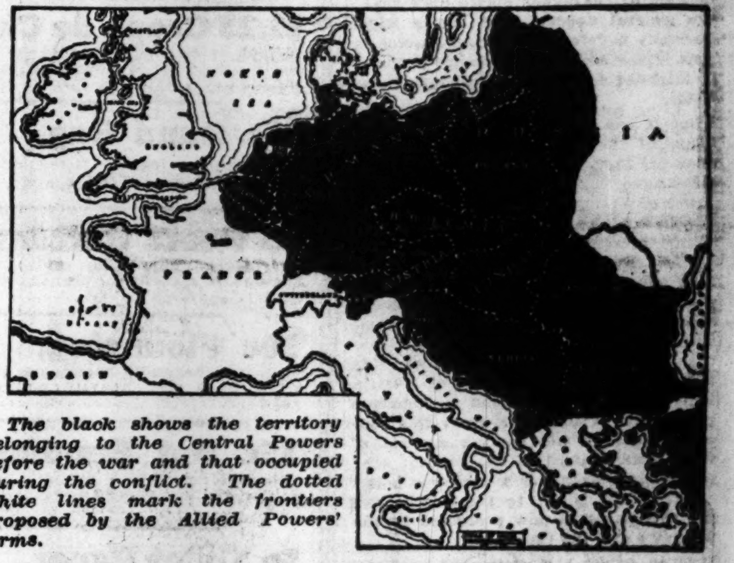
Noted Observer, Who Recently Returned From West Front Says Allies Terms Have Hardened Until Now They Are Determined to Fight Until the Central Empires Completely Collapse.

By Frank H. Simonds,
Noted observer who recently returned from the western front, where he interviewed powerful military and civilian leaders of the allied cause.

BRIEFLY I desire to set forth the essential political and military circumstances which were explained to me during my recent visit to Europe as underlying the politics and the strategy of the military campaign which is now beginning. More definitely and more clearly than at any time in the war the enemies of Germany have co-ordinated their plans and harmonized their views as to the conduct of the war and the nature of the peace which they are willing to make.

At the outset all discussion is based upon the war map. Germany, by virtue of superior preparedness, by virtue of her policy, which enabled her to strike at the moment selected by her, has occupied large areas of allied territory, she has overrun Belgium, Poland, Servia; she holds considerable French territory and she has enlisted in her cause Bulgaria, Austria and Turkey, as Napoleon was able to enlist various states, even including Prussia, in his victorious advance.

Allied armies have therefore to consider first of all the liberation of the territories occupied by Germany.



The black shows the territory belonging to the Central Powers before the war and that occupied during the conflict. The dotted white lines mark the frontiers proposed by the Allied Powers' terms.

Their program is quite comparable with that of the opponents of Napoleon, who, after many hesitations, finally agreed to continue the war until France was restricted to the boundaries of 1789. Conceivably allied purpose will take another leaf out of the book of the conquerors of Napoleon and presently agree to make no peace save a peace predicated upon the removal of the Hohenzollerns; but this is for the future.

The German Block.

The political aspects dominate the military. Germany has created a solid block of territory extending from the Baltic to Asia Minor, from the Elbe to the Tigris and from the Vistula and the Lower Danube to the channel, which is as completely under the domination of Berlin as was Napoleon's empire under his direction from Paris. Just as Napoleon, for his invasion of Russia, was able to use Prussian, Polish, Saxon and Italian troops, German high command is today using Turk, Bulgar, Hungarian and even the Austrian Slavs against her foes.

The allied military problem is simple to perceive. Germany's new empire must be destroyed by force of arms; German power must be restricted to the limits of Germany in 1870, at the least, as France was reduced in 1814 to the limit of 1789.

What the soldiers and the statesmen of the allied countries have resolved is this: Peace is impossible so long as Germany retains any of the fruits of her conquests, because these fruits would be an incentive to new aggressions. Allied peoples are recalling the German formula of the last century, the formula which led to three victorious wars and gave Germany the basis on which she has erected her present structure.

The mission of the allied armies in Europe and in Asia, on the east front, the west front and the two southern fronts, the Italian and the Balkan, is to keep up that unending pressure which will presently lead to German disaster, as a similar pressure brought Napoleon to Leipsic and then to Marne.

The whole problem is simple. The Russian armies in Armenia, the British in Mesopotamia and the Holy Land, the allied forces in Macedonia are performing something like the duty that Wellington's army performed in Spain a century ago, while the main campaigns were being fought in Silesia and Saxony.

Wellington's army ultimately freed Spain and provided an opportunity for enrolling the Spanish nation against the French invader; conceivably the British troops in Mesopotamia will rouse the Arabs against the Turks or the Russo-British pressure will lead to the exhaustion and collapse of the Turks. The Saloniki army will have short work with the Bulgarians, if the German and Austrian supports go home.

But a peace which sent Germany back to the frontiers of 1914, with a further reduction incident to the return of Alsace-Lorraine to France, would be insufficient, because Germany has so completely established herself in Austria-Hungary that Austria has practically ceased to be an independent nation and counts as a German conquest quite as much as Servia or Belgium. Granted that Austria-Hungary were left in existence, Germany would still be able to direct some millions of Slavs and Hungarians, as well as Germans of Austrian nationality, against her enemies, whenever she chose to bid again for world power.

Accordingly, allied policy has decided upon the abolition of Austria; certain portions are to be allotted to states with populations of the same race. Italy is to have Trieste and the Trentino, with their Italian population. A new Southern Slav state is to be created out of the Croats, the Slovenes, the Serbs of Austria and the Serbs of old Servia and Montenegro, Transylvania and a portion of Temesvar, which contain a large Rumanian population, are to be allotted to Rumania, together with a portion of Bukowina. Western Galicia is to go to the new Poland, since its population is entirely Polish. Eastern Galicia is to be joined to the Ukranian districts of Russia. Hungary is to be further restricted by the loss of the regions along the Carpathians populated by Slavs, but, with these changes, left free. Bohemia, Moravia and the Slav districts along the Carpathians are to be joined in a free Slav state; the remaining provinces, largely Teutonic, will be permitted to form still another independent state.

No Mitteleuropa.

By such a course more than 25,000,000 Slavs, Rumanians and Italians, half the population of Austria-Hungary, will be removed from the control of an Austrian and Hungarian minority, which has surrendered its own freedom and policy to Germany. The German conception of a Mitt europa will be forever destroyed; across the pathway of Teutonic expansion to the Near East will be thrown a strong Southern Slav state extending from the Drave and the Danube to Greece and Albania.

In the same way there will be erected on the German Eastern frontier a Polish barrier to German eastward advance. This Poland will include not merely Russian and Austrian Poland, but most of German Posen and West Prussia, certainly the mouth of the Vistula and the port of Dantzic; East Prussia may become a portion of the Russian Lithuanian districts, which are to have an autonomous status, or it may be permitted to continue as a detached portion of Germany, separated from the rest by the Polish strip along the Vistula. Such a change would not take from Germany, outside of East Prussia, any considerable territory in which the majority of the people were German, and it would give Poland an outlet on the sea, without which it would be at the mercy of Germany, as Servia was throttled by Austria before 1912.

The remainder of the changes that the allied statesmen contemplate have no bearing on the present discussion, save as it is recognized that Bulgaria will be reduced to the limits of 1914 and Russia will occupy Constantinople and Armenia. All of these projects were set forth in the statement of terms made by the allies in their response to President Wilson.

At bottom these terms have a military and political purpose exactly corresponding to the terms written into many treaties following the wars in which France sought domination of the European continent. Austria is now in the position with respect to Germany that Spain occupied toward France at the time of the War of the Spanish Succession and following the Napoleonic success that placed Napoleon's brother upon the Spanish throne. But unlike Spain, Austria is not a country of a single race but of a score, and allied policy now aims at freeing the various races, where the policy of the earlier alliances aimed merely at liberating the Spanish people from an alien dynasty and yoke.

The Two Phases.

Manifestly such a program is predicated upon complete success in the field. This success may have two phases; there may be conquests in Turkey and Bulgaria corresponding to the British successes in Spain a century ago, which may lead to the collapse of Turkey and to a change of sides by Bulgaria such as Saxony made after Leipsic, or the minor states may share the general debacle that comes when Germany is defeated. The campaigns in Asia Minor and Macedonia are obviously intended to hasten the end in these fields.

But if one is to understand the new phase of the war, the last phase, the essential fact must be grasped that the allies have resolved to put it out of the power of Germany to repeat the present attack, and in doing it profit by the ability to enlist 50,000,000 of non-Teutonic people, excluding from this count the Magyars, who are by choice allies of the Germans. The cardinal doctrine of allied policy is the elimination of Austria from the list of European nations; the sole possible modification of this project would be the escape of Austria from German control and a separate peace with Vienna, but even this separate peace would deprive Austria of more than a third of her present area and impose upon her a domestic policy which would grant to the Czechs and the Croats rights now possessed by the Magyars and the Germans.

Allied policy has noticeably hardened in the last six months. I suspect the course of the Germans in laying waste vast areas in France will still further embitter the nations who have resolved to end the war only after victory, but the key to all allied policy is found in the determination to prevent a recurrence of the present catastrophe on the lines of 1914. Hence the death sentence that has been passed upon Austria and upon Turkey, a death sentence following the surrender of Austria and Turkey to German control and leadership.

Conceivably a German revolution, a thing not dreamed of in London or Paris when I was there, but to be considered now that Russia has risen, may modify allied terms in a minor degree, but only in a minor degree, for the profound conviction exists in allied capitals that the present war was not the work of the Hohenzollerns alone, but of the whole German people. I can conceive it possible that the mutilation of Eastern Prussia might not be insisted upon if there were a German revolution, but even this modification would conflict with the Russian determination to rescue the Slavs of the eastern marshes from German oppression.

The whole situation strangely recalls the situation a century ago, when before Leipsic all the great Powers of Europe united to put an end to the Napoleonic menace and after Leipsic began to formulate that policy which found expression later at the Congress of Vienna, after Waterloo had permanently disposed of Napoleon. The single outstanding difference is that the allies of 1917 do not imagine that it will be possible to restore the ante-bellum conditions, while those of a century ago were resolved upon such a course and wrote their resolve into the document of Vienna.

To erect a new Poland, a new Servia, a new Bohemia, to expand Rumania by including within its frontiers millions of Rumanians now subject to Austria and Hungary, to unite with Russia some millions of Slavs between the Carpathians and the Bug and Dneister, to put Russia at the Golden Horn as a final barrier to Teutonic ambitions as Prussia was put on guard at the Rhine against France a century ago, to remove that Austrian sovereign at Sofia who has used his Bulgarian throne to serve German ends, and probably to dispose of the Greek royalty which has led Greece to the verge of ruin, thus removing two tools of Berlin—these are the major purposes of allied policy now.

Besides these the Belgian problem and that of Alsace-Lorraine are minor, although both are essential, details in the allied scheme of a new Europe. Nor should one overlook the fact that far-sighted Britons already recognize that it will probably be necessary for Great Britain to maintain garrisons along the Meuse to protect Belgium from a new inrush of Germans, as British and Dutch troops were frequently maintained in the barrier fortresses facing France along the Scheldt and the Meuse in the eighteenth century.

ALLIES PREPARED TO DRIVE SEVERE TERMS ON GERMANY

No Aim to Partition Germany.

I am anxious to have my readers see these circumstances now, because they will again and again underlie discussions of peace and operations of war until the end of the great struggle. The allies do not delude themselves into believing that any peace which they may impose upon Germany will be permanent. They do not expect to crush Germany and they have no purpose to partition Germany aside from returning Alsace-Lorraine to France and liberating the German Poles, because they realize clearly that such a course would but breed new conflicts.

They recognize that Germany, however financially exhausted at the end of the war, will emerge a great nation with at least 60,000,000 of people, and may recover with the speed that astonished the world in the case of France less than half a cenutry ago. But they do believe that they can greatly reduce the extent of the German menace by liberating a number of races which as subjects of Germany's Austrian partner, have furnished millions of soldiers for the central Powers.

A Poland erected in part out of lands once Prussian—but it should be remembered that they were Polish before they were Prussian—and always menaced by another German attack; a Bohemia freed from Teutonic domination, after long centuries of struggle; a Cervia expanded into a great state owing its existence to allied policy — these three states will not soon fall into the German scheme of things, and the German dream of an empire from the Baltic to the Persian Gulf will be abolished forever.

Chances of a Separate Peace.

German policy will naturally be to seek a separate peace with one of her foes: with Russia, by consenting to a return to the conditions of 1914, with possible Austrian concessions in Galicia and neutralized Straits to meet the Constantinople situation; with France to whom Alsace-Lorraine might even be offered; but a separate peace with France is hardly thinkable after recent events. Austrian policy must continue to be dominated by Berlin and until the general collapse, unless the young Emperor shall have the courage and the strength to free himself from Germany and join with the foes of his present ally, an event hardly to be expected.

Now this political policy calls for never ending military action. It means that the allies from all sides must press on and pound on. The strategy is not comprehended in the advance to a certain point or the capture of a fortress, a "line" or a province. British and French strategy is that of Grant in our Civil War and Sir William Robertson, the British Chief of Staff, told me in London that the Civil War history was in the mind of all British soldiers, citing to me Henderson's book, "The Life of Stonewall Jackson," as the textbook of the British army.

Grant's strategy was one of pounding until his enemy, weaker in all things save courage and military skill, should collapse. With more men, more guns, more munitions, the allies are pounding and will continue to pound the Germans. They are fighting with a certain end in view, and this end will not be achieved by any limited victory. The terms that the allies mean to impose upon Germany are terms which represent to them the insurance against the repetition of the present catastrophe, which is the only real profit the war can have for the nations now fighting. Their terms are terms which only an exhausted nation could accept, because they carry with them the doom of all the dreams of German patriots and statesmen for a century. If they are imposed not only will Germany be actually weaker in Europe than before the war, but her colonies overseas will be lost and the one roadway to new colonies, the roadway from Berlin to Bagdad, of which she holds almost all today, will be barred by new strong states, behind which, at Byzantium, is Russia.

Eighteen Months More.

I have tried to make this situation clear because before I went to Europe I shared and expressed the view of many Americans that a negotiated peace was possible. It may be 18 months hence, but not earlier, in my judgment. The allied policy, outlined above, will, I believe, remain in allied minds until a year from next autumn, unless Germany surrenders, wins, or a German revolution changes the face of things. And even in the last case, the modifications will not be material, for Great Britain feels now, as France has felt all along, that between the Kaiser and his people there was no difference of purpose in the last days of July, 1914, and that both equally "willed this war."

CATSKILL SKETCHES AT LIBRARY

Ivan F. Summers' Work Put on Exhibition.

Eighty-five landscape sketches of the Catskill Mountains, in the vicinity of the place where Rip-Van Winkle is supposed to have slept for 20 years, are on exhibition in the art room of the Public Library. The sketches were done by Ivan F. Summers of Mount Vernon, Ill., who attended the St. Louis School of Fine Arts, and who has just returned to St. Louis after his trip to the mountains.

Last year Summers was awarded second prize for a landscape picture in the annual St. Louis art contest held by the Artists' Guild, of which he is a member. The sketches will be on exhibition for the month of April. Summers worked from Woodstock, N. Y., Lyme, Conn., and New Hope, Pa., in making the sketches.

250 of the Celebrated

Herrick Refrigerators

at 25% Less than Regular Retail Prices

We bought 250 Herrick Refrigerators, assorted styles and sizes, especially for the Anniversary Sale and will offer them at the extraordinary concession of 25 per cent off regular prices.

This is a tremendous transaction and, while the quantity is large, we expect to sell them rapidly. The offer is all the more notable because it includes practically every family-size Refrigerator made by the Herrick people.

Their construction is unsurpassed—the cases are of solid oak and the doors and walls are perfectly insulated with mineral wool—which is the best-known non-conductor of both heat and cold.

But the CIRCULATION SYSTEM of the HERRICK is its chief feature and in which it is acknowledged to excel. It provides a constant stream of pure cold air to every part of the refrigerator, not only keeping the contents cold, but free from all odors, taint and mould.

CHRISTIAN BROTHERS MAY BUY SMITH ACADEMY PROPERTY

Would Also Acquire Manual Training Buildings to Replace Those Burned.

The Christian Brothers, whose college was destroyed by fire last fall, are considering the purchase of the buildings now occupied by Smith Academy and the Manual Training School at Von Versen avenue and Windermere way.

It has been decided by the Washington University Corporation to discontinue the two schools at the end of the present school year. The undergraduate activities of the Manual Training School will be continued at the university.

The reason given for the discontinuance is that public high schools are adequately supplying educational needs along academic lines, and in the work which has been done by the preparatory department of the Manual Training School.

The Christian Brothers, since the fire, have sold their property to the city for park purposes and are under the necessity of obtaining a new location if they are to continue their work. They have been occupying one of the buildings at Von Versen avenue and Windermere way since the fire.

Doctors Stand Amazed at Power of Bon-Opto to Make Weak Eyes Strong—According to Dr. Lewis Guaranteed to Strengthen Eyesight 50% In One Week's Time in Many Instances.

A Free Prescription You Can Have Filled and Use at Home.

Philadelphia, Pa. Victims of eye strain and other eye weaknesses, and those who wear glasses, will be glad to know that according to Dr. Lewis there is real hope and help for them. Many whose eyes were failing say they have had their eyes restored by this remarkable prescription and many who once wore glasses say they have thrown them away. One man says, after using it: "I was almost blind. Could not see to read at all. Now I can read everything without my glasses and my eyes do not hurt any more. At night they would pain dreadfully. Now they feel fine all the time. It was like a miracle to me." A lady who used it says: "The atmosphere seemed hazy with or without glasses, but after using this prescription for 15 days everything seems clear. I can read even fine print without glasses." Another who used it says: "I was bothered with eye strain caused by overworked, tired eyes which induced fierce headaches. I have worn glasses for several years both for distance and work, and without them I could not read my own name on an envelope or the typewriting on the machine before me. I can do both now and have discarded my long-distance glasses altogether. I can count the fluttering leaves on the trees across the street now, which for several years have looked like a dim green blur to me. I cannot express my joy at what it has done for me."

It is believed that thousands who wear glasses can now discard them in a reasonable time and multitudes more will be able to strengthen their eyes so as to be spared the trouble and expense of ever getting glasses. Eye troubles of many descriptions may be wonderfully benefited by the use of this prescription. Go to any active drug store and get a bottle of Bon-Opto tablets. Drop one Bon-Opto tablet in a fourth of a glass of water and let it dissolve. With this liquid bathe the eyes two to four times daily. You should notice your eyes clear up perceptibly right from the start and inflammation and redness will quickly disappear. If your eyes bother you even a little it is your duty to take steps to save them now before it is too late. Many hopelessly blind might have saved their sight if they had cared for their eyes in time.

Note: Another prominent Physician to whom the above article was submitted, said: "Yes, the Bon-Opto prescription is truly a wonderful eye remedy. Its constituent ingredients are well known to eminent eye specialists and widely prescribed by them. I have used it very successfully in my own practice on patients whose eyes were strained through overwork or misfit glasses. I can highly recommend it in case of weak, watery, aching, smarting, itching, burning eyes, red lids, blurred vision or for eyes inflamed from exposure to smoke, sun, dust or wind. It is one of the very few preparations I feel should be kept on hand for regular use in almost every family." Bon-Opto, referred to above, is not a patent medicine or a secret remedy. It is an ethical preparation, the formula being printed on the package. The manufacturers guarantee it to strengthen eyesight 50 per cent in one week's time in many instances or refund the money. It can be obtained from any good druggist and is sold in this city by Johnson-Enderle-Pauley, Judge & Dolph, Wolff-Wilson and others.—ADV.

CO-OPERATION IN SOCIAL SERVICE WORK ADVOCATED

Y. W. C. A. Secretaries Will Outline Plans to Other Organizations at Meetings in Next Three Weeks.

The Young Women's Christian Association has asked women's organizations of the Protestant churches and the Federated Women's Clubs and Parent-Teachers' Associations to co-operate with it in religious and social service work as a means of promoting more effective work and better results for all of the organizations than could be accomplished by them singly.

Secretaries of the Y. W. C. A. and directors of the association will bring the work of their organization before these clubs and societies at meetings during the next three weeks, and an effort will be made to have the Y. W. C. A. placed on the regular yearly budget of each as a part of the benevolent fund.

Money from such a source will not apply to the present current expense shortage. A fund of $10,000 now is being raised by popular subscription to meet this shortage and $5147 already is in hand. All organizations which contribute annually to the Y. W. C. A. work will be assured their donations will be used for the specific purpose for which they are sought. This will greatly enlarge the scope of the association's work.

ROGER BALDWIN TO DIRECT ANTI - MILITARISM UNION

Roger N. Baldwin, secretary of the Civic League since 1910, has resigned to become director of the American Union Against Militarism, an organization opposing conscription, with headquarters in New York. Baldwin has been in New York for a week on leave of absence, and his resignation was received through the mails yesterday and accepted.

In his letter to the Civic League, Baldwin announced he accepted the position with the New York organization to serve without pay and for purely patriotic motives.

Baldwin came to St. Louis in 1906 from Boston, shortly after his graduation from Harvard University, to take charge of the department of sociology at Washington University. In 1907 he was appointed chief probation officer of the Juvenile Court and served in that capacity until he became secretary of the Civic League. In collaboration with Bernard Flexner of Chicago he wrote a book on "Juvenile Courts and Probation." He is a member of the Executive Committee of the National Conference of Charities and Corrections.

BELL TELEPHONE CO. ASKS EMPLOYES TO FORM SIGNAL CORPS

Men Will Be Given Leaves of Absence and Pay for a Year.

The Southwestern Bell Telephone System is asking for volunteers among its employes to form two companies of the Reserve Signal Corps. Each of the companies will consist of 100 men under a Captain, comprising two master signal electricians, 18 Sergeants, 17 Corporals, [illegible] privates and two cooks, with an equipment of eight motor trucks and 11 motor cycles. Two such companies, with headquarters and supply detachments totaling nine men, constitute a battalion, commanded by a Major.

The company will grant leaves of absence to such enlisted employes when ordered to duty by the President in war time, give them full pay until the end of the month in which they are called into service, and for a year make up to them the difference between their wages with the company and the pay given by the War Department. After that time further consideration will be given to the question of payment. The employes by such service will not prejudice their rights to pension, disability and death benefits under the company's regulations, and on their return will receive such employment as the needs of the company permit.

One of the two companies planned will be formed in Texas and the other in St. Louis and Kansas City. The Major and three First Lieutenants will be recruited in St. Louis, one Captain and two First Lieutenants in Texas, and one Captain and one First Lieutenant in Kansas City.

Applications maye be made by any employe in good physical condition, not less than 18 nor more than 45 years old, and who is a citizen of the United States or has applied for first papers. Experience in any of the following lines will be advantageous, though not essential, to the applicant: Construction and maintenance of any part of a telephone plant, operation of Morse instruments or the use of telegraph codes, operation of radio apparatus and operation of or repairing motor vehicles. If more applications are received than are needed for the initial two companies, they will be filed for the possible formation of additional ones.

FEDERAL EMPLOYMENT BUREAU SAYS FARM HANDS ARE WANTED

Demand for Experienced Men in Missouri and Iowa—No Charge Made to Applicants.

The Federal Employment Bureau, conducted at 17 and 19 North Eighth street, in co-operation with the Missouri Labor Department, announces that in Missouri and Iowa there is now a brisk demand for experienced farmhands, at wages of $25 to $35 and more a month, with board, lodging and laundry included.

This bureau does not accept fees from either employers or employes, and obtains work for applicants without the cost of a cent to them. Its reports for March shows that it had requests from employers to find men to fill 1086 jobs and that 581 persons were referred to employment, the number of applicants for work not being sufficient to supply the demand.

The bureau does not furnish merely common labor, but clerks, bookkeepers, stenographers and teachers. Even clergymen and physicians have registered for employment.

WOMAN CONVICTED OF KILLING HUSBAND TO BE PAROLED

Mrs. Elizabeth Metz Sentenced to Six Months for Manslaughter With Leniency Recommended.

Mrs. Elizabeth Metz, 25 years old, of 3139 North Thirteenth street, was found guilty of manslaughter by a jury in Judge Shields' Court yesterday for shooting and killing her husband, Fred, April 2, 1916. The jury sentenced her to imprisonment in jail six months, but recommended a parole, which Judge Shields said he would grant.

Mrs. Metz testified that she and her husband were living apart at the time of the shooting, and that she shot when he threatened her in attempting forcibly to take their daughter, Catherine, from her. The shooting occurred at the home of her brother-in-law, John Homan, 3915 Blair avenue, where Mrs. Metz and the child were living.

CAMPS FOR TRAINING OFFICERS

The selections for these camps will be announced within a few days and members of the officers reserve corps will begin intensive training to educate them for their duties before the call for 500,000 men is issued.

Women to Burlesque Legislators.

The play was written by Prof. Tyrrell Williams of Washington University. Among those taking part will be Mrs. Walter Fischel, Mrs. E. M. Aged Belleville Tailor Dies.

Fritz G. Gaerdner, 68 years old, a tailor, died at the home of his son, Peter Gaerdner, 306 North Charles street, Belleville, Friday night. He was a native of Hanover, Germany, and had been a resident of Belleville for nearly half a century.

30 ENEMY PLANES BROUGHT DOWN BY AMERICAN FLYERS

Germans Said to Know and Avoid Contact With Lafayette Corps Over French Lines.

PARIS, April 7.—The Lafayette Flying Corps, composed of American aviators and commanded by two French officers, Capt. George Thenault and Lieut. De Laage de Maux, has shot down 30 German aeroplanes, according to a semi-official communication to the Associated Press today. Sergeant Raul Lufbery has accounted for six, sub-Lieut. Bert Hall for three and a number of others for one each. The late Sergeant Norman Prince shot down two and the late Sergeant Kiffen Rockwell two.

Speaking of Sergeant Rockwell, who had the honor of bringing down the first victim of the American squadron, Capt. Thenault said:

"Rockwell scarcely gave his helper time to fill the gasoline reservoir between flights. He was always where the German machines were thickest. Over Vaux and Douaumont (in the battle of Verdun) he forced many of them to land behind their own lines to escape him."

The Lafayette Corps appears from this communication to have participated in the severest battles of Verdun and the Somme, contributing largely to the security of French aviators by relentlessly pursuing German machines and mastering the air over the fields of battle, thus enabling the observation pilots to regulate the fire of the French arillery. It was the Lafayette Corps that escorted the squadron and bombarded the Mauser rifle works at Obendorf, in the course of which there were numerous engagements, three German machines being brought down.

Sergeant Lufgerry, with six German machines to his credit, is now rated among the expert aerial fighters. The work of the Americans, however, cannot be measured by the number of machines actually credited to them, because they are often fighting behind the German lines and airplanes which fell there are not credited in the count. Moreover, the Lafayette Corps is now well-known to the Germans, who avoid contact with the Americans over the French lines.

LINCOLN'S SPIRIT LIVES IN WILSON, SAYS BRITISH POET

Tribute to President of United States Written by Dr. R. W. Macon of Oxford University.

LONDON, April 7.—The following poem by Dr. R. W. Macan, master of the University College of Oxford, is published in the Times:

The spirit of Abraham Lincoln is not dead—
The man who freed the slaves and saved the State—
It marshals, like a holy, guiding fate.
And Wilson says what Lincoln might have said,
And does, as Lincoln did, just not too late;
The people's minds asked time to educate,
Then followed where their chosen Captain led.
The causes were the same in essence then
As now; but only set democracy
And union over against the Satanism
Of Prussia, Prussia's feud with liberty,
Prussia's ambition, Prussia's world-wide schism,
Wilson's are Lincoln's words to living men.

WIFE SUES FRANK B. WYETH FOR SEPARATE MAINTENANCE

She Alleges That Although His Income Is $6000 to $8000 a Year, He Has Not Supported Her.

Mrs. Mary T. Wyeth yesterday filed suit for separate maintenance against Frank B. Wyeth, alleging that although he has an income of from $6000 to $8000 a year from the estate of his father, John H. Wyeth, and $3000 a year from his business as an automobile salesman, he has not contributed to her support since they separated March 16 last. They were married March 25, 1896, and have one daughter, Margaret, 18 years old.

Wyeth's interest in his father's estate is held by the St. Louis Union Trust Co. as trustee, and the Court is asked to order the trustee to withhold quarterly payments subject to her suit. They lived at 5356 Page boulevard.

On the day before Wyeth and his wife separated he was sued for $20,000 damages by F. D. Asbury, a traveling man, on a charge of alienating the affections of the latter's wife, Mrs. C. Asbury.

MEXICAN SOLDIERS' PAY RAISED

Privates Receive 50 Cents, Out of Which He Feeds Himself.

MEXICO CITY, April 7.—It is announced that under an army reorganization plan the army corps of the North, Southeast, East and Southwest will be abolished and the army redivided into divisions and brigades. This will tend to bring the units more closely under the direct orders of the Secretary of War.

The pay of the Mexican soldiers has been increased so that privates now receive about 50 cents a day. Out of this he must feed himself.

Falsehood Sends Man to Army.

New Method of Reducing Fat

A news item from abroad informs us that the American method of producing a slim, trim figure is meeting with astonishing success. This system, which has made such a wonderful impression over there, must be the Marmola Prescription Tablet method of reducing fat. It is safe to say that we have nothing better for this purpose in this country. Anything that will reduce the excess flesh two, three or four pounds a week without injury to the stomach, the causing of wrinkles, the help of exercising or dieting, or interference with one's meals is a mighty important and useful addition to civilization's necessities. Just such a catalogue of good results, however, follow the use of these pleasant, harmless and economical little fat-reducers. We say economical because Marmola Prescription Tablets (made in accordance with the famous prescription) can be obtained of any druggist or the makers, the Marmola Co., 864 Woodward Av., Detroit, Mich., for 75c the large case, which is a decidedly economical price considering the number of tablets each case contains. They are harmless.—ADV.

SHIPPING SAID TO BE CHIEF NEED OF ALLIES FROM U. S.

Carrying of Food and Steel Would Most Effectively Aid Them, Briton Says.

NAVY'S HELP IMPORTANT

Inventive American Minds Expected to Do Much in Nullifying Submarine Menace.

LONDON, April 7.—The highest, most responsible authority in England, asked by the Post-Dispatch correspondent in what way the United States can give the most immediate and effective aid to the entente allies, answered:

"Undoubtedly in shipping; that is, by repairing and fitting out the interned German liners, by putting American ships now in the coastal trade on trans-Atlantic service carrying food and steel for the allies and by employing all the vast resources of the United States in shipbuilding.

"Steel is extremely important. Our consumption is enormous and we need all the steel we can get, not only for munitions and so forth, but for shipbuilding.

"Then, the United States can provide some of the finest fighting material in the world. I look forward to seeing Americans giving one more proof of their qualities as great soldiers, and I hope it will be on German soil.

"It is well to reckon on the war not being over this year, so America will have a chance of throwing in her legions when they will be of the highest value.

"Your navy, too, is well known to be equal to the most efficient in existence and its aid will be of immense importance in defeating the submarine menace.

"Perhaps the keen, inventive and resourceful mind of America may discover some method by which the U-boat menace can be entirely nullified. We have various devices which are doing good work. It takes two submarines now to do the work that was done by one at the beginning of the unrestricted campaign. Any day the discovery may be made which will reduce them to utter uselessness and in the search for that discovery America will play her usual enterprising and brilliant part."

French Official Says U. S. Should Mobilize War Industries.

PARIS, April 7.—Louis Loucheur, Under Secretary of State for Munitions, pointed out today the importance of America's entrance into the war, adding, he said, so largely to the material resources of the allies as to give them a decisive superiority over Germany.

"As an official in charge of munitions," he said, "I fully appreciate the statement in President Wilson's message that the country's material resources must be organized and mobilized. War is largely a question of material. It is no longer a question of valor of men, but you must put into the hands of the men an overwhelming material superiority.

"One of the chief lessons of the war is that the more we achieve in producing materials the more we must continue to achieve and intensify the achievement until overwhelming superiority is secured.

"America should ship us vast quantities of raw materials in American bottoms. Let her build as many ships as possible immediately. Were I an American I would start a huge shipyard and turn out a ship of medium tonnage a day. This would not only be a decisive help in the war, but would create for America a permanent merchant marine which would assume an extraordinary position of power in the future.

"There are three lines on which America can lend great material help: First, by doubling her output of munitions; second, by constructing a large merchant marine quickly; third, by using this merchant marine to send raw materials abroad. In mobilizing industry America may have to sacrifice her luxuries. Factories which are making touring cars should be transformed into war factories. America can also help greatly in increasing the allies' aerial fleet. Let America turn out 100,000 airplanes. She can do it and it would be a decisive element."

Summing up, M. Loucheur said:

"Never despise or underrate the strength of your enemy. That is a primary condition if you wish to be strongest. We have indeed a powerful enemy before us, but we believe Germany has reached the maximum of her industrial power, whereas the industrial resources of the allies are increasing constantly.

Bartlesville Chief of Police Convinced He is on Trail.

BARTLESVILLE, Ok., April 7.—That German spies are at work in this city and that there is a secret organization here working in the interest of the Teutonic Powers, is the statement of Charles Allen, Chief of Police.

The statement has caused no little worry here, where the three largest smelting plants in the world are located Extra guards have been placed at these plants, for it is there that material for war munitions is produced and shipped to France and Italy. It is said a secret organization favorable to the German cause was organized here more than a year and a half ago.

CAPTAIN TELLS OF MISSOURIAN'S LOSS WITH FLAG FLYING

Declares American Steamer Could Have Been Saved if She Carried Guns.

FIRST TORPEDO MISSED

Crew Took to Boats When Unidentified Submarine Began Shelling Ship.

WASHINGTON, April 7.—Capt. Lyons of the American ship Missourian, destroyed by an unidentified submarine, stated in his report to the American Consul at Genoa that the Missourian could have been saved had she been armed.

In part, the report of the master, transmitted to the State Department today, follows:

"A submarine, without warning, fired a torpedo which just missed the stern of the vessel. Shortly after, the submarine rose to the surface, and began shelling the ship. One of the shells passed through the chief engineer's room, another through the master's cabin, others hitting the ship in various places. After the shelling commenced the vessel stopped, and all hands took to the boats.

"The shelling continued, some shells falling near the boats. There were about 40 in all. After the boats were about two miles from the ship, the submarine, which had been coming closer, and when it was about a ship's length away, fired a shell which struck amidships, then the submarine fired another torpedo which struck about 40 feet from the stern on starboard side. The vessel listed to starboard, righted herself and then went down by the stern.

"The boats were picked up and towed to Maurice, arriving there about 11 o'clock the same day. The Missourian was unarmed. She could have been saved had she carried guns and gunners.

"The submarine was from 275 feet to 300 feet long, with a tower, and was armed with one gun forward and one gun aft. She bore no flag or visible marks.

"The Missourian had the American flag painted on each quarter and bow, both sides, and the name of the vessel and the home port on each side. The ensign was flying when the vessel sank, and the nationality of the Missourian could easily be seen by the submarine. Weather clear; sea moderate."

KINDERGARTENS NEXT YEAR THE SCHOOLS OF TEXAS

Wherever 25 Persons in District Ask Such a Department, It Must Be Opened.

AUSTIN Tex., April 7.—School authorities throughout this State probably will be compelled to provide facilities for several thousand free kindergartens in the schools before the opening of the 1917-18 school year. Gov. Ferguson has signed the bill making this addition to the schools mandatory, the only prerequisite being a petition to that effect by 25 persons having children between the ages of 5 and 7 years, and living within one mile of the school.

Women of the State were the earnest champions of the measure, and it is safe to predict that such petitions will be presented to the authorities of most the 9000 common grade schools and 900 grade schools in independent school districts.

The problem of expense in maintaining the kindergarten is the main one with the various superintendents, who find the mandatory measure put upon them when about the limit of expense is already being undertaken. But they will have to trim somewhere. The petitions for the kindergartens must be presented between June 1 and Aug. 1 of the year that the school is to be established.

SUIT TO RETAIN A DOG IN SUPREME COURT

RICHMOND, Va., April 7.—In a final appeal to the highest tribunal in the State to be permitted to retain an ordinary hound, admitted to be worth only $7 and which had been running the gamut of the courts since Dec. 28 last, with consequent accumulation of costs, Edward Clatterbuck, a farmer of Madison County, lost both dog and costs.

Clatterbuck was resisting the claim of Clyde Garnett, who said that he had bought the hound from his opponent in the litigation.

In his appeal to the Supreme Court, Clatterbuck narrated that his family "had a peculiar affection for said dog, though he may not be personal property in the eyes of the law and may be valueless in the eyes of strangers, and orator and his family set great store on him."

The lawsuit started before a magistrate, who awarded the animal to Garnett and also fined Clatterbuck $11.90. The loser carried the case to the Circuit Court in an action for an injunction, which was refused, and then it was taken to the highest tribunal.

FIGHT REVEALS THEFT

COLUMBUS, Ind., April 7.—While Charles Garrett, 33 years old, was trying to sell a gold ring to Robert Graves, 20, the two quarreled over the price and Garrett knocked Graves down. He was arrested and when the officers searched him they found in his socks five gold rings, a gold locket and charm, half a dozen silver spoons, a razor and three safety razors.

Later the jewelry and spoons were identified as property stolen from the home of Miss Minnie Shultz, and Garrett was locked up, charged with burglary.

WIDOW IS ENJOINED FROM HAVING HUSBAND'S BODY MOVED

Rests in Cemetery with Five Generations of Relatives, and Court Orders It to Remain.

BARABOO, Wis., April 7.—To be enjoined by a court from ever removing the body of her husband from its resting place in the Indian Farm Cemetery at Caledonia is the predicament faced by Mrs. Maggie Harvey, formerly of Caledonia. The injunction was granted by Judge O'Neil in Circuit Court here.

The action was entitled Maggie Harvey vs. Rose Harvey, the former being a sister of the deceased, the latter the widow of George A. Harvey, who died at Glendive, Mont., and the body was brought to the Indian Farm Cemetery in Caledonia for burial.

The Harvey family has lived in Caledonia for about 60 years and five generations sleep in the burying ground. Mrs. Harvey originally agreed to the burial there, but became dissatisfied over the settlement of the estate and gave orders last summer to have the body removed to her present home at St. Albans, Io. A temporary injunction was granted the Harvey family to prevent the removal and this has just been made permanent.

Mrs. Harvey has the right to visit the grave at any time and give instructions for its care and in regard to the monument, but she cannot take the body away.

Asked Exemption on Cephalalgia.

LONDON, April 7.—Medical men are not always beyond attempting sharp practice, presumably when the fee is right. In a medical certificate submitted to a military tribunal it was stated that the holder was not fit for service owing to the fact that he suffered from cephalalgia. The term was too much for members of the tribunal, but one thought to inquire of a physician, who told him it was nothing but headache.

The lawsuit started before a magistrate, who awarded the animal to Garnett and also fined Clatterbuck $11.90. The loser carried the case to the Circuit Court in an action for an injunction, which was refused, and then it was taken to the highest tribunal.

FIGHT REVEALS THEFT

COLUMBUS, Ind., April 7.—While Charles Garrett, 33 years old, was trying to sell a gold ring to Robert Graves, 20, the two quarreled over the price and Garrett knocked Graves down. He was arrested and when the officers searched him they found in his socks five gold rings, a gold locket and charm, half a dozen silver spoons, a razor and three safety razors.

Later the jewelry and spoons were identified as property stolen from the home of Miss Minnie Shultz, and Garrett was locked up, charged with burglary.

WIDOW IS ENJOINED FROM HAVING HUSBAND'S BODY MOVED

Rests in Cemetery with Five Generations of Relatives, and Court Orders It to Remain.

BARABOO, Wis., April 7.—To be enjoined by a court from ever removing the body of her husband from its resting place in the Indian Farm Cemetery at Caledonia is the predicament faced by Mrs. Maggie Harvey, formerly of Caledonia. The injunction was granted by Judge O'Neil in Circuit Court here. The action was entitled Maggie Harvey vs. Rose Harvey, the former being a sister of the deceased, the latter the widow of George A. Harvey, who died at Glendive, Mont., and the body was brought to the Indian Farm Cemetery in Caledonia for burial.

The Harvey family has lived in Caledonia for about 60 years and five generations sleep in the burying ground. Mrs. Harvey originally agreed to the burial there, but became dissatisfied over the settlement of the estate and gave orders last summer to have the body removed to her present home at St. Albans, Io. A temporary injunction was granted the Harvey family to prevent the removal and this has just been made permanent.

Mrs. Harvey has the right to visit the grave at any time and give instructions for its care and in regard to the monument, but she cannot take the body away.

Asked Exemption on Cephalalgia.

LONDON, April 7.—Medical men are not always beyond attempting sharp practice, presumably when the fee is right. In a medical certificate submitted to a military tribunal it was stated that the holder was not fit for service owing to the fact that he suffered from cephalalgia. The term was too much for members of the tribunal, but one thought to inquire of a physician, who told him it was nothing but headache.

KAISER CALLS FOR DRAFT OF POSSIBLE INTERNAL REFORMS

Chancellor Ordered to Submit Proposals for Discussion With View of Putting Them Into Effect After War.

Emperor's Action Also Declared to Foreshadow Changes in Upper Chamber of Prussian Diet.

Developments in Russia and United States Have Caused Liberal Movements to Gain Ground.

AMSTERDAM, April 7, via London, April 8.—Emperor William has ordered the German Imperial Chancellor von Bethmann-Hollweg to submit to him certain proposals for the reform of the Prussian electoral law, to be discussed and put into effect after the conclusion of peace. An official telegram from Berlin announcing this order add that it foreshadows also the reform of the upper chamber of the Prussian diet.

The text of the Emperor's order to the Imperial Chancellor, who is also President of the Ministry of State, follows in part:

"Never before have the German people proved to be so firm as in this war. The knowledge that the fatherland is fighting in bitter self-defense has exercised a wonderful reconciling power, and despite all sacrifices on the battlefield and severe privation at home, their determination has remained imperturbable to stake their last for the victorious issue.

"The national and social spirit have understood each other and became united, and this has given us steadfast strength. Both of them realized what was built up in long years of peace and amidst many internal struggles. This was certainly worth fighting for. Brightly before my eyes stand the achievements of the entire nation in battle and distress. The events of this struggle for the existence of the empire introduce with high solemnity, a new time.

"It falls to you as the responsible Chancellor of the German empire and first Minister of my Government in Prussia, to assist in obtaining the fulfillment of the demands of this hour by right means at the right time and in this spirit shape our political life in order to make room for the free and joyful co-operation of all the members of our people.

"The principles which you have developed in this respect have, as you know, my approval. I feel conscious of remaining thereby on the road which my grandfather, the founder of the empire, as King of Prussia, with military organization and as German Emperor with social reform, typically fulfilled."

Movement for Early Reforms in Germany Gaining.

COPENHAGEN, April 7.—The declaration by the United States that a state of war exists with Germany and the question of internal liberal reforms in Germany have acquired an intimate connection through President Wilson's message. The German Government, though, of course denying the validity of President Wilson's statements, has hastened to counteract their probable effect.

The appearance of a semi-official declaration in the Nordduetsche Allegemeine Zeitung on the German Emperor's interest in reforms, testifies to the fear that President Wilson's arguments will get home to the Socialist and Liberal forces, who several weeks ago were saying much the same things as the President and were demanding that the Emperor identify himself with the Imperial Chancellor's promises of reform.

German newspapers of yesterday's date feature the announcement as the leading news of the day along with reports of the debate in the American Congress. Many of the newspapers follow the Allegemeine Zeitung's lead with articles telling of the firmness of the bonds uniting the Hohenzollern and other German dynasties with the German people.

Royal Indorsement Awaited.

The Vossische Zeitung takes the Allgemeine Zeitung's rather vague phrases on "Volkskoenigtum" or popular monarch of the Hohenzollerns and the attention which Emperor William has devoted to questions of a new order in the interior, as a royal indorsement of Chancellor von Bethmann-Hollweg's promises of reform, but most of the Liberal and radical organs apparently prefer to wait for more tangible proof.

There is every evidence, however, that under the influence of recent American and Russian developments, the movement of immediate introduction of liberal reforms, particularly the modernization of the Prussian Constitution, is steadily gaining ground. Chancellor von Bethmann-Hollweg, who in his last Reichstag speech declared emphatically Official forecast for St. Louis and vicinity: Rain or snow, followed by clearing; tomorrow fair and warmer.

WE ALL TAKE OFF OUR EASTER HATS TO UNCLE SAM.
APR 8 '17.

Supplementing this gloomy Easter forecast, the local Weather Bureau attaches let it be known that they expected the prospective rain or snow to end by noon, and that it would clear up somewhat for the big annual Easter parade in Forest Park in the afternoon. There were prospects, however, of cloudy weather in the afternoon.

The Weather Bureau, in the weekly forecast issued in Washington yesterday says:

"Except for rain Sunday in the central Mississippi valley and unsettled weather, with probable rains over entire district about Wednesday, the week will be generally fair. General rise in temperature Monday and Tuesday and moderate temperature."

5000 LOTS, FREE OF RENT, AVAILABLE FOR GARDENS HERE

They Will Be Assigned to Applicants at Headquarters of Thrift Gardens Committee.

More than 5000 vacant lots in the city are available, free of rent, to persons wishing to convert them into gardens, tennis courts or playgrounds. They will be assigned without cost to applicants at the headquarters of the Thrift Gardens Committee, 710 Locust street, which is connected with the St. Louis clean-up and paint-up campaign.

It is estimated that a garden 50 feet long and 25 feet wide will supply a family of six with fresh vegetables and yield produce worth from $50 to $100 each season, the only expenditures being labor, $2 for seeds and $5 for fertilizer. The movement is considered particularly apropos at this time, when economy and the conservation of food resources are more than ever necessary. Thursday and Friday, April 20 and 21, will be observed as "Thrift Garden Days," and women will sell literature relative to the movement.

BAND CAN'T PLAY ANTHEM AND JUDGE KICKS HOLE IN DRUM

Musicians Advertising Carnival in East St. Louis Disperse Without Remonstrating.

A band advertising a carnival was playing in front of the Illmo Hotel in East St. Louis yesterday afternoon, when Judge Daniel W. Maddox of the Litchfield (Ill.) City Court stopped and asked a member to have the band play "The Star-Spangled Banner.' The musician, in a German dialect, replied that it didn't know how.

Without a word Judge Maddox kicked a hole in the bass drum and walked away, while the crowd applauded. None of the members of the band remonstrated, but they stopped playing and dispersed.

GERMANS WITHOUT A COUNTRY

Thousands in U. S. Are Neither Germans Nor Americans.

NEW YORK, April 7.—Thousands of men and women of German birth who are not naturalized Americans have lost their German citizenship and virtually have no country, according to William F. Schneider, county clerk.

"Up to Jan. 1, 1914," Schneider explained, "the German Federal Law of June 1, 1870 concerning the acquisition and loss of Federal and State citizenship was in force. According to this law, a German lost his or her citizenship at the completion of the thirty-first year of his life. We have among us natives of Germany who, though they have not become American citizens are no longer Germans in the political sense of the word."

MEN STORM MARRIAGE BUREAU

Cries of "Slackers" Are Hurled at Chicago License-Seekers.

CHICAGO, April 7.—Braving the taunts of men and women, who hurled cries of "slackers" at them, 514 men stormed the marriage license clerk's office i nthe county building in three and a half hours today and established a record for licenses issued, the total being more than 10 times the average number obtained in a full day of eight hours. Of these 514 men only 60 swore they were above 30 years of age, the limit established by the proposed army bill for draft.

Scores of men, many of them accompanied by the brides-to-be, were in line before the windows hours before the bureau opened this morning.

WILSON CARTOON IN BERLIN

President Waving Flag Made of Dollars and Bank Checks.

AMSTERDAM, April 7.—The Ulk, the humorous weekly of the Berlin Tageblatt, prints a cartoon showing President Wilson smiling, waving a huge American flag with the Stars in the shapes of gold dollars and the Stripes made up of bank checks. Underneath is the legend: "Money alone does not give victory, dear Wilson. Look at England."

U. S. DENOUNCED BY SOCIALISTS HERE FOR ENTERING WAR

"BETRAYED THE PEOPLE"

Sessions of Convention Begun in St. Louis Attended by Secret Service Men.

Speeches in bitter opposition to America's participation in the world war were made by seven leaders of the Socialist Party last night at a mass meeting held at the Odeon in conjunction with the special convention of the Socialist National Party. The convention, which opened a week's session at the Planters Hotel yesterday, was called to discuss problems growing out of the entrance of the United States in the war.

United States secret service men were in attendance at the meetings, and will attend every meeting and public demonstration during the convention. This fact was known to the Socialist leaders, for Adolph Germer of Chicago, national secretary of the party, in opening his Odeon speech, began by addressing his hearers as "Comrades, friends and secret service men."

It was estimated 2000 persons were at the mass meeting, as there was only a scattering of vacant seats. Denunciation of America's entrance into the war was met with frequent vociferous applause, and not once was there a counter demonstration.

In the audience were hundreds of persons of foreign origin and of these Jews predominated.

Another Meeting Planned.

Frank O'Hare of St. Louis, who presided, interrupted the speaking to assert that the meeting was not as large as similar meetings that had been held in other cities. He explained that the Socialists could rent the Coliseum for $600 and advertise another mass meeting, to be held in the near future. He asked those who would contribute $1 each to defray the expenses of such a meeting to stand up. At least 600 responded. Cards for their signatures and addresses were distributed.

"The working men of the country were deceived by the cry 'He kept us out of war,' and President Wilson was elected under damnably false pretenses," declared Algernon Lee of New York, editor of a national Socialist publication. "The President betrayed the confidence of the people, and the Congress which passed the war resolution has done the same thing."

"Wilson has not kept us out of war and I have no reason to stand by him," asserted National Secretary Germer. "Wilson has betrayed us. Many Socialists voted for him at the November election because he did keep us out of war and we understood him to be promising to continue his stand."

Says People Opose War.

Germer asserted a majority of the people of the United States are opposed to war, and declared the time for protests and petitions had passed. "Action is what we need now," he shouted. "We must organize the industrial and political resources of labor and wrest the power from those who hold it.

"The war game is one for the profit of Wall street; we will have none of it. The fire kindled by the war has found its way to Russia and it will find its way to England, Italy and all the other autocracies of Europe, and to the United States. When it comes here the autocracy of Rockefeller and Morgan will be dethroned."

Germer maintained that the "mania and frenzy known as patriotism," exists only in Wall Street and the capitalistic press. He insisted he had no quarrel with the flag, but that he has a quarrel with the unjust conditions beneath it.

"Here is a statement I want the newspapers to publish," he shouted, shaking his clenched fist at the reporters seated nearby. "I saw, on April 20, 1914, in Ludlow, Col., the gunmen in the pay of John D. Rockefeller shoot the flag to ribbons and burn it to ashes but heard not a protest even from the secret service agents who were present and saw it done."

Lee said he had come to St. Louis to see whether it was possible that the West approved the war move, as the "lying newspapers of New York" had reported, and declared he was gratified to find that no such approval had been given. He said a vast majority of the wage earners of New York are opposed to the war.

Anna Maley, known nationally as a labor union agitator, who was the only woman speaker at the meeting, declared that the war in Europe would finally result in good, as "out of the welter of blood and the agony of the war would rise the people's will." She said the occasion was the first she had had to publicly congratulate Miss Jeanette Rankin of Montana, the only woman who ever sat in Congress, for her vote on the war resolution. "In the case of war," she said, "it may yet fall to we women to teach you men how not to do it."

Walter Thomas Mills admitted he didn't want to go to war with Germany. He said the United States captured more Germans a half century ago, without a single drop of blood being shed, than the combined armies of Europe have captured, with untold bloodshed, in three years. "They came here," he declared, "and promised to be

CUBA DECLARES STATE OF WAR WITH GERMANY

FOUR SHIPS ARE SEIZED

Vessels Taken in Havana Harbor Found to Have Been Damaged by Crews.

Panama to Help U. S. in Defense of the Canal

PANAMA, April 7.

THE President of the Republic of Panama, Dr. Ramon Valdez, signed a proclamation this afternoon committing Panama unreservedly to the assistance of the United States in the defense of the canal.

The President also cancelled the exequaturs of the German Consuls in Panama, thus severing diplomatic relations with Germany.

HAVANA, Cuba, April 7.—President Menocal, at 7:16 p. m., signed the joint resolution which had been passed by the Senate and the House late today, which declares a state of war exists between Cuba and Germany.

The Cuban authorities this evening seized four German ships interned in Havana harbor.

The war resolution was approved unanimously by the Cuban House of Representatives shortly after 6 o'clock this evening.

A short time before the House acted the Cuban Senate adopted the resolution by unanimous vote. Seventeen Senators were present. The only speech was delivered by Dr. Dolz, Conservative leader, who was chosen to speak in the name of the Cuban people.

The scene in the House was enlivening. The galleries were packed with men and women long before the session opened, the Ministers of France, Spain and Uruguay occupying seats in the diplomatic section.

After the reading of the joint resolution. Representative Alfredo Betancourt, speaking for the conservatives, made an impassioned speech in favor of its adoption. He was frequently interrupted by applause.

Cuban War Resolution.

Jose M. Cortinia addressed the House for the Liberal side in support of the resolution. Then by a rising vote the House unanimously adopted the resolution. The resolution follows:

"Article 1. Resolved, that from today a state of war is formally declared between the Republic of Cuba and the Imperial Government of Germany, and the President of the republic is authorized and directed by this resolution to employ all the forces of the nation and the resources of our Government to make war against the Imperial German Government, with the object of maintaining our rights, guarding our territory and providing for our security, prevent any acts which may be attempted against us and defend the navigation of the seas, the liberty of commerce and the rights of neutrals and international justice.

"Article 2. The President of the republic is hereby authorized to use all the land and naval forces in the form he may deem necessary, using existing forces, reorganizing them or creating new ones, and to dispose of the economic forces of the nation in any way he may deem necessary.

"Article 3: The President will give account to Congress of the measures adopted in fulfillment of this law, which will be in operation from the moment of its publication in the Official Gazette."

German Ships Seized.

Late in the afternoon Chief Inspector of the Port Panne notified Eusebio Azpiazu, Secretary to the President, that he had observed large volumes of smoke pouring from the funnels of the self-interned German ship Bavaria. Port police went aboard the ship and were informed by her commander, Capt. Graafles, that he, in compliance with orders from his Government, had attempted to damage the machinery in order to render the ship useless.

The crew, together with the captain and his wife, were removed, as were the crews of three other interned German ships in the Havana harbor. All were sent to Cabanas fortress.

The other vessels were found to have been slightly damaged. They are the Adelheid, Kydonia and Olivant. A rumor was current that it had been the intention of the Germans to move their ships out to the mouth of the harbor and sink them there, thus closing the port to navigation.

London Hears Brazil Will Declare War on Germany Tomorrow.

LONDON, April 7.—The Central News says it is semi-officially informed that a declaration of war by Brazil against Germany may be expected by Monday.

MORMON ADDRESSES PATRIOTIC

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, April 7.—Addresses voicing further appeal to the patriotism of Americans as being one of the essences of the Mormon Church, sounding a plea for temperance and appealing to members to fight and die for the nation, marked today's sessions of the eighty-seventh annual general conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints in the tabernacle. The conference concludes tomorrow.

WIRELESS PLANT REPORTED SEIZED AT REISINGER HOME

Daughter of Adolphus Busch Said to Have Admitted It Had Been in Operation.

ON NEW YORK ROOF

Her Son Credited With Having Been Treasurer of Paper, "The Fatherland."

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, April 8.—The New York Tribune this morning says:

"A wireless receiving station, said to be capable of receiving messages from Germany, has been in operation on the roof of the home of Mrs. Hugo Reisinger, widow or the millionaire art collector, who inherited one-seventh of the millions left by her father, Adolphus Busch, the millionaire St. Louis brewer and friend of the Kaiser, who twice decorated him.

"Mrs. Reisinger admitted today that it had been in operation to secret service men sent to the Reisinger home, at 993 Fifth avenue, by William Flynn, chief of the secret service. Mrs. Reisinger denied that it was operated with her knowledge. She told Chief Flynn's men that when she learned it was on her property she ordered it dismantled.

Trailed Wireless Operator.

The secret service agents learned of the existence of the wireless plant at the Reisinger home through the trailing of a German wireless operator to the house, which stands opposite the Metropolitan Museum of Art. The home was purchased as a gift for Mrs. Reisinger by her father six years ago, the purchase price being in the neighborhood of $900,000.

Here Mrs. Reisinger and her husband, until his death a little over two years ago, entertained German noblemen who visited this country and were diplomatically credited here by Berlin. Count von Bernstorff, when Ambassador here, visited the Reisinger home; so also did Geheimrath Heinrich Albert, the German privy counsellor.

Mrs. Reisinger's mother is now in Germany, where Adolphus Busch died a little over three years ago.

Son Was "Fatherland" Treasurer.

Although in middle life, Mrs. Reisinger is still beautiful and she looks little more than 30. Her son, Kurt, who lives with his family in a big house on Park avenue, was treasurer of "The Fatherland," now "Vierick's Weekly."

Mrs. Reisinger's husband, well known in this country for his love of art—his collection of paintings brought $218,000 at auction a little more than a year ago—in his will left bequests to the Metropolitan Museum of Art and to the Kaiser Freiderich Museum in Berlin.

Mrs. Reisinger is a sister of August A. Busch and Mrs. E. A. Faust. She was Miss Edmee Busch, and married Reisinger, a New York importer, in 1890. He died in September, 1914, when he and his wife were in Langenschwalbach, Germany, visiting Mrs. Reisinger's mother. They frequently visited in Germany. Mrs. Reisinger has been in New York for a number of years.

HOOVER TO HEAD COMMITTEE ON FOOD SUPPLY AND PRICES

Council of National Defense Enlists Belgian Relief Chairman to Combat Speculative Evils.

WASHINGTON, April 7.—Herbert C. Hoover will be asked by the Council of National Defense to head a national committee on food supply and prices to stimulate production and to prevent speculative prices. Hoover had charge of the distribution of American supplies in Belgium. It is understood he has agreed to become chairman of the committee.

At a meeting of its Advisory Commission today the council adopted this resolution:

"Resolved, That Herbert C. Hoover be requested to take the chairmanship of a committee on food supply and prices, which shall report to the council such experiences as European nations have had and advise as to proper methods of preventing recurrence, so far as practicable, of the evils arising out of speculative prices, and to stimulate increased production of all food supplies."

Hoover is in London in connection with his duties as chairman of the American Commission for Relief in Belgium.

"GERMAN" TAKEN OUT OF GERMAN DISHES ON MENUS

But the Pot Roast Remains the Same—Other Incidents of Second Day of War.

German fried potatoes, German pot roast and other dishes usually designated by the name "German" are no longer announced on the menus of most of the leading restaurants of St. Louis. Some of the popular-priced lunchrooms have made the same change. The dishes are served as before and cooked in the same way, but the Teutonic adjective has been dropped. This change has been made at the Jefferson, Planters, American and Annex hotels, McTague's restaurant, the Thompson restaurants and the Acme Restaurant.

A dispatch from Kansas City says that the Restaurant Association, including the managers of the popular-price eating places, voted to rename the German dishes. They will in future have such names as "American pot roast, patriotic style," and "American fried potatoes."

AUTOISTS MAY OFFER SERVICES

Three thousand members of the Automobile Club of St. Louis will vote in a few days on a proposition to offer the services of their cars and themselves to the Government in the case of a war need for machines and men.

A meeting of the Board of Governors of the club will be held at the club headquarters in the Planters Hotel Wednesday, at which W. H. Glasgow, who has studied similar propaganda in Eastern cities, will speak. At a later meeting a vote of the entire membership will be taken on the proposition.

RECRUITING TAKES BIG JUMP

Officers in charge of the local navy, army and marine recruiting stations reported yesterday that during the week recruiting had increased from 50 to 80 per cent. Out of a total of 537 applications made, 172 recruits were accepted, as follows: Navy, 87 applied, 51 accepted; army, 390 applied, 88 accepted; marines, 60 applied, 33 accepted.

RAILWAY TUNNELS PATROLLED

Guards from the First Regiment yesterday began patroling both ends of three railroad tunnels along the Meramec River, in St. Louis County. Two of the tunnels are on the Missouri Pacific, near Barrett's station, and one is at Meramec Highlands, on the Frisco.

BOY SCOUTS OFFER SERVICES

Boy Scouts and scout officials of St. Louis gathered yesterday afternoon in Forest Park for the reading of a proclamation of their loyalty and an offer of the services of their entire organization to the city in any capacity.

The proclamation was read to Mayor Kiel by Allen C. Orrick, president of the local organization, who said the boys were versed in first-aid methods, signaling and messenger service and stand ready and willing to assist in the present crisis. The bicycles, motor cycles, automobiles, tents and other equipment of individuals of the organization are at the disposal of the city at any time, the Mayor was told. There are 3500 Boy Scouts in the city.

NO EVIDENCE OF PLOT HERE

Edward J. Brennan, chief investigator here for the Department of Justice, yesterday said that the department had been unable to learn that there had been actual plotting in St. Louis against the Government.

Investigators have been busy here for several months and have traced many reports of disloyal remarks and violations of the law, but none have been found serious enough to justify arrests. Brennan repeated to a Post-Dispatch reporter the statement of Attorney-General Gregory, advising enemy aliens to "obey the laws and keep their mouths shut."

83 APPLY FOR FIRST PAPERS

Eighty-three applications for first papers were filed yesterday in the United States District Court. The majority were aliens from Germany and the others Austrians and Hungarians. This is a total of 2951 papers issued to aliens here since the diplomatic break with Germany and a record for the western district.

Chief Naturalization Examiner Bevington has gone to Washington to confer with Commissioner Campbell and ask for three extra clerks. About 270 applications for second papers have been filed since Feb. 3.

MAILS TO GERMANY SUSPENDED

WASHINGTON, April 7.—Postmaster-General Burleson today suspended mail service to Germany during the war and also instructed all postoffices to refuse as well any mail destined for Austria-Hungary, Luxembourg, Bulgaria and Turkey, as it cannot be dispatched at present without passing through Germany.

Postmaster-General Burleson also has suspended postal money orders between the United States and Germany. International money order offices will decline to pay orders drawn upon them by German offices on and after April 6.

BROTHERS UNDER ENEMY COLORS

CHICAGO, April 7.—Mme. Ernestine Schumann-Heink, grand opera singer, expressed the fear today that it may become necessary for her sons to fight against one another in the war between the United States and Germany.

Of her four sons, one is in the United States navy, another in the German navy, a third in the national guard of New Jersey, and the youngest is a student at the Culver Military Academy and liable to be called to the colors at any time.

$5,000,000,000 WAR LOAN PLANNED; ALLIES TO GET $2,000,000,000

Leaders Agree on Legislation to Be Rushed to Make Loan Available for Entente This Month.

DENOMINATIONS AS LOW AS $100 OR $25 PLANNED

Individual Investors Expected to Absorb Issue Quickly—Recent Conversations Have Shown Allies' Immediate Need Is Funds—Government to Charge Only What It Pays.

WASHINGTON, April 7.—Administration leaders in conference today decided to unlock at once the vast financial resources of the United States to the allies.

To relieve the economic needs of the Entente Governments a huge loan, of dimensions yet undetermined but not less than $2,000,000,000, will be forthcoming from this country as speedily as Congress can pass the necessary legislation.

Not a penny of profit, it was authoritatively stated, will be expected or received by this country on the loan. The loan will be America's immediate contribution to the allied cause, with the promise of other bountiful contributions of money, munitions, and foodstuffs to come as needed.

An immediate bond issue, possibly totaling $5,000,000,000, is forecast by today's action. The exact amount is yet to be determined.

Legislation providing for the issue will be introduced in Congress not later than next week. Possibly before the end of the present month a substantial portion of the great loan is expected to be available for the entente Governments. The forthcoming bond issue, it was said, will be placed before the public as quickly as possible in denominations down to $100, possibly to $25, will bear "a reasonable interest rate," and the entire army of American investors—banks, corporations and individuals—will have an opportunity to subscribe.

Expected to Be Taken Quickly.

Treasury Department and Federal Reserve Board officials believe that a $5,000,000,000 bond issue can be absorbed without difficulty by American investors and it is likely that this will be the first sum offered.

The present plan calls for the exchange of American money, dollar for dollar, for foreign bonds at par. Bonds of the entente Governments would be accepted by the American Government as security for the loan. The interest rate on the foreign bonds, it was said, will be the same as on the bonds to be issued by this Government in raising the big loan.

Thus, should the first loan to the allies be $3,000,000,000—a sum indicated by one official participating in the formation of the program—the United States would make this sum available out of proceeds of its own bond issue, taking bonds to the face value of $3,000,000,000 from the allied Governments to which the loan is made. The allied bonds would be held in the treasury here. Interest on them would be paid to the American Government at the same rate as the Government would pay on the American bonds sold in this country.

Not all of the first big bond issue, it was intimated, would be loaned to the allies, sufficient reservation being made to cover the naval and military needs of this country not met by taxation.

A considerable proportion of the $2,500,000,000 already asked of Congress for the military and naval establishments during the first year will be raised by increased taxation, possibly as much as $1,500,000,000.

The bond issue will be the first financial legislation of the war to engage the attention of Congress, under the present program and until after its passage Congress will not be asked to take up the question of war revenue taxation. The taxation, it is indicated, would probably require more time for passage than would authorization for a bond issue and would have to be based on data at present in process of tabulation.

Immediate Need Is Money.

The immediate need of the Governments making common cause with the United States in the war on Germany, it was pointed out, is money. Thus, while this country is raising and equipping an army and strengthening its naval forces, American money, mobilized now as never before, can be put to work as the United States' most immediately effective weapon against her enemy.

Intimations were conveyed that the issuance by the Government of a large loan to the allies would not be the only financial assistance to be given to them immediately, but that extension of private banking credits would be encouraged as well.

It also was revealed today that the administration had been in recent communication with the Finance Ministers of some of the allied Governments and that the immediate needs of those Governments were outlined. Official deputations from the chief allied Governments probably will be sent to the United States, it was said, to co-operate with American officials in devising the most effective method of placing funds at the disposal of the entente Governments.

The decision to advance the allies a great loan was reached in conferences this afternoon between Secretary McAdoo and Chairman Simmons of the Senate Finance Committee, Senators Lodge and Smoot, the former ranking Republican member of the Foreign Relations Committee, and Representatives Sherley, ranking majority member of the Appropriation Committee, and Fordney, Garner and Hull of the Ways and Means Committee. Chairman Kitchin of the Ways and Means Committee, and Representative Mann, Republican leader in the House, were unable to attend the conference.

"We all found we were thinking along practically the same lines," McAdoo said. "I expect to issue a definite statement within a day or two."

Advertising Campaign Planned.

Coincident with the determination to ask Congress to authorize a bond issue, general plans were discussed for a widespread advertising campaign. While officials foresee no difficulty in floating a $5,000,000 bond issue by popular subscription, no steps will be omitted to bring home to the American people that by subscribing to a loan for the allies they will be furnishing a most powerful weapon to their country.

There will be no underwriting by large private institutions of any part of the bond issue. All investors will be received on the same footing. Co-operation of all institutions, however, will be welcomed as a patriotic act, and there will be no disposition to refuse the aid of big private banking interests on the same basis as smaller investors.

Every effort also will be made to speed the authorization of the issue. It was understood to be the consensus of opinion at today's conference that Congress should pass the necessary legislation within a week and that the bonds should be placed on the market as soon thereafter as possible.

Subscriptions to the big issue will be taken by Secretary McAdoo and by agents whom he will designate. In this connection it is thought likely that the machinery of the Federal Reserve system will be utilized. State and private banks probably will be so utilized wherever they proffer their services, on the understanding that no commission will be charged and that no profit will be made upon any transaction in connection with the issue.

But it is not to the banks of the Federal reserve system that the administration is looking in financing the loan. Their funds are to be preserved intact, so far as possible, to meet the strain on the country's industrial and commercial life. The individual investor will be called upon to come forward as a patriotic duty, and subscribe as heavily as his resources will permit.

BAKER URGES QUICK ACTION ON BILL FOR ARMY OF 1,000,000

Secretary of War Pleads for Measure Before House Military Committee.

PROVIDES YEAR'S TRAINING

Conscription Necessary, but All Volunteers Can Be Absorbed, He Says.

WASHINGTON, April 7.—The administration took before Congres today its plan that the war army be organized along the lines laid down by the general staff, as meeting the demands of sound military principle.

At an executive session of the House Military Committee, Secretary Baker, speaking for the executive branch of the Government charged with prosecution of the war, made an earnest appeal for quick passage of the War Department bill providing for the training of an army of a million men raised by selective conscription within the next year.

Several members of the committee questioned the Secretary closely regarding the bill, but the only outward show of opposition to the administration plan was an announcement by Representative Anthony of Kansas, a Republican committeeman, that he would not support compulsory service.

Detailed consideration of the measure will be taken up Monday, when Baker, supported by Major-General Scott, chief of staff, and other high officers of the department, will outline the plan for raising the army of a million in a year, to be followed up at an accelerated rate by the training of as many more as may be needed. The Secretary assured the committee today that it was the judgment of the entire military arm of the Government, of himself and of President Wilson that to accomplish this purpose conscription must be applied from the very outset.

Volunteers Provided For.

Members of the committee suggested various methods of providing an army by voluntary service and Baker pointed out that ample provision was made in the administration bill for absorption of all volunteers of suitable age and physical qualifications in the first elements of the army to be raised, the regulars and the national guard. He indicated that the face of the administration was firmly set against any proposal to enlist volunteer organizations as companies, regiments, brigades or other units. There is no place in a modern army, he insisted, for such forces.

When committee members pointed out that many men were offering their services, provided they could go quickly to European battlefields, the Secretary replied that the plans of the department were designed to train an army, no element of which would be considered ready for actual conflict within a year.

It was made clear, however, that with a state of war existing, absolute jurisdiction over the use to which the armed forces would be put lies in the Commander in Chief, the President. Under the Constitution, he must determine what military policy is dictated by the needs of the military situation that confronts him.

Great Military School Needed.

The Secretary made it plain that the administration regards its immediate task as that of creating a great military school for the training of officers and men who will in turn train the half million increments of selective conscripts to be called later. Every man will be given an opportunity to show his worth in this preliminary force, it was stated, but the administration is resolved that only those who shall demonstrate their fitness shall retain their commissions or be passed on to officer the new armies. A rigid process of selection is to be applied during the preliminary months.

There was no discussion of the $3,-000,000,000 army budget which has been submitted, but at the War Department preparations were hurried along to fit the new armies with all appliances of modern warfare. Types of trench helmets, gas masks and other new devices have been adopted, and tentative arrangements made for their manufacture in large quantities. Orders have been placed for hand grenades in million lots, and every effort will be made to see that American armies lack for no valuable contrivance of defense or offense.

In announcing his opposition to the conscription feature of the administration bill, Representative Anthony said tonight he would offer an amendment providing for raising a volunteer army of 500,000.

Secretary Baker told the committee there are enough small arms to equip the first 1,200,000 men; that within 14 or 18 months most of the heavy ordnance necessary would be available, and that within two years there would be sufficient equipment to put 2,000,000 men on a complete fighting basis. He said there were 7,000,000 men in the country between the ages of 19 and 25, of which he estimated 4,000,000 were available for service after eliminating those in factories or in arts or sciences where they perform for preparation of the country for the war, and the men who have dependants or military defects.

AUTO OUT OF GAS, 2 MEN HURT

A policeman and a chauffeur were injured and two automobiles were damaged last night as the result of the machine of H. Parmey of 3504 Vista avenue runningn out of gasoline on the Grand avenue viaduct.

Parmey's machoine, without lights, came to a stop on the south end of the bridge. A delivery truck, driven by Archie Williams of 3057 Marcus avenue, struck it in the rear. Williams was thrown against the steering wheel and injured. Patrolman Wiley, while standing near the wreck of the two cars a short time later was struck by the machine of Henry Robinson, a salesman for the Ludlow-Saylor Wire Co. He was not seriously hurt.

NAVAL MILITIA PROMPT IN RESPONDING TO CALL

Missouri Reserves Quickly Appear at Armory and Don Uniforms—Expect to Move on Secret Orders.

All day yesterday Missouri naval militiamen were hurrying from all parts of the city to their armory at the foot of Ferry street, to answer the call to the colors. Each man, on arriving there, was ordered to "shift" from his civilian attire to his uniform.

The order to mobilize came Friday night. A dozen men were lounging at the armory when it was received. Paymaster O. Schwartz was the first man to respond and get into his uniform. The others quickly followed. The work of notifying the men by telephone was begun at once and was continued yesterday morning.

Chief Commissary Steward Laurent was placed in charge of the register. He sat at a small table with the book before him, and as each man entered his name was checked and the order to each was the same: "Put on your uniform, take your civilian clothes home and report back here at 4 o'clock.

There was no difficulty about getting the men to report. They were watching the newspapers closely and most of them learned first from that source about the call and reported either by telephone or in person without delay. They were as jaunty about it as if they were getting ready for a training cruise. They seemed anxious to go. It was not necessary to send a detail after any of them.

There was no recruiting yesterday, but several who had enlisted in the past few days presented themselves.

When the men reported at 4 o'clock it was to stay on the reservation until they are sent away. They will eat there and sleep there, curling in their hammocks or stretched on "deck." No information is obtainable as to when the militiamen will move and where they will go, but it is understood that they will stay on the reservation three or four days and will probably be joined there by the Kansas City company.

The St. Louis company numbers about 190 officers and men. The Kansas City company has a membership of 85. A good many of the men have served in the navy. Most of them have had sea experience on training cruises.

The naval guns with which the militiamen formerly drilled were sent back to the Navy Department in February. The converted yacht, Huntress, now on the ways in Carondelet, will be returned. Some of the men who formed the crew of 38 that brought the yacht up the Mississippi from Pensacola, Fla., in 1907, are still in the command and will help take it back.

Naval militiamen carry rifles. Each carries a kit that weighs 65 pounds. His equipment consists of two suits of "blues," four suits of whites, overcoat, jersey, a slicker outfit of rubber coat, pants, hat and boots, two blankets, a mattress, a mattress cover, a hammock, shovel, pick and hand ax in a field pack belt, canteen, mess kit, wire cutter in holster, rifle, bayonet and cartridge belt.

St. Louis Fleet Naval Reserve Men to Be Sent to Philadelphia.

Lieut. Langworthy, in charge of the naval recruiting station at Seventh and Chestnut streets, has issued mobilization orders to the nine men in St. Louis who are fleet naval reserve men. They are Adolph Richard Eckstrand, 4224 Amherst avenue; John Henry Grisser, 1406 Newhouse avenue; Claude Lester Moone, 1304 Mississippi avenue; Ernest Victor Moore, 1416 Dolman street; John Edward Roegger, 4912 Labadie avenue; August Holtz, 1407 Francis avenue; William A. Hoover, 912 Hodiamont avenue; Frank Feldman, 1724 Preston place; Jay A. Matthews, 4638 Shirley place.

They will be sent to Philadelphia and will probably be accompanied by reservists from the interior of the State and from other parts of the Central West.

Nelson Thomas is completing the mobilization and organization of the privately-owned motor boats around St. Louis which have been offered to the Government. They will be got in readiness quickly for any service that may be demanded of them. Those who have boats that have not been listed are requested to notify Thomas at the station at Seventh and Chestnut streets.

8000 Marines Reserves in This District to Be Called Out.

Orders were received yesterday by the marines recruiting station here to call out all marine reserves 40 years old and younger in this district, which includes Missouri, Nebraska, Kansas, Oklahoma and Southern Illinois. The officers estimated that there are 8000 reserves in the district, 600 being in St. Louis. There are approximately 50,000 in the United States.

F. E. Turin, of 5976 Kennerly avenue, a native St. Louisan, in charge of the marines recruiting station here, was made first sergeant yesterday.

Examination Begins Tomorrow for a Regiment of Artisans.

Col. Curtis McD. Townsend, of the Army Engineers' Corps, commissioned to raise a regiment of engineers, stated last night that the examination and enlistment of recruits would be begun tomorrow at the army recruiting headquarters, Third and Olive streets.

Recruits will be drawn from Missouri, Kansas and Colorado and the regiment, according to estimates, will be completed within two months. The regiment, which is to consist of 34 officers and 1035 men, will include photographers, lithographers, surveyors, draftsmen, carpenters, mechanics, blacksmiths, bridge carpenters, horeshoers, teamsters and firemen. and firemen.

KAISER CALLS FOR DRAFT OF POSSIBLE ELECTION REFORM

that he "was not yet convinced of the necessity of taking up Prussian electoral reforms before the end of the war," may, it is predicted, soon be brought to see another light.

The proposal for constitutional reform probably will be taken up immediately after the Easter recess of the Reichstag. The election of members of the Committee on Reforms is on the program for the first sitting April 24. In view of the largest majority favoring reforms, reaching from the Socialists well over into the ranks of the Catholic Center party, a resolution will be reported out speedily. It will undoubtedly embody a proposal to put the House on record as demanding the reforms of the Prussian Diet and a change in the district representation in the Reichstag, taking into consideration the growth and the shifting of the empire's population since 1871.

Radical Proposals in Disfavor.

It is doubtful, however, whether the more radical proposals, that the Reichstag should use its constitutional prerogative to provide by legislation for the introduction of diets based on free and equal suffrage in all the Federal states, will be accepted or that the crown will arbitrarily alter the Constitution of Prussia and abolish the three classes of franchise. Not all of the members of the Catholic center party favor these reforms, and an article in the Arbeiter, the organ of certain Catholic labor unions, opposes any weakening of the monarchy in Germany and particularly any step toward a parliamentary system of government.

The Tages Zeitung, in a Good Friday article, draws a thinly-veiled comparison between Chancellor von Bethmann-Hollweg and the diplomatic Pilate, "whose weak and indecisive attitude in the face of the mob oiled the fires of demagogic excitement and brought about his own ruin."

The chairman of the Constitutional Committee of the Reichstag will be a Socialist.

SOCIALISTS IN BIG MEETING HERE VOICE OPPOSITION TO WAR

good American citizens and not one of them has forgotten that promise or failed to keep it.

"The Germans of St. Louis, when the country went to war for the preservation of the Union and the abolition of slavery, wheeled out of the turnvereins here in solid ranks to fight for that cause, while the family of Woodrow Wilson was fighting for slavery."

Job Harriman of Los Angeles also protested against war.

Socialists Engage in Hot Debate Over Attitude in War.

The American flag and the red banner of international Socialism were displayed together above the speaker's table at the opening session yesterday of the Socialist National Convention at the Planters Hotel. About 200 delegates, who were said to represent every state, were in attendance.

Two occurrences of the day were the exhaustion of the stock of 5-cent cigars at the Planters news stand, the unusual demand causing a temporary famine until a rush order could be sent to a wholesale dealer; and a two-hour debate, at the afternoon session, over the question of applying an ironclad test to members of the Committee on War and Militarism.

The members of this committee, which is considered one of the most important in the party organization at this time, were to be elected, and there were about 30 candidates for the 15 places on the committee. L. E. Katterfeld of Seattle, Wash., before the balloting on the names began, offered a resolution calling on all the candidates to "answer yes or no" to the question whether they opposed every kind of form of war.

The discussion of this proposal soon became so warm that Morris Hillquit of New York, temporary chairman, complained that a spirit of suspicion was springing up, and that members were calling each other "Mister." He insisted that the term "comrade" should be used.

Speaker after speaker demanded the floor, and frequently there were hot verbal tilts. Time and again the speakers declared that the fate of the Socialist party in America depended upon the action of the committee, and that the Socialists of the world were turning their eyes to St. Louis to witness the proceedings.

Katterfeld's resolution was then put to a vote, and defeated by 96 to 66. The ballots were then cast and collected, and the result will be announced at the morning session today.

The convention today will entertain a motion to send a delegation to the National Progressive party convention, which convenes in St. Louis Wednesday.

A number of telegrams from Socialist organizations over the country were then read, each asking that the convention stand strongly against militarism.

Temporary Chairman Hillquit, at the morning session, recited the history of the party for several years preceding the war, and declared that the party and the movement have gone back since 1912.

CREW BLOWS UP GERMAN CRUISER AT GUAM; 7 KILLED

Explosion Follows Demand for Possession of Cormoran by U. S. Officials.

VESSEL WAS INTERNED

Those on Board, Totaling 353 Officers and Men Are Made Prisoners.

WASHINGTON, April 7.—The interned German auxiliary cruiser, Cormoran, at Guam, refused to surrender to the American forces which went to take possession of her and was destroyed by her crew today. Two German warrant officers and five enlisted men of the crew were killed in the explosion. Twenty officers, 12 warrant officers and 321 enlisted men were taken prisoners.

The Navy Department issued this statement:

"The German auxiliary cruiser Cormoran, was blown up in the harbor of Apra, Island of Guam, today, by her crew, sinking it. One warrant officer and one enlisted man are dead, one warrant officer and four enlisted men are missing, 20 officers, 12 warrant officers and 321 enlisted men have been made prisoners.

Permission to Cable Refused.

"On Oct. 28, 1914, the 35-foot cutter called the 'Ocean Comber,' entered the harbor of Apra, in charge of Lieut. von Elpons of the Imperial German navy. The boat and party of three officers and four natives of New Guinea had been at sea for a long time, having left S. M. S. 'Cormoran' for the purpose of sending a cable to San Francisco for supplies. The date of the cipher was Oct. 1, and the location of the Cormoran was not disclosed. Permission was not granted to send the cablegram and the officers and men were interned.

"On Dec. 14, 1914, the German auxiliary cruiser Cormoran appeared off the harbor of Apra, and sent a radio asking permission to enter for coal and provisions. She was allowed to enter and the commander to visit the Governor.

"Commanding officer Juckschwerdt stated that he had just come from the South Seas, and was short of coal, had only about 50 tons on board and requested 1500 tons of coal and provisions to reach his nearest home port in German East Africa. The Governor replied that he could furnish only 200 tons of coal and 30 days' provisions only could be spared; the commanding officer was given the alternative of departing within 24 hours or being interned.

"On Dec. 15, 1914, at 10 a. m., the commanding officer decided to remain in port and the ship and its personnel were interned.

"The following were on board: 21 officers, one midshipman, 11 deck officers, 307 petty officers and men, four Chinese and 29 South Sea natives."

Internment of the Cormoran at Guam has been the cause of continual conflict and disagreable incidents between the American naval officers in charge of the islands and the German crew.

Had Failed to Transfer Ship.

On several occasions former German Ambassador Bernstorff appealed to the State Department on behalf of the Cormoran's officers and crew to have the vessel transferred to San Francisco. Each time the Navy Department refused.

The Cormoran was chased into Guam by Japanese warships soon after the declaration of war between Japan and Germany. The ship had exhausted her fuel supply raiding commerce and was compelled to burn her woodwork structure to make steam under which she reached that port.

FIVE PERSONS HURT WHEN AUTO IS DRIVEN INTO CROWD

Were Waiting for Street Car at Grand and Delmar; Driver Escapes.

Five persons were injured when an automobile was driven into a crowd of persons waiting to board a southbound Grand avenue car at Grand avenue and Delmar boulevard last night.

Matthew McKirdie, a plumber, of 3761 Potomac street, suffered a fractured skull. Mrs. Jennie Ferrier, 3505A Utah street, Henry Petershagen, 1127 Pine street, and two children were slightly hurt.

The driver attempted to get away from the scene, which is a felony, and Harry Helmholt, a police chauffeur, jumped on the running board to stop him. The driver continued south on Grand avenue, his car colliding with an automobile belonging to R. B. Thompson of 6054 Berlin avenue, jolting Helmholt off. Thompson leaped on the running board, but Lindell boulevard the driver knocked him into the street.

On a description by persons who had witnessed the accident, the police later arrested Byron Onstott, 24, of 3516 Laclede avenue. He denied driving the car.

Four in Auto Truck Are Hurt.

A light automobile delivery truck owned by the Weber Grocery Co. and driven by Carl Withington, an employe, was struck by an Olive car at Delmar boulevard and Belt avenue last night. Withington and Ben Hoffner of 4342A Olive street and his two sons, James, 9, and John, 11, were thrown out. Withington suffered a fractured collar bone and scalp wounds. The others were bruised.

FRANCE ORDERS AMERICAN FLAG ON ALL PUBLIC BUILDINGS

President's Message Is to Be Posted on Public Billboards Throughout the Country.

PARIS, April 7.—The American flag will be flown from all public buildings in France as the result of an order issued today by Louis J. Malvy, Minister of Interior.

The Mayors of many towns have requested that the American colors be displayed on private residences.

The French Cabinet at a meeting today presided over by President Poincare, decided to have President Wilson's war message to Congress posted on all public billboards in France. With it will be posted speeches on America's entrance into the war delivered by Premier Ribot, M. Deschanel, President of the Chamber of Deputies and M. Dubost President of the Senate.

Jules Steeg, Minister of Public Instruction, has ordered that all school inspectors, professors and teachers see that on the re-opening of the schools after the Easter vacation President Wilson's message with President Poincare's telegram to the American President and the speeches of Ribot, Deschanel and Dubost be read to the pupils in all schools, lyceums and colleges.

"The reports show that the reserves of the banks amounted to $2,642,000,000," said the comptroller's announcement, "exceeding by $169,000,000 the greatest reserves ever previously held.

FRANZ BOPP IS INTERNED

SAN FRANCISCO, April 7.—Franz Bopp, German Consul-General here, surrendered to Federal authorities on his return tonight from St. Helena, Cal., and was taken at once to Fort McDowell, on Angel Island, the immigration station.

PLANS LAID TO STOP GERMAN AID FROM SOUTH AMERICA

Activities of Propagandists in That Section Have Caused Trouble for Some Time.

WASHINGTON, April 7.—Suppression of German propaganda in South America was discussed at the State Department today by Counsellor Polk and Ambassador Spring-Rice. Huge war profits made by Germans in South America, it is known, have been used for interfering in various ways with supplies to the allies and for furnishing supplies to German raiders.

An extensive German underground system has been established throughout many countries. Defeat of the system, it is declared, is made sure by the entrance into the war of the United States. This country and the allies now control most of the world's shipping and bunker coal and German agents in South America, if unneutral, can be kept from selling their goods abroad by refusal of cargo space and by refusal of coal.

Argentine has had the most trouble with German propaganda. German agents there are thought to have been instrumental in supplying raiders and to have brought about part of the condition that forced the Government to embargo foodstuffs, leather and other exports. Brazil, too, despite its present agitation for war, has suffered from German efforts, largely because of the large German settlements in South Brazil and Germa ncontrol of Brazilian exports.

ENTENTE'S AIMS IN WAR DEFINED BY MILIUKOFF

Russian Foreign Minister Declares Allies Have No Purpose of Usurpation.

WOULD REMAKE MAP

Frontiers to Correspond With Nationalities; in Accord With U. S.

PETROGRAD, April 7.—"I was always of the opinion that the United States would take part in the war on the side of the allies," said Prof. Paul N. Miliukoff, Minister of Foreign Affairs in the new Government, in an interview with press representatives today. "The definition by President Wilson of the purposes of the war corresponds entirely with the declarations of the statesmen of the allied Powers. M. Briand, Mr. Asquith and Viscount Grey all expressed themselves continually on the necessity of seeking to prevent conflicts of armed forces by providing peaceful methods of solution for international disputes and creating a new organization of nations based upon order and justice in international life. The democracy of free Russia is able to associate itself completely with these declarations.

No "Peace Without Victory."

"This concord between the United States and the entente Powers in the realm of ideas constituted the best guarantee of the imminent participation of America in the world-wide war against Germany. It is to be noted that even in formulating her aspirations towards peace Germany has always kept in view the maintenance of her own supremacy, desiring to place herself at the head of 'pacified mankind.' The only principle which has stood as a bar between us and President Wilson's international program was embodied in the phrase 'Peace without victory,' the renunciation of victory on the part of the allies would have meant the impossibility of dealing with the great problems the solution of which is recognized equally by President Wilson and the allies as indispensable.

"While the entente makes no pretention to world domination, Germany has continually insisted upon the idea that the old rights of nations no longer exist; that the races fighting against her are in a state of complete decadence; that it is Germany's task to institute a new order of the rights of nations—to reorganize Europe in accordance with her own interests.

"In these conditions Germany has constituted a unique and serious obstacle in the way of establishing definitive frontiers and developing normal international relations. Only a victory over Germany will make it possible for President Wilson's desires to be fulfilled."

Concrete Aims of the War.

"The President expressed himself not merely with reference to the general aims, but to the concrete aims of the war, namely, the liberation of nations, particularly Poland, and the assertion of the right of nations to freedom of the seas.

"None of the allies indulges in aims of usurpation. We all desire that the territories wrecked by force shall be restored and that frontiers shall be definitely established in accordance with nationality. In other words, the entente Powers will be able to consider their victory complete only when they have attained the fundamental conditions of the President's program—transformation of the map of Europe, especially to the southeast, upon lines which will insure durable peace and eliminate every pretext for new conflicts. We can speak of a peace without annexations, if by annexations we mean usurpation. With this important reservation, the words, 'peace without annexations,' represent the formula suggested to the allies by the German Social Democrats.

"A stalemate peace, a peace based based upon the status quo, all these formulas, mostly of German origin, accord completely with the interests of the Germans."

Referring to the Dardanelles, Dr. Miliukoff said:

"In the event of the neutralization of the Dardanelles, the entry of foreign warships into the Black Sea would force Russia to think perpetually about fortifying the Black Sea coasts and to maintain a powerful navy. Such a condition of things would be worse than what existed before the war. While closing the Black Sea ports to the warships of the other Powers, Russia preferred to allow the straits to remain in possession of a feeble and crumbling Turkey. If this situation becomes impossible it is due to the fact that Germany laid claim to the heritage of the Turk and raised the question as to who the straits were going to belong to, Germany or Russia."

National Aspirations.

Of the entente aims, the Foreign Minister said:

"Taking at its point of departure Germany's pretensions to create an unbroken range of territory belonging to herself or her allies from Berlin to Bagdad, the program of the entente pursues two harmonious aims in complete conformity with national aspirations, namely, the liberation of populations enslaved under Ottoman dominion and the fundamental reorganization of Austria-Hungary.

"The creation of a Czech-Slav state will serve as a boundary line for Germany's schemes of encroachment against Slav territories. Germany and Austria, as well as Hungary, will have to be confined within their ethnographic frontiers. The Italians will be joined to Italy. The Rumanians will be amalgamated with our own Ukraine. The natural problems of history demand the unification of Servian territories. Armenia must be placed under the protection of Russia. Recent events have clearly shown it to be impossible to allow the Armenian people to remain under the Ottoman yoke."

Discussing the last speech of the German Chancellor, the Minister said the friendship between Germany and Russia had lasted until 1891 and was promoted by Bismarck, but when the German Emperor dismissed Bismarck and began his "welt politik" and the German fleet began threatening to increase, the need arose for setting up a defense against German aggression. The German Government did not renew the old treaty of neutrality concluded by Bismarck.

"Germany herself, by her insatiable and insensate craving for supremacy, drove us into the arms of France and Great Britain," declared Dr. Miliukoff "As to the friendship between the former Russian Emperor and Emperor William, whatever Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg may say, it was of a purely dynastic character. During the war Prince Eulenburg endeavored to renew this dynastic friendship.

"Who, therefore, will believe that Emperor William was ignorant of the aims of Russian reaction?"

QUAKERS PROMISE HELP IN WAR

Society of Friends Announces Its Unwavering Suport of Government.

NEW YORK, April 7.—Twenty-three members of the Society of Friends issued a statement today outlining what the Quakers plan to do to help in the war. Although holding war and military power as "contrary to the spirit of God and the teachings of Jesus," the statement says Quakers subscribe to the objects of America's war as set forth in President Wilson's address to Congress and "unwavering support" to the Government is promised.

There will be work for all lovers of peace, it was declared, and Quakers could serve in various capacities "without hatred or animus."

BRITISH LOSE 28 AIRPLANES IN TWO DAYS OF FIGHTING

Fifteen German Machines Are Seen to Crash to Ground and 31 Others Are Driven Down Damaged and 10 Balloons Burned.

LONDON, April 7.—In terrific air fighting during the last two days and nights in Northern France, British airplanes carried out numerous raids and dropped more than eight tons of bombs. Twenty-eight British machines are missing, says the official statement from British headquarters in France tonight, and 15 German airplanes were seen to crash to the ground and 31 German machines were driven down damaged. Ten German balloons, the statement adds, were brought down in flames.

The official report reads:

"In the neighborhood of St. Quentin our troops gained ground during the night at a number of points between the villages of Selency and Jeancourt and reached the outskirts of Fresnoy-Le-Petit.

"There was considerable artillery activity on both sides today in the neighborhood of Arras and the Ypres sector.

"During the days and nights of April 5 and 6 our airplanes have been very active, continuing harrassing the enemy's communications and seeking out his fighting machines at a considerable distance behind his lines. Large tracts of the enemy's country for many miles in the rear have been photographed, more than 1700 photographs being taken behind the enemy's lines.

"Co-operation with the artillery continued during the day-time unhindered except by the weather, although repeated attempts were made by the enemy to prevent this important work.

"Seventeen successful bomb raids were carried out on enemy airdromes, ammunition departments and railways a long distance behind the lines in addition to numerous small raids. More than eight tons of bombs were dropped.

"All the time intense fighting between large formations took place. Our casualties are 28 machines missing, a large number of which are known to have been shot down in combat over the enemy's country.

"It is known that the enemy suffered very heavy casualties. In one case an observer was seen to fall out of his machine, which went down out of control in a spin. In another case the fighting was so close that an enemy pilot was seen to fall from his machine, which was out of control and diving by the nose.

"Fifteen hostile machines were driven down and actually seen to crash to the ground, while 31 others were driven down damaged, a large proportion of which must have been totally destroyed. In addition, 10 hostile balloons were brought down in flames."

Berlin Declares Allies Lost 44 Airplanes Friday.

BERLIN, via London, April 7.—The entente allies yesterday lost 44 airplanes on the western front, says the official statement issued today by the German army headquarters staff. Thirty-three of the British or French machines were destroyed in aerial engagements. Five German airplanes, the statement adds, did not return.

The artillery duel was continued with undiminished intensity along the front from Lens to Arras, the statement reports. St. Quentin has been shelled by the French. The French attempted to recapture the trenches they had lost at Sapigneul, but were repulsed. The German guns effectively shelled "ammunition dumps and fortifications" at Rheims. A concerted attack against German observation balloons between Soissons and Rheims was checked by German air forces and only two of the balloons were lost. Of the operations on the eastern front the report states that Russian raiders near Baranovichi and Stanislau were driven back.

Many Civilians Hurt When Germans Drop 7500 Shells in Rheims.

PARIS, April 7.—The official statement issued by the War Office tonight reads:

"Quite spirited artillery actions occurred today at various points along the front, especially between the Somme and the Oise, south of the Ailette River and in the region to the northwest of Rheims.

"In the Argonne a surprise attack by the enemy against our trenches in the valley of the Aire was repulsed after hard fighting.

"According to late reports the Germans fired today and last night 7500 shells into Rheims, 15 civilians being killed and many wounded."

Excessive Campaign Outlay Charged.

WASHINGTON, April 7.—Charges that an excessive campaign fund was used by Senator Sutherland, Republican, in the West Virginia election last fall, were referred by the Senate Elections Committee today to a subcommittee for preliminary investigation. The charges were filed by former Senator Chilton, who was defeated by Sutherland.

FIVE TUCKERTON RADIO STATION GERMANS HELD

Represented Berlin Government There Until U. S. Took Charge Recently.

TUCKERTON, N. J., April 8.—Five Germans, who formerly represented the German Imperial Government at the big radio station here until the Federal authorities assumed charge of it a month ago, were arrested here by Federal agents early today.

While the agents declined to discuss the arrests, it is believed the men were taken into custody on suspicion of being implicated in a conspiracy to destroy the plant.

The prisoners are Lieut. Emil Meyers, Second Lieut. Bruner, John Schmeil, an expert electrician; Paul Sidles and Fritz Wilhelm. Lieut. Meyers was formerly in command of the wireless station, through which most wireless messages from this country are transmitted direct to Hanover, Germany. Seidles and Wilhelm were asleep in a hotel when surprised by the agents, who rounded up the other prisoners quartered in other sections of the town. The prisoners were placed aboard a train, apparently bound for Philadelphia.

Hundreds of Rifles Belonging to Naturalized Germans Taken in Raid.

CLEVELAND, O., April 7.—Hundreds of rifles, bayonets, swords and ammunition belts with large quantities of ammunition were confiscated in raids made by police on three homes in Cleveland tonight.

The owners, all naturalized Germans, denied that they had gathered the arms and ammunition for any war-like purpose. They said they had simply collected them as an amusement. Most of the rifles were serviceable, but were of a type no longer in use in the United States army. The majority are Springfield rifles of the 1898 model. None of the owners were detained.

Advocate of War Referendum Arrested by U. S. Deputy.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 7.—Morritz Stack von Golstein, an officer of a life insurance company, was arrested today by Deputy United States Marshals under provisions of President Wilson's war proclamation covering activities of aliens.

Von Golstein said he knew of no reason why he should be arrested, admitting, however, that he had advocated a referendum vote before war should be declared.

Former Head of Concern Controlling Sayville Wireless Held.

NEW YORK, April 7.—Among those taken into custody today by secret service agents was Dr. Karl George Frank, widely known as an electrical expert. At the beginning of the war he was at the head of the Atlantic Communication Co., which controled the Sayville wireless station. When arrested at his home at Millburn, N. J., Dr. Frank protested that he was a citizen of the United States.

German Who Has Been Speaking to Georgia Negroes Arrested.

WEST POINT, Ga., April 7.—A man who said he was a German, named Dr. H. Pannkoka, who has been speaking to meetings of negroes here for a week, was jailed today on a charge of "suspicion."

Mayor John T. Johnson said tonight that bitter feelings had been aroused against Pannkoke because of his efforts to incite negroes, and that he was arrested for "his own protection."

RESOLUTION ASKS FOR CENSOR OF NEWSPAPER EXPERIENCE

Teachers of Journalism Also Outline What They Consider Censorship Should Embrace.

CHICAGO, April 7.—A resolution urging that governmental censorship of the press be placed under the supervision of a man of newspaper experience, known to the newspapers of the country and appointed to the necessary military rank, was adopted by the American Association of Teachers of Journalism, meeting here today.

The association's Committee on Censorship of the Press made a report which said in part:

"Censorship must discriminate between news of military acts, orders, movements and organization, which should be rigidly censored and will be willingly suppressed, and incidents of human interest arousing emotion without revealing the military situation. The publication of the latter will stimulate attention, awake loyal co-operation and promote recruiting. A wise censorship will make provision for supplying news of this character to our press."

Members of the committee are Talcott Williams, director of the Pulitzer School of Journalism, Columbia University; Prof. F. N. Scott of the University of Michigan and Walter Williams of the University of Missouri.

NORWEGIAN SHIP CARRYING CORN FOR BELGIANS SUNK

Two Lives Lost on the Camilla, Which Was Torpedoed Without Warning.

LONDON, April 7.—The Norwegian steamer Camilla, with a cargo of corn for the Belgian Relief Commission, has been sunk without warning with the loss of two lives, according to a Reuter dispatch from Copenhagen.

The vessel was sunk off the coast of Jaederen, south of Stavanger, Norway. Nine survivors and the two dead have arrived at Skuresnaes, Norway. The survivors were 120 hours in a boat before they were picked up by a steamer. The Camilla was of 2273 gross tons.

Coal Freight Rate Increased.

WASHINGTON, April 7.—Increases of 15 cents per ton on bituminous coal rates from mines in Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Kentucky, Ohio, Tennessee and other states to Lake Erie ports, for trans-shipment, were authorized today by the Interstate Commerce Commission and will become effective April 15.

SAYS RUSSIA WILL TALK OF PEACE IF GERMANS REVOLT

Russian Minister of Justice Declares "We Offer Possibility of Preliminary Negotiations."

PETROGRAD, April 7.—Minister of Justice Kerensky said in an interview today that if the German people would follow the Russian example and dethrone their Emperor, "we offer the possibility of preliminary negotiations."

This statement was embodied in an announcement by the official news agency, which reads:

"On Thursday, according to news from Copenhagen, Dr. Eduard David, speaking on behalf of the majority party of the Social Democrats in the German Reichstag, declared that Foreign Minister Miliukoff and his supporters were Germanophobes and that consequently the Social Democrats based their hopes on M. Kerensky (Russian Minister of Justice) and M. Tcheiedse (a Socialist leader in the Duma). On this subject M. Kerensky made the following declaration to a party of journalists:

" 'From the incomplete information supplied by the press it is difficult to form a sound opinion. It all depends on knowing what are the hope that Deputy David founds on me and M. Tcheidse.

Won't Assist in Separate Peace.

" 'If he supposes we are going to assist in making a separate peace, he will be rudely disappointed. If, on the other hand, he hopes the German people are about to follow our example and dethrone their Emperor, we can do no other than warmly applaud, for that would greatly free our hands and offer the possibility of entering on preliminary negotiations.

" 'I am convinced that the peoples who are engaged in this unexampled war will more easily come to an understanding and more quickly obtain satisfactory results than the monarchs who are primarily responsible for this cruel carnage."

Duma Hears Army Allegation.

A delegation from the army at the front was introduced to the Duma yesterday and handed the Executive Committee the following resolution from the men of the first army:

"We are deeply distressed that the council of workmen's and soldiers' delegates is extending its resolutions to our army without the consent or approval of the provisional Government, a fact which is producing misunderstandings in the army. We have recognized the provisional Government and sworn allegiance to it and in the domain of reform it is our duty to be guided by it alone and regard the orders, laws and decisions emanating from it as the only official ones."

Delegates from the Black Sea fleet and Sebastopol garrison also presented a resolution, which read:

"Let us speak boldly as in times of peace. Remember that great battles will begin in a month's time. Then Russia will either begin a new, free life or be crushed by the Germans. We must put an end to the old mistrust which prevented officers and men joining hands."

M. Rodzianko, president of the Duma, replying to the delegation, said:

"Our main object should be victory over the enemy. For that we ought all to rally around the provisional Government and give it support, that the country may triumph. We must not shut our eyes to the fact that we sustained a considerable reverse on the Stokhod. Let it be a warning to those who refuse to sink all personal considerations.

"Citizens, to work! One for all! Enough of dissension. Our country is in danger."

HOUSTON AGAIN APPEALS TO COUNTRY TO RAISE MORE FOOD

Secretary Asks for Adequate Crops Not Only for United States, but for Entente.

WASHINGTON, April 7.—Secretary Houston again tonight appealed to the country to make every effort to raise adequate food crops this not only for the United States' needs, but to meet the requirements of the entente.

There is no risk in the near future of excessive production such as sometimes has resulted in unremunerative prices to producers," he said. "This is particularly true of the cereals and of peas, beans, cowpeas, soybeans and buckwheat. In view of the world scarcity of food, there is hardly a possibility that the production of these crops by the farmers of the United States can be too great this year, and there is abundant reason to expect generous price returns for all available surplus.

"The usefulness of cowpeas and soybeans as human food has been recognized only recently in this country. Existing conditions warrant the planting of all the available seed of varieties known to do well in the several sections."

MISS RANKIN VOTED HER OWN CONVICTION, MRS. CATT SAYS

"Unfair to Congressman to Attempt to Hold Her to Responsibility for Suffragists, as Body."

NEW YORK, April 7.—Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, president of the National Suffrage Association, speaking for her organization today of the vote of Miss Jeanette Rankin, member of Congress from Montana, against the war resolution, said it was impossible to regard it as anything more than her conscientious conviction on the subject.

"If individual women are divided on the war question, as they have a right to divide on all questions," said Mrs. Catt. "But so far as the official and representative action of the suffragists is concerned the organized suffragists of the American association committed themselves to their Government on the war question as far back as Feb. 25.

"It is not fair to Miss Rankin to attempt to hold her to a responsibility for suffragists as a body."

NOTE ON TREATMENT OF VON BERNSTORFF

Berlin Protests to United States Against English Action at Halifax.

AMSTERDAM, April 7, via London.—A Berlin telegram quotes from the North German Gazette, the semi-official Berlin newspaper, a long note handed to the Swiss legation in Berlin by the German Government protesting strongly against the treatment of Count von Bernstorff, former German Ambassador to the United States, by the British authorities at Halifax, where the von Bernstorff party was detained for some time on board ship for examination.

The protest maintains that the action of the British authorities in this connection conflicted with the terms of the safe conduct granted the returning Ambassador.

The Swiss Legation is requested to transmit the complaint to Washington for the information of the United States Government.

MORE THAN $6,500,000 WAS GIVEN TO LIBRARIES IN 1916

Largest Single Gift Was $1,500,000 to Providence (R. I.) Institution by Woman's Will.

CHICAGO, April 7.—More than $6,500,000 were given or bequeathed to libraries in this country in 1916, according to George B. Utley of Chicago, secretary of the American Library Association. The Carnegie Corporation contributed $1,253,888 of this amount. The largest single gift was the bequest of $1,500,00 to the Providence Public Library, by will of Miss Lyra Brown Nickerson. Other donations of note include: $250,000 to the Newark (N. J.) Free Public Library, by will of James E. Howell; $250,000 to Amherst College for a new library building, from an unnamed graduate, and $250,000 to the Wisconsin State Historical Society, bequeathed by George B. Burrows.

Four rare Lincoln manuscripts were given to the Library of Congress by Clarence L. Hay and Helen Nicolay, the children of Lincoln's private secretaries, John Hay and John G. Nicolay.

CHINA ENDING OPIUM BUSINESS

Entire Stock in Country Turned Over to the Government.

WASHINGTON, April 7.—"The opium business has practically passed out of the trade of the Far East," says a report from Consul-General Anderson at Hongkong, made public today at the State Department. The whole stock now in the country has been taken over by the Government and no further privat importation will be allowed.

This brings to an end China's long struggle to free herself from the terrible drug, which began to be imported in large quantities from British India, nearly a century ago. By gradual steps the world has united to fight it.

AUSTRIA ORDERS TARNOWSKI TO ASK FOR PASSPORTS

Dual Monarchy Said to Have Taken Initiative in Break With U. S.

GERMANY COMPOSED

No Official Notice of American Declaration Shown Publicly.

By CYRIL BROWN
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch and New York World.
(Copyright, 1917, by Press Pub. Co.)

BERLIN, April 7.—The Austro-Hungarian Government has instructed Count Tarnowski to ask for his passports, thereby seizing the initiative in breaking off formal relations with America. The interpretation of this here is that Austria has patently demonstrated her unshakable loyalty as Germany's ally and her complete solidarity with Germany in all questions, in the face of America's declaration of a state of war.

The report that the United States House of Representatives has passed the war resolution reached Berlin last evening, but only became generally known and published this morning. It produced practically no impression, as the passage of the resolution was already discounted, while the President's message had already been viewed as equivalent of a declaration of war.

The state of war, as felt here by most Germans, has a strangely unreal quality about it, possibly because there is no immediate prospect of an armed clash to bring home the stern fact, possibly because not the slightest official cognizance is taken of America's declaration by the Imperial Government, even the military and police authorities virtually ignoring it, at least publicly.

One encounters, in consequence, not the slightest hostility. Public feeling shows no sign of ever beginning to run high and will probably not be whipped into anything approximating fury unless fake reports through doubtful channels should tell of the mistreatment of Germans in America.

It is probable, however, that both the Government and the German people will be more critical of alleged news from America, particularly with their experience still vividly in mind when they "fell" for many rank fakes that flooded the German papers immediately after the break in relations.

The Post-Dispatch correspondent, who heretofore has studied the German people while declarations of war were being made, finds the closest parallel to the present attitude of the public in its stolid reception of the Italian declaration of war.

Apparently Refuses Quarrel.

There is considerable speculation here as to whether or how Germany may be formally advised of the declaration. The Imperial Government seems determined, at least until something happens calculated to change the imperial mind, to refuse the transatlantic quarrel. It may almost with certainty—at least, as the situation looks today—be counted on to take no official cognizance of the existence of a state of war between America and Germany.

Germany will continue the sinking of any and all ships encountered within barred zones, stoutly maintaining that the sinking of Americans or neutrals there constitutes no hostile act and that therefore such sinkings cannot possibly be construed as bringing about a state of war.

For the rest it will commit no overt acts according to the German interpretation. The practical result of the German policy of official nonrecognition of a state of war will be that there will be no change in the apparent attitude toward or the treatment of the few American citizens lingering here.

Several Americans, I understand, have already been requested to report to their precinct police stations for registration purposes, but no case in which Americans were molested in any way has come to my ears. For the present, at least, the liberties of Americans are in no way infringed.

Little Attention to U. S.

The press in general continues to devote little space to American news. Many papers completely ignore the passage of the resolution by Congress and others dispose of it in a few words.

Thus, the Lokal Anzeiger says: "A state of war between the United States and Germany has thereby come to pass, though a formal declaration is hardly expected. We have already emphasized that the entrance of the Union into the ranks of our enemies must not be taken with a shrug of the shoulders, but also that it need not put an end to our unbroken confidence in victory."

The Tageblatt finds the only thing worth commenting about to be the fact that 50 Representatives voted against the resolution, and says:

"Thus, at the beginning of the war, there exists in Congress a not entirely to be underrated peace party. In the present moment and the immediate future its influence will not make itself felt. A state of war exists; matters must develop farther, and it cannot be foretold how far these developments may carry America.

"The first consequence is the break of relations between Austria and the United States. In America they had too obviously endeavored to eliminate Austria from the conflict, as if there were no unfriendly feelings toward Austria, which, however, does not avail itself of this consideration shown it, but through this action gives proof that the enemies of its friends are its foes.

"Almost touching is the jubilation which the report of the war declaration has aroused in Italy. The Italians appear to have needed cheering up badly; already they are dreaming of the dollars that are to rain down on them."

"In America itself," says the Vossische Zeitung, "they do not appear to be quite clear as to the extent of military, financial and economic help to be given the entente. On the other hand, one tactical point in the program has become apparent: the intention of trying to isolate Germany from its allies.

"Austria naturally realized the intention behind Wilson's double game, and with demonstrative speed gave the Washington Government the answer we expected from our loyal ally. Wilson's Vienna trick failed completely."

AMERICANS HURRY FROM ORIENT

HONGKONG, April 7.—Travel between China and Europe virtually has become impossible either by rail or by sea. All the entente Powers are discouraging travelers as much as possible. Passports will not be issued to persons who are not actually forced to make the trip to Europe. Even the wives and families of the men at the front are denied permission to go to Europe. The British legation in Pekin and other entente legations have advised their citizens that traveling is a handicap to the successful conduct of the war, and permission to leave the Orient will not be granted to persons unless special reasons are advanced.

Americans who had planned to visit India, Siam and the East Indies are abandoning their trips and returning to the United States because the withdrawal of entente ships, and passport restrictions, has made travel to those countries difficult. Consequently, steamers sailing from Chinese and Japanese ports for America are crowded with tourists who are hurrying home through the fear that even Pacific Ocean travel may be affected by submarine activities.

"ENLIGHTENMENT" is a well-constructed purpose play, dealing with parents and children. It is not in the least salacious, but handles a very delicate subject with great adroitness. The domestic life of four families is depicted in a most interesting manner. The author is to be congratulated.

GERMAN INSURANCE FIRMS IN U. S. MAY CONTINUE BUSINESS

They Will Not, However, Be Allowed to Communicate With Home Offices.

Under a proclamation issued yesterday by President Wilson, several fire insurance companies organized under the German Government, and doing business in St. Louis, will be permitted to continue such business, but cannot transmit money to the German home offices, or otherwise communicate with them, while the war continues.

Three such companies are the Hamburg-Bremen Co. of Hamburg, the Nord Deutsche of Hamburg and the Prussian National of Stettin. All have their St. Louis offices in the Pierce Building.

The greater part of the business done by German firms in this country, agents here said, is reinsurance, or the insuring of insurance companies against risks assumed by them. The Munich Reinsurance Co., the largest concern doing business in this line, reported, in 1915, assets of $8,546,623 in the United States, and in the 10 years preceding 1915 it handled $50,000,000 worth of policies in this country.

Other Large Companies.

Other large German companies, and their assets and policies in the United States, according to a United States Government report, are the Cologne Reinsurance Co., assets $1,405.667, policies $10,270.592; Frankona Reinsurance Co. of Berlin, assets $1000, policies $2,007,277; Hamburg-Bremen Co., assets $1,843,344, policies $13,972,000; Hamburg Assurance Co., assets $4,566,293, policies $9,662,939; Nord-Deutsch Co., assets $2,063,315, policies $4,448,059; Prussian National, assets $2,559,601, policies $10,708,759. The figures given represent only assets and policies in this country.

Since the break in diplomatic relations the German companies have been asking the State Department for a definition of their status, and have been informally advised that no difficulties would be placed in the way of their continued operation.

ST. LOUIS WIRELESS PLANTS AFFECTED BY FEDERAL ORDER

Big University Stations and Many Private Ones Probably Will Be Dismantled.

INSTRUCTIONS RECEIVED

More Than 100 Small Plants Said to Be Scattered Throughout City.

An order issued yesterday by President Wilson, taking over for the Government all radio stations in the United States and closing all except those needed by the Navy Departmnt, had not been carried out in St. Louis last night, but action is expected early this week regarding the powerful stations of Washington and St. Louis Universities and the many lesser private stations at residences about the city.

District Attorney Oliver admitted receiving instructions from Washington regarding radio stations, but refused to make public the orders.

The Washington University station is the most powerful in St. Louis. It has picked up wireless messages from across the Atlantic and from Honolulu. Its use has been largely experimental. The university officials expect to turn over the plant to the Government, and it is considered probable that if the Government does not dismantle the plant it will place a man in charge.

The St. Louis University plant has all equipment, but has not been operated for two years. It likely will be dismantled.

There are probably more than 100 private wireless plants in St. Louis, many youths having placed aerial wireless equipment on the roofs of their homes.

Investigators of the Department of Justice yesterday examined a powerful wireless station at the home of Emil Heckenkamp, an attorney in Belleville. No action was taken by them. Heckenkamp said he built the station for his own amusement five years ago and that he had received messages from Cuba and had transmitted messages to stations on the Atlantic Coast.

HINDU REVOLUTIONARY AND FOLLOWERS ARRESTED IN U. S.

Leader Said to Have Sent 1500 Men to India to Start Revolt.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 7.—Ram Chandra, editor of the "Hindustan Gadar" and said by Federal authorities to be the leader of the Hindu revolutionaries in the United States, was arrested today by Federal agents, who raided his home and office.

Twelve other Hindus, said to be his revolutionary associates, also were arrested. The Government is said to have obtained evidence showing that Chandra has sent 1500 men into India within the last two months to start "the revolution." [illegible]cials said he would be charged with conspiracy to set afoot a military expedition against a foreign country (India) and to foment revolution in a country with which the United States is at peace.

Until a few weeks ago Chandra was the official editor and spokesman of the Gadar Zociety, numbering thousands of Hindus in America. He says "Gadar" means revolution, but British officials in India translate it "mutiny." Escaping from India in 1907, after being arrested for sedition, Chandra went to Japan. He came to this country in 1914.

50 MISSOURI COAL MINES TO BE CLOSED TOMORROW

KANSAS CITY, Mo., April 7.—Work will be suspended Monday in all mines in Missouri affiliated with the Southwestern Interstate Coal Operators' Association, W. L. A. Johnson, general commissioner of the association, announced here today, as the result of strike difficulties at Kirksville, Mo. Fifty mines, employing between 9000 and 10,000 men, will be tied up, he said.

The announcement was that the Advisory Committee and officers of the association had decided to close the mines until the officers of the miners' union ordered the men back to work at Kirkskills. Johnson said mediatory conferences here between the operators and D. A. Frampton of Moberly, the new president of the union, had failed.

Famous & Barr Red Cross Unit of 600 Women Organized.

The organization of an American Red Cross unit, consisting of 600 women trained in sewing, has been completed in St. Louis, and will be known as the Famous & Barr Red Cross unit. Famous & Barr have set aside and equipped a large room on the sixth floor of its store for the women.

Mrs. Edward W. Mangson of the Buckingham Hotel is president of the unit, Mrs. C. W. Satterfield of 1514 Arlington avenue, treasurer, and Mrs. May Breeding of 5727 Bartmer avenue, secretary.

Mrs. Mangson said yesterday that the women were ready for work and awaiting material. To equip a hospital unit to move 44,000 garments are needed, and the leaders in the organization of the Red Cross unit say that the women composing it can accomplish much more than several thousand untrained persons.

As the garments are completed they are checked, marked and stored in the United States Government warehouse, subject to the order of the American Red Cross.

Driver Reports He Was Robbed.

Joseph Wren of 2108 North Fourteenth street, a driver for a parcel delivery company, reported that he was robbed of $45 by two men in front of 5055 Vernon avenue, last night.

PRESIDENT AT THEATER HEARS SAILOR SPEAK FOR THE NAVY

Yeoman in Talk From Stage Says Navy Needs 100,000 Men; Wilson Sings Anthem.

WASHINGTON, April 7.—President Wilson went to the theater tonight. After several frivolities, Harry L. Thompson, yeoman, U. S. S. Mayflower, flanked by two jackies from the same ship, the President's official yacht, appeared on the stage.

Thompson, clad in his uniform of navy blue, made a speech. He said the United States had gone to war with Germany, that the American navy needed 100,000 men, that the navy was a wonderful institution, that he was glad he was a part of it, that it gave as much as it took. Thompson was nervous. So was the President in his balcony box.

The sailor said he would pass slips into the audience for young men to sign. The slips would not obligate them to enlist, he said. More than a score signed.

Then the orchestra played the "Star Spangled Banner" and President Wilson joined with the audience in singing the chorus.

MANY CHILDREN AT EASTER EGG HUNT IN FOREST PARK

Those Who Failed to Find Any Receive Candy Egg After Event Is Over.

An Easter egg hunt in Forest Park yesterday afternoon, conducted by the St. Louis Star, was participated in by a large crowd of children, many of whom were attended by their parents. The children who failed to find eggs received candy eggs after the hunt was over.

The eggs were hidden in leaves and straw in a wire enclosure east of the Zoo. At a signal on a bugle by a Boy Scout the children raced in for the hunt.

DECLINES TO BE LION FOOD

FOSTORIA, O., April 7.—When the night operator at the Toledo & Ohio Central station went to the freight house at midnight he saw crouching in the center of the floor an African lion. The operator went right out again. As soon as he was able to convince police he was not dreaming, he took several of them back to the station and, with the aid of the owner, a vaudeville artist whose teammate the lion was, they induced the animal to get back into his cage.

RETIRED GERMAN ARMY OFFICER, 79, ARRESTED IN NEW YORK

"Developments of Importance" Said to Be Expected as Result; Another Held.

NEW YORK, April 7.—Two Germans were arrested today in an East Eleventh street rooming house, where was found eight rifles and shotguns, revolvers, ammunition, maps of the United States, compasses and other paraphernalia.

It was learned that Federal agents meanwhile had arrested Lieut. Arthur E. Bielkowsky, retired, of the German army, as a result of which, it was said, "developments of importance" were expected. Bielkowsky is 79 years old, and has been living in this country on his pension for 31 years. He was committed to the city prison with another prisoner, who gave his name as J. H. Wilkins. It was reported there was evidence that Bielkowsky had been acting as an agent in this country for the German general staff.

After Bielkowsky had been taken to the Tombs he communicated with Justice Henry D. Hotchkiss of the New York State Supreme Court, and it was announced tonight that, with the consent of John C. Knox, Assistant United States District Attorney, he had been paroled in the custody of Justice Hotchkiss.

REPORTS OF GERMAN RAIDERS ALONG ATLANTIC SEABOARD

Navy Officials Expect Many Suspected Ships Will Turn Out to Be Unoffending Tramps.

WASHINGTON, April 7.—Reports of German commerce raiders off Atlantic ports were flashed along the seaboard today.

The first report came from Nantucket Lightship, which saw a strange ship passing west at 7:20 o'clock this morning and promptly reported it to the Boston Navy Yards and the Navy Department. Destroyer flotillas are at sea in the vicinity and presumably they heard the wireless warning which swept the coast line and set out to locate the mysterious craft.

Soon afterward a report of a raider off the Virginia Capes came from Hampton Roads.

Navy officials expect many reports of raiders while excitement on the seacoast is at high tension and many such probably will turn out to be unoffending tramps.

BOY KILLED BY A COAL WAGON

Caught Under a Wheel When He Was Playing in Street.

Bronko Kersulov, 5 years old, son of Joseph Kersulov of 3533 North Broadway, was run over and killed yesterday afternoon by a coal wagon in front of 3514 North Broadway, where he was playing with other children.

The police were informed that the boy ran between the front and back wheels of the wagon and a back wheel passed over his chest, crushing him to death.

Edward Ryan, employed by the Boehmer Coal Co., stopped his team, and took the boy to the North End Dispensary. He was held for the Coroner.

ST. LOUIS, SUNDAY MORNING, APRIL 8, 1917.

BETHLEHEM SOCCER STARS EASILY WIN FROM MILLERS, 2-0

Eastern Champions Get Revenge for Defeat Suffered Here Christmas Week by Outplaying Local Titleholders.

RATICAN FAILS TO PLAY, QUINN IS MILLER STAR

Duncan of Steel Co. Team Clears Only Good Shot Scored by St. Louis Players, Who Commit 22 Fouls.

BETHLEHEM, Pa., April 7.—Bethlehem Steel, National and American champions today avenged their defeat in soccer in St. Louis last Christmas by shutting out the Ben Millers of the latter city, 2 to 0.

Today's score does not indicate how Bethlehem outclassed the visitors in all stages of the game, particularly in passing. The score would have been higher but for the sensational play by Goalkeeper King. The Ben Millers had but one fine chance to score and Duncan frustrated that.

St. Louis men fouled repeatedly, their offenses footing up to 22, against 15 by the national champions. Bethlehem forced nine corner kicks to the visitors' lonely one, but not any of the corners were connected into points.

Bethlehem Quick to Score.

The national champions started scoring 12 minutes after the game was begun when Pepper, on a pass from Kirkpatrick, on a long high kick, scored the first goal. The ball was lost in the sun and no attempt was made to stop it.

The Millers traced up for a few minutes, but Bethlehem soon again became the aggresser. On a foul by Fullback Lancaster, Referee Walders awarded a penalty kick which the great Fleming converted into a goal, beating the goal-keeper's judgment. The first half ended with the score 2—0.

On the start of the second half the national champions faced the wind and the sun, but these conditions did not deter the backs and forwards from continuing brilliant footwork, while St. Louis frequently committed fouls. Bethlehem forced three more corners, none of which added to the point-getting.

The only good chance St. Louis had came in the second half, when Marre, on a breakaway, sent a hard drive to Bethlehem's goal, which Duncan saved. St. Louis forced their only corner kick towards the end of the second period.

Quinn Star for Millers.

"Billy" Quinn played the star game for the western champions.

Miller and Brady also gave a good account of themselves for the western team. For Bethlehem, Pepper, McKelvey, Forrest, Murray and Fleming played the stellar game. The lineup:

Bethlehem.	Positions.	St. Louis.
Duncan	Goal	King
Fletcher	R. F. B.	Lancaster
Ferguson	L. F. B.	Brady
Murray	R. H. B.	Murphy
Campbell	Center H. B.	Quinn
Kirkpatrick	L. H. B.	Miller
McKelvey	O. R.	McHenry
Pepper	I. R.	Kohrman
Clarke	C. F.	Dunn
Forrest	I. L.	Marre
Fleming	O. L.	Potee

Goals—Pepper, Fleming (penalty). Referee—James Walders, Philadelphia. Linesmen—J. H. Carpenter, H. A. Williams. Time of halves—45m.

Innisfails Get Draw With All-Star Eleven of Chicago League, 1-1

CHICAGO, April 7.—In a closely contested battle the Innisfail soccer team this afternoon played a tie game with the All-Chicago club. It was the first of two games. The same clubs will play tomorrow afternoon.

The All-Chicago and Innisfails each scored one goal, Schwartz for the Innisfails in the opening period and Shallcross for Chicago in the second half.

A cold wind handicapped the players, but the ground was in good condition. The Innisfails, composed of players who graduated from the smaller St. Louis teams, showed speed and, although outplayed in the second half, when facing the wind, they were always dangerous.

Chicago started well and soon had the Innisfails on the defensive, but as soon as the visitors broke away they showed the fast attack for which the Mound City elevens are famous.

Nineteen minutes after the start Blockley and Sharp got mixed and Schwartz tipped the ball by them. Holmes came out of goal, but could not get to the ball in time and Schwartz banged it into the net.

Chicago had the better of the attack in the second half, but its shooting was poor. Many opportunities were wasted. Once Shallcross got by the defense, but Cartwright got in his way and the ball went wide. Twenty-three minutes after the restart B. Govier's hot shot was blocked and the ball went to Shallcross, who scored with a fine drive.

Lineup:

Innisfails (1)	Position.	Chicago (1)
Callerman	Guard	Holmes
Holland	Right back	Blockley
T. Shea	Left back	Sharp
Keiss	Right halfback	J. M. Cartwright
Callahan	Center halfback	S. Govier
Harris	Left halfback	A. Bromley
Corrigan	Outer right	Pollitt
Schwartz	Inner right	B. Govier
Byrne	Center	Shallcross

Goals—Schwartz, Shallcross. Referee—McKean.

Giants Overshadow All National Rivals;

Six American League Clubs Have Chance

Yankees and Cleveland the Mysterious Strangers

No Club in the Parent League Seems Able to Make the New York Outfit Extend Itself—Overconfidence May Beat It.

By John E. Wray.

UNDER the war cloud, baseball plans this year are unfolding at a disadvantage. Fans, albeit their attention is distracted by the approaching rumbling of the great war, are manifesting the usual interest in the League openings, April 11. But it is after the fashion of a man reading the paper and trying to assimilate a red-hot bowl of soup simultaneously. The orchestra is a bit discordant.

There is no doubt that the season in both leagues will be played out as scheduled, except in case of some great national calamity. Also, there is no doubt but that there will be plenty of fans remaining in the major league circuits—which have a total population of over 13,000,000—to make the season go through with fair success.

But clubs with high capitalizations are not anticipating building any public monuments through overabundant dividends—not this year. In the American League there is scarcely a club that does not have to pay returns on $500,000 or more.

Altogether, the season, unless a speedy end to the war arrives, or unless conditions as regards the H. C. of L. improve, will reduce to one of getting-by, on the part of the club owners.

Tough on the Cardinals.

THE hand of circumstance will rest heavily on those clubs with finances at a low ebb, and which are attempting to build up. Among these may be mentioned the Cardinals. The Owned-By-the-Fans Idea is facing trouble with a capital T. Only the known punch back of the men connected with the enterprise prevents dire forebodings concerning the future of the new organization.

Briefly summed up the Cardinals face the following situation under wartime conditions:

Owe $175,000 of the purchase price, on which interest must be paid.

Need close to $50,000 to build up team by purchase.

Will need at least $100,000 for a new grandstand, in a year or so.

Team, on last year's form, figures to finish sixth or worse.

This is the GLOOM outlook. The situation will be brightened materially if the Cardinal Idea can be put across to the extent of selling $325,000 more stock and completing the contemplated capitalization of the club to $500,000.

With only 6 per cent dividend obligations—and these not to be exacted, if times were bad—the Cardinals could get by very well. Otherwise, it's a hard grind Jacey Jones and his courageous cohorts face.

As to the Playing Side.

THE playing angle of the game in the American League would be hard to figure out more rosily. With four teams practically standing pat on last year's makeup, with the tail-end Athletics of 1916 showing a firmer front, and with Washington, the seventh place club of last season, rearranged around the great Walter Johnson, the A. L. marathon promises to be as near an eight-club struggle as could be devised.

At this time there is nothing in the "dope" to make one believe that the actual race for first place will not lie between the White Sox and the Red Sox—the one, two clubs of last year—with Chicago having the advantage.

Hug's Bane, Rowland's Boon.

THE White Sox's gain in prospects is due to the acquisition of a seemingly remarkable shortstop—Risberg, a player whom Miller Huggins' scouts had tied up, but lacked the money to purchase. Risberg, if all is true that is said of him, will round out a fine infield for the White Sox. This club last year finished two games behind the Red Sox, in the title race.

The Red Sox may miss that grim bulldog of a manager, Carrigan. They may also miss him as a catcher—it is quite certain that "Dutch" Leonard will. The Reds, too, will be under new management, although an alleged "brainy" man in Barry. These drawbacks to the Red Sox may be offset by the fact that the champions fought out the latter part of the race under distressing conditions which include the total loss of Barry and George Foster at critical periods.

Detroit has yet to show where the club has gained. It will be minus one sterling infielder—Vitt—the only major league holdout of consequence today. Sam Crawford, too, who helped with the punch at the close of last season, will be missing this year. Coveleskie, too, had such a season last year as to lead many to doubt this pitcher can repeat. All in all, the Tigers show no gain, over last season.

Here's the "Great Unknown."

THE New York Americans are the mystery team of the league. The makeup of the club is a strong one. If Caldwell holds to the line, Baker continues to murder the ball, Maisel goes through uninjured and other circumstances go a-right that last year went awry, the club may win the title.

Connie Mack picked this club to win, last season; this year he prefers the White Sox, with the proviso that any club able to stay out of last place has a pennant chance.

If Donovan is the right helmsman, his seems the club to spill the beans for the favorites.

Browns Gain and Lose.

WHICH brings us to our Browns and Cleveland. Fielder Jones insists his club has a decided advantage over the team he started with, last season. He will have practically a standpat lineup, but with the men having had the advantage of a season's work together, gaining thereby mutual understanding between players and leader that did not exist last season.

Jones apparently has not strengthened the patent weakness of the club, in the matter of batting punch; but hopes in this department are derived from the fact that Del Pratt, Marsans and Johnny Lavan, for a large part of last season hit below their capabilities; and from the slugging abilities of the reservists Sloan, Jacobson Yardley and Rumler.

Dating the team's efficiency from July 1, 1916, and making allowances it is still evident that the Browns must have all their "IFS" come out right, if they are to make an impression on first division, this year.

This is the more evident from the fact that Dauntless Dave Davenport will probably not have recovered his form before July 1. A 30-30 bullet, driven upward through the ribs, on up through the jawbone and emerging near the eye, is not apt to leave a wound easily healed.

The club will probably be better all around than last year, however, and if the opposition were weaker it might be conceded a hope. As it stands it's a case of "show me," after reviewing the prospects.

Another Mysterious Stranger.

CLEVELAND, which was only two games behind the Browns, last season, and which broke even with the St. Louisans in their 22 contests, is a mysterious factor this year owing to the presence on the team of Joe Wood, who still holds the record percentage for a season's work in the American League. If Joe can even approximate the form he showed in 1912, which a variety of misfortunes has since prevented him from repeating, he will lift the Cleveland club over the heads of one or more clubs that led the Indians last season.

Washington and Philadelphia are problems that will have to work out their own answers—they are too tough to be figured. Walter Johnson will always command a respectable representation for his club in the victory column—probably not less than 25. Philadelphia, too, has some pitching that will lift it out of the Utterly Hopeless slough. But neither is believed to be strong enough to cut a pennant swath.

A One-Team Race?

THE National League, unfortunately, appears to be lopsided. On the strength of its flash last year at the close of the season, McGraw's Giants appear to have the bunting wrapped up now. A recurrence of the form displayed in that famous streak of 26 consecutive victories will eclipse the rest of the league rivalry and make it necessary for the spectators to make a book on the race with New York out. In fact, the Giants are today quoted at 6—5 to win the flag.

In itself, under ordinary circumstances, that ought to be enough to DOOM the Giants. Few teams survive unwholesome pre-season boosting of this sort.

Yet there is no way to deduce from the figures how anything but an extraordinary pitching staff can hold this club of hitters at bay. If McGraw's hurling stands up, nothing seemingly can beat the Giants.

Braves Have the Nerve.

THE Phils seem pitiful, beside them, Alexander notwithstanding. Like Johnson he is the big stick of Pat Moran; without him the club couldn't have reached the Hall of Fame by telephone.

Brooklyn is in fact, with the exception of Mike Mowrey, and therefit to fight Boston, Philly and the Braves for second place. The Braves ought to outgame their rivals.

Nothing but the discovery of two or three Ty Cobbs and Alexanders can put any of the four Western clubs in the running. Their left-over material justifies no hope of first-division stuff.

"I've Got a Club That Can Hit"—Hug; "Browns Better Than in 1916"—Jones

St. Louis Club Managers Hopeful, but Not Boastful About What the Coming Baseball Season Holds in Store for Their Charges.

BELOW will be found brief statements by St. Louis major league club managers as to their views of the 1917 prospects for their clubs. The brevity of Huggins and the conservatism of Jones are in marked contrast to the usual pre-season claims.

"IT looks as though I've got a club that can hit," was the guarded and grudgingly-given statement of Miller Huggins, when asked to indicate what the Cardinals' chances in the coming National League scramble would be. Hug hates to talk on such matters. He admits that he has proved almost a bum prophet. But he can't go far wrong on what he has said in this instance. The Cardinals have all the earmarks of a hitting ball club.

What they must develop is a pitching staff. That is now in the making. Meadows, Watson, Steele and Horstman are fine prospects, needing only a little experience. Doak, if he regains his 1914 form will be as good as any man in the league. Ames is serviceable as a finisher and the need of such a man on a club with so many youngsters is evident to the initiated.

In one other respect the Cardinals need careful watching. They must develop some color, which is another way of saying aggressiveness. They must fight, consistently and persistently. Rickey may be able to help out here. If he stands solidly behind Huggins, the players will take less liberties at Robison Field this year than they have been taking in the past. This is no small matter.

CONNIE MACK, said a mouthful when he opined: "If you can keep out of last place you ought to have a good chance for the pennant this season."

Fielder Jones is almost hiding behind that expression, although Fielder need not borrow his baseball views from Mack or anybody else alive. But Jones holds the same belief. He regards the A. L. scramble as the most vicious in years. Anybody's race.

"I have a better club than last season, a club with more balance," said Jones last night, "We didn't hit in the spring series, but we will.

"Pitching is what I'm concerned about most. I think one of the best men on my staff now is Hamilton. I know what Plank, Koob and Weilman can do. I've got the greatest set of southpaws in the game today, and a good southpaw is hard to handle.

"We have more reserve strength and of a better brand. There is a chance to do things with my squad, and I propose to do them. We have had a lot of tough breaks this spring, but if we can avoid another dose during the season we will be there or thereabouts in October."

HUGGINS RELEASES SAMMY BOHNE AND PITCHER GARDINER

De Fate to Be Transferred to Browns, or Retained as Utility Player.

"HAM" MAY PITCH TODAY

If Weather Permits Final Game of Spring Series Will Be Contested.

By W. J. O'Connor.

Just at a time yesterday afternoon when some 1200 hungry fans whose pitiless voracity had shown no signs of satiation, even after it began to rain and all the high-salaried ball players of this municipality were on the verge of freezing to death, Miller Huggins relented and called it off.

Hug went the limit to perpetrate the fifth game of the pneumonia series between the Browns and Cardinals. He even influenced the umpires to start hostilities 15 minutes before the time stipulated, but it kept blowing colder and colder and when a slight drizzle set in, Hug weakened and rubbed out. Herman Seekamp should give Hug an iron cross. Not for calling it off, but for his unmitigated gaul in ever attempting to play.

An honest attempt will be made to perform this afternoon at Sportsman's Park, where the rain-checks distributed yesterday at Robison Field will be honored. Hug will send Lee Meadows to Hurling Hill for five frames, finishing with Horstman, the Coast League recruit.

Hamilton to Pitch.

Fielder Jones intends to place the pitching burden on the shoulders of Earl Hamilton. He will have Lavan at short, Shotton in left and Hale behind the bat. It is entirely probable that Del Pratt will not be able to perform and in that case Bill Kenworthy will do duty at second. As this will be the final game of the series, the Browns are out to win it to escape the ignominy of a calcimine bath. Play begins at 3 o'clock, weather permitting.

Hug Releases Two Men.

Manager Huggins has begun to cut down his squad and the first move results in the transfer of Infielder Sammy Bohne to St. Paul, on an outright sale, while Pitcher Roy Gardiner goes to the Lincoln (Western League) club. Gardiner was due to go after his failure to impress Huggins in the session at San Antonio. However, the release of Sammy Bohne was somewhat of a surprise.

This means, however, that Rogers Hornsby will tarry at short, at least until he proves himself entirely unfit for that job. Present indications are that Hornsby will make good. As far as he has gone, his work has been very praiseworthy.

Clyde De Fate probably will be retained as the utility infielder, unless a way is found to sneak him out of the National League and into the Brown fold, per Rickey's announced intention. However, there are at least two National League clubs that surely will not waive on De Fate, meaning that De Fate will stick where he is. And we might ask. If the Cards don't need him, who does?

Lavan Threatens to Hit.

While the Browns were staging their batting practice yesterday all the railbirds were favorably impressed by the manner in which Johnny Lavan hammered the ball. His hits rang clearer than any others and the wisenheimers are beginning to predict that Johnny will take up where he left off last fall.

Lavan batted better than any member of Fielder Jones' squad for the last six weeks of the season. He topped off the fall drive by hitting .500 in the post season clash with the Cardinals. If he doesn't weaken, he will be the best shortstop in either league. As it is, he has no superior afield and only a few peers.

Five Major League Clubs Expect to Open Season Wednesday With Same Team Make-Up as in 1916

WHEN the major league clubs open their 1917 pennant campaigns in the eight cities next Wednesday, it is expected that no more than 21, if that many, youngsters will be in the lineups of the different teams. More changes will be made in the National, where 12 rookies are scheduled to break in. Nine are scheduled for thorough tryouts by the American League managers.

Four clubs in the American are practically standing pat. They are the Browns, Natianals, Red Sox and the Yankees. Manager Fielder Jones of the local club says that both Bert Shotton and Johnny Lavan, who have missed the early spring series battles, will be in shape. Neither Barry nor Donovan saw any chances for switches in their lineups.

In the National, only one team, Philadelphia, is standing pat on men with the team last season. One switch has been made, the benching of Garvy Cravath in favor of Claude Cooper. The latter, however, played several games with the club during 1916.

Any Giant Acting Like Cobb Would Have Been Fined

McGraw Declares He Would Not Have Tolerated Spiking by His Players.

Johnny McGraw, manager of the Giants, says that he thought a lot of Cobb, before his recent scrap with Charley Herzog and his conduct in quitting the team. McGraw had the following to say about the episode according to Sid Mercer of the New York Globe:

"I have always been a booster for Cobb. I considered him a fine fellow with a charming personality and he surely is a great ballplayer. That was because I never saw him try to pull this stuff before. He made a nasty, deliberate attempt to ruin a good ballplayer, and if he did a trick like that and was playing for me I'd hand him a fine and suspension.

"The plain truth of the matter is that Cobb quit cold. He ran out because his bluff was called and called promptly. Because we will not permit him to jump into players with his spikes, he has taken his bat and mitt and gone away in a huff. I though he was a game player, but he's yellow."

KIECKHEFER-CANNEFAX MATCH MONDAY NIGHT

August Kieckhefer, Rockford (Ill.) entry in the Interstate Three-Cushion Billiard League, will be seen here in his contest with Bob Cannefax of the Rex Parlor tomorrow night, instead of April 18, as had first been scheduled. This contest will have no little bearing on the ultimate outcome of the championship race, inasmuch as Kieckhefer is at present but a half game behind Pierre Maupome, the leader, and the same amount ahead of Ellis, holder of third position. Cannefax defeated Kieckhefer in their match at Rockford last week, and, consequently, billiard enthusiasts are primed for a worthy match.

Jay Gould Wins Court Tennis Title by Beating Crane in Straight Sets

BOSTON, Mass., April 7.—Jay Gould of New York, won the national court tennis singles championship for the twelfth consecutive year today by defeating Joshua Crane of this city in straight sets. The score was 6-2, 6-1, 6-3.

Crane has opposed Gould in the final round of 11 of the 12 championship matches.

Gould played an aggressive game and outclassed Crane who was handicapped somewhat by lack of practice.

LOUISVILLE QUINT PROVES EASY FOR M. A. A. FIVE, 62-26

Local Basketball Players Make Runaway of First W. A. A. U. Championship Match.

SECOND GAME APRIL 14

Cherry Diamond Contingent Will Go to Louisville for Next Encounter.

The Missouri Athletic Association basket ball five, holder of the city championship, gained a step in its climb to the Western A. A. U. court supremacy by overwhelming the Calumet Club quintet of Louisville, Ky., 62 to 26, on the M. A. A. court last night in the first of a three-game series. The second game will be played in Louisville next Saturday, while a rubber contest if necessary—which is quite improbable—will be played the following week.

The little interest that did accompany last night's play was only in the conjecture as to the size of the point total that the locals would attain on the Southerners, inasmuch as the visiting team was no match for the lighter but more aggressive cherry diamond quint. The Louisville five was composed of a squad of men who lent more the appearance of heavyweight boxers than basket ball players. They depended upon stationary passing attack, which was readily broken down by the fast and clever local guards. The Calumet players did show some capability at shooting baskets, but so seldom did they get an opportunity to score that their accuracy netted them but little advantage.

Locals Have Good Attack.

On the other hand, Coach Wirtz's team presented a team-play that worked with piston-like precision. Instead of the shiftless flat-footed offensive of the Calumet players, the locals used a running passing execution of dazzling plays.

Although the teamplay was commendable, the individual work was, to say the least, brilliant. Peters and P. French peppered the aliens' basket with shots that brought forth applause throughout the game. These two men appear to form the best forward combination that has been seen in the city for many seasons. Sandford at center invariably took the jump, and owns that rare combination of being a good shot and also an intuitive middle man on the offense. Berry and C. French, two owls of the game, did yeoman service around their basket, as the score will indicate, invariably dividing the Louisville passing play.

The score at the close of the first half was 34 to 13. Instead of letting down, the locals took the court in the second period with renewed vigor and five minutes from the close of the game were leading, 54 to 18. Coach Wirtz then put in a team of substitutes, and the visitors were able to score more frequently. A crowd that packed the gallery about the gymnasium applauded the merits of the cherry-hosed players.

WILLARD PLANS TO ABDICATE AND LET MORAN HAVE TITLE

New York Report Declares Jess Is No Longer Able to Get Into Condition.

BAT NELSON WORKS OUT

Irrepressible Dane Is Maintaining Hard Training and a Press Agent.

"I will fight—when do you want me?"—Jess Willard.

This is a communication which the heavyweight fight champion of the world put on the wires last week. Carl Morris, the human tractor anxiously awaited to receive one like it. But, instead, Uncle Sam received it and accepted the offer. Whether Willard will abandon a circus contract calling for a sum alleged to be not less than $5000 per week, right in the middle of the season, remains to be seen.

Following on the heels of the telegram offering his services as a U. S. soldier came a news dispatch repeating a report current in New York that Willard was too fat to condition himself for another ring engagement and that he would retire and turn over his title to Frank Moran.

No confirmation of the report was obtainable last night by telegraph. It gains weight and plausibility when it is remembered that Willard, following his last fight with Moran, escaped the watchful eyes of Jones and Curley for a moment and told a reporter that he would never fight again. That's over a year ago.

Perhaps the only thing that has kept Willard in the ring has been the conversation of his managers.

Jeff Surrendered His Title.

A dispute is sure to follow if he tries to turn the title over to Moran, most of whose important battles have been defeats for the Pittsburger. There is a precedent for the transfer of the heavyweight title in the case of James J. Jeffries. The champion, acting as referee for the Jack Root-Marvin Hart bout at Reno, in 1905, formally surrendered the title to the winner, Marvin Hart, the first of a long line of cheese champions. The dynasty has not yet run out, as we take it.

Nelson Hard at It.

Bat Nelson will work out at the Future City Athletic Club today in preparation for the exhibition against Freddie Welsh at the Coliseum, April 17.

Age is beginning to tell on the Battler. He has lost his publicity punch completely. Formerly Bat could beat the vitals out of a typewriter. But the old sting has gone. He has to have a press agent now.

And still they try to prove that the Battler hasn't gone back!

Nelson is doing some other work. He does road work, especially when the photographer is looking, and gymnasium stunts. He is tuning up the old racer in the hope of overtaking Welsh one week from Tuesday. Bat hopes by severe practice to so gear up his speed as to be able to come within artillery range of the light-running Briton.

It would take artillery to catch Freddie, if Bat were in 1909 condition. In the meantime, Nelson proposes to be at his best on the coming occasion.

Weak Card at F. C. A. C.

Ordinary bouts are scheduled at the Future City's Pine street show this week. The same old local favorites will have the same old noses bloodied and the self-same cauliflower ears a bit more flowered.

Here is a list of the events:

Jack Rainey vs. Willie Colona, 8 rounds, 118 pounds.

Kid Regan vs. Red Johnston, 8 rounds, 118.

Happy Howard vs. Patsy Flannagan, 8 rounds, 118.

Pete Macklin vs. Nick Kube, 6 rounds, 128.

Yale Crews Win Twice; Varsity Has Close Call, Beating Penn by 12 Feet

PHILADELPHIA, April 7.—Yale triumphed over Pennsylvania in two slashing boat races rowed today on the Schuylkill River, a swirling, muddy stream that was lashed into whitecaps by a furious northwest gale. Both races were wonderful contests between crews which, although only average in their oarsmanship ability, were, nevertheless, powerful fighting machines.

By scarcely a quarter of a boatlength Yale varsity defeated the Quaker eight in a terrific race in which Pennsylvania spurted madly in the last half-mile and crept up out of the ruck only to be beaten in the final drive to the finish line by a matter of 12 or 15 feet.

But the race between the junior crews, scheduled to be the first of the day, but postponed until after the big race, because of an accident to the Yale shell at the starting line, was a thrilling battle from the crack of the gun until the finish line had been crossed with Yale a scant two feet in front. The Quakers jumped away at the gun and pulled out to a lead of three quarters of a length half way down the course, but Yale fighting and batling with every resource at its command, overhauled the Red and Blue stroke by stroke and then nosed ahead in the final heave.

The junior 'varsity crews raced over the course in better time than did the 'varsity eights, the time of the 'varsity race being six minutes 52 seconds and of the junior 'varsity six minutes 41 seconds. Pennsylvania's time in the 'varsity contest was 6 minutes 53 1-5 seconds, while the time of the Quaker crew in the Junior race was so far as the watches the same as that of the Yale crew, 6 minutes 41 seconds.

Four Hits for Gandil.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., April 7.—Thomas was hit hard and his successor, Humphrey, was wild, enabling the Chicago Americans to win easily from the local American Association club here today. Gandil of the White Sox got four hits in five times to the plate. Score:

Chicago, 9 14 3; Minneapolis, 1 6 4.

Batteries: Faber and Schalk; Thomas, Humphrey and Owens.

Rex Bowlers Are Winners.

The Rex quintet of the Grand-Central league copped first money in the West End handicap tenpin tournament with a total of 2927. Two squads bowled last night, but were unable to replace the leaders. The Schweigler Sodas were high with 2858, which gave them ninth place. The Wooster Lamberts, who switched their name to Ben Millers at the last moment, shot 2715, aided by a 54-pin handicap. Harry Herbst was the star with 599, including a 266 game.

Middies Win Lacrosse Match.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., April 7.—The Annapolis midshipmen won from University of Pennsylvania at Lacrosse today, 4 to 1. The baseball game scheduled between Princeton and the midshipmen was canceled owing to the war situation.

Trained Athletes Make Effective Fighters as Shown by European War

When United States Sends Its Army to the Field There Will Be Whole Regiments Made Up of Stars of Sport World.

By Robert Edgren.

WHEN we go to war our armies will have whole regiments of athletes. It is the modern custom. The great European War has shown that athletes make effective fighters—especially those who play football, lacrosse, polo, and the rougher games.

Canada sent an "Athletes' Regiment" to the front. It was made up of Canada's best athletes in all branches of sport. Australia sent thousands of her best athletes, and it is well known the Canadians and the Australians have more than held their end up.

England's athletes nearly all went to the war in the voluntary enlistment days. England will have to develop a new crop when the war is over. So will France, hundreds of whose champions in running, boxing and football have been killed. Most famous of these was Jean Bouin, the world's greatest distance runner. Bouin was shot down during a charge on the German lines. No doubt he was well out in front.

Anthony Wilding was Australia's most famous sacrifice. The master tennis player of them all was blown to pieces by a shell.

Athletes have had their place in the war game ever since it was invented. The Assyrians trained men for war by having them run down lions, afoot, and attack them with bows and arrows. The survivors of this rough military course made good soldiers.

Trained by Fighting Lions.

The ancient Spartans trained all their boys in athletic feats and use of arms from early childhood. They took great pride in their speed, endurance and skill and javelin throwing. Boys were trained to endure pain.

In Athens and at Olympia athletic championships were held every four years for about fourteen hundred years! These games were all planned to encourage training and develop warriors. The feats of some of these old athletes were marvelous. Military messengers covered over a hundred miles in a day over mountainous country.

At the Battle of Marathon the Athenians marched twenty-six miles from Athens at night, attacked the Persians, fought nearly all day, and marched back to Athens at night to be ready for an attack by the Persian fleet. No doubt the Marathon messenger who fell dead in the market place at Athens, after delivering his warning, had done his share of marching and fighting before he ran his race against time.

Olympic Games Stopped.

The Romans conquered Greece, but for many years the Greeks rose time and again to renew the desperate fight against their enemy. At last a Roman Governor decided that the Olympic games kept up the warlike spirit of Greece. The games were prohibited, the huge stadiums destroyed, and from that time on Greece stopped fighting. Afterward the Greeks offered slight resistance to barbarian inroads. Their system of athletic games—designed to make fighting men—had not been renewed. Nor were they renewed for nearly seventeen hundred years.

The athletic nations always have whipped the soft nations. The hardy riders from the frozen wilderness of Mongolia and Siberia swept over the luxury-softened people of Southern Europe with ease.

In America the Aztecs were a great fighting race. Their armies were made up of fighting units that were kept constantly in training. Mexico was covered with war trails along which these painted ferocious killers were kept running in battle formation. They overawed the subject caciques. When it was thought necessary to whet their ferocity with blood they were sent on long trails to attack cities picked for destruction and bring back their inhabitants to be sacrificed. In this way they raided what is now Arizona and New Mexico and annihilated the old Pueblo Indian cities.

Aztecs Were Fighting Race.

But the point in this is that the Axtec soldiers overawed all surrounding peoples because they were trained athletes. They were exercised to make them stronger than all other fighters, and on their long raids they didn't walk or march—they always ran. They were marvellous runners. Their attacks were sudden, and none could escape them.

English officers, writing on the war, agree that the football players and other athletes have been especially useful in attacking enemy trenches because of their speed and endurance, dash and hardihood. Behind the firing lines the English, Canadians and Australians play football, lacrosse and other games constantly for training. They even hold regimental championships in track and field sports, and boxing tournaments are every-day affairs. Boxing is a principal training sport on the British and the American fleets. This is because boxing doesn't require much space And boxing develops arms, legs, speed of hand and foot, coolness, endurance and fighting spirit even more than other games. I've seen humorous quips about boxers who "won't fight." This is hardly fair. Boxers have surely done their share of fighting in all the modern wars.

Mike Donovan fought all through the Civil War. So did Harry Beurmeyer, who, although an amateur boxer, was so formidable that years later John L. Sullivan, on Billy Madden's advice, refused to "set-to" with him.

Yes, athletes have always done their share of fighting and they always will.

Risberg, White Sox Recruit, Has Made Good All Things Said of Him

MANY major league clubs angled for him. The Detroit Tigers wanted him. Connie Mack, the eagle-eyed baseball impresario of Philadelphia, wished to add him to his "future pennant winners." Even Charley Weeghman of the Cubs, fast being imbued with the baseball sense, scented another future great in this player and sought him as late as this spring. Yes, Charley Risberg has arrived. It didn't take him so long to become acclimated to big circuit conditions, either.

Del Howard and other wise guys of the Pacific Coast sporting fraternity told last winter of this player's latent talents and his probable future great in the ancient order of amalgamated baseball stars' union.

Risberg has been with the White Sox a month and has become well acquainted with his big league companions. They also have learned a lot about this native son of California.

The principal thing of interest about Risberg is that he made good all the good things that were said about him. He seems impervious to praise and deaf, dumb and blind to applause. He is affable, likable, a good mixer, a giant in stature and a player of good habits.

Risberg is married and is much a family man. This young man is much on the order of Eddie Collins. He plays baseball with his brain as well as his hands. On the training trip he has revealed a habit of doing a thing at the psychological time—a trait extremely rare and refreshing to a degree in a rookie player.

This fielding star possesses a wonderful throwing arm, his one best bet on the diamond. Some of Risberg's plays have been classics of advanced skill and his great accuracy in whipping the ball to first has enabled him to fall into line with such aggressive infielders as Eddie Collins, Chick Gandil and Buck Weaver and hold his own.

Risberg is all that was said of him as a fielder and then some, but his aggressiveness was a surprise. He's a fighting gun on the diamond in a hot ball game.

Gandil and Weaver are infielders of the battling type. Eddie Collins doesn't need to fight. Comiskey and Rowland will be content to see Eddie play ball in his own inimitable way. They believe Risberg will fill a big gap at short and Collins, who is a good debater, will reason with the umpires while the other three infielders are fighting for the ball games.

Risberg is a student, another point in his favor. He likes games of chance, is daffy about golf, knows most all the card games, is a pool and billiard shark and aspires to being the greatest shortstop in the American League. He began his career as a pitcher. That accounts for his riflelike shots to first. This rookie throws a heavy ball, bats and throws right handed, lives in San Francisco and stands 6 feet in his gymnasium shoes. He played second base last year.

Sport's High Cost This Season Hits Harder Than Ever

Golfer, It Seems, Is Getting Off Cheaper Than Any of the Others Right Now.

The high cost of playing, as well as the high cost of living, is confronting the sportsmen of the country, and it doesn't matter whether the sport is obtained at the traps, on the court, the links, ball diamond, or on the bank of the lake or river, the cost has advanced in about equal ratio. And the end is not yet in sight.

The golfer, it seems, is getting off easier than men who get their sport at other games. There has been a slight advance in the price of clubs, due solely to the increased price of raw material.

The brassie is advanced in price because of the added cost of brass, and there has been an increase in the leather trimmings. There also has been an advance in the price of golf balls. Every item of clothing worn by the golfer has advanced anywhere from 10 to 50 per cent.

Golf Needs Raised in Price.

Tennis goods have advanced approximately 10 per cent.

Baseball players find themselves facing an increase that is enough to make them wonder where all their last winter's wages went to. At the present time the price is low compared with what it will be in the future. One manager of the sporting goods house said the advance in the price of uniforms is comparatively small, but there are some big breakers ahead. Since the prices were made that control this season's sales there has been an advance of 60 per cent in cloth; 50 per cent in trimmings and 50 per cent in shoes. Masks have advanced 45 per cent, and mitts and gloves approximately 100 per cent.

Baseball Goods Advanced.

The price of balls will remain about the same for the season, but the manufacture of some of the lower grades of baseballs has been discontinued. The 5-cent ball is no longer to be had, except in a variety of poor quality made in Japan. Baseball bats have advanced approximately 25 per cent.

Fishing tackle has advanced from 10 to 50 per cent. Owing to the increased insurance and ocean freight rates, bamboo has gone sky high, so that the chap who buys a split bamboo rod this year will be in the upper class. Steel rod prices also have advanced.

Trapshooters also are getting theirs. The trap load which before the war sold at $2.86 per 100, now brings $4.40. The cost of shooting has been advanced to such an extent that many who enjoy the game will find it beyond their means unless the program is reduced.

Stecher and His Rival, Caddock, Have Met Before

About Five Years Ago They Wrestled in a Barn With a Gate Amounting to $1.60.

OMAHA, April 7.—The ring history of Earl Caddock and Joe Stecher, who meet here next Monday, April 9, for the world's heavyweight wrestling championship, is replete with sensations, but, above all else, every act of each man is honest.

It was a trifle less than five years ago that Earl Caddock and Joe Stecher first met on a wrestling mat. This match was staged in a barn in Caddock's home town, Anita, Io., and the Dodge, Neb., plowboy was imported to give the Hawkeye youth a workout.

At that time both men were the rankest sort of wrestlers. By that is meant they were uncouth in their actions, in ring generalship, in ability and in science. Neither knew very much about the sport, but each was a big, husky young man, eager to get on in the game.

Have Met Once Before.

An admission fee of 10 cents a head was charged to see the boys work. Statistics show that $1.60 was the box office receipts for the bout. What percentage of this amount the wrestlers split is problematical. It is understood the "promoter" kept the "gate."

But this match was the stepping stone to greater things for both Caddock and Stecher. It was the first stone passed in their career. And now, just five years later, these two men are to wrestle a finish match here for the heavyweight championship—and in the presence of a $15,000 house.

Quite some difference between that first "house" of $1.60 and this house of $15,000! Wot?

Pirates Lose Again.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., April 7.—Birmingham batsmen hit Grimes hard in the first and third innings today and, combined with five errors, scored eight runs and defeated the Pittsburg Nationals 8 to 2. Score:

Future City Results.

In the darktown boxing show at the Future City A. C. last night, the Alligator Kid got the decision in a six-round bout with Young Costello, while Kid Jello shaded Benny Hall in six rounds. In the feature event Lawrence Hawkins won from Kid Dusty.

Toledo Beats Red Sox, 6-0.

TOLEDO, O., April 7.—The Toledo American Association club bunched hits off Ruth and shut out the Boston Americans, 6 to 0, in an exhibition game here today. Score:

Boston, 0 6 3; Toledo, 6 6 0.

Batteries—Ruth, Pennock and Thomas; Bedient, Keating and Bresnahan, Sweeney.

Bowlers Are Idle Today.

Because of Easter Sunday, no matches will be rolled today in the Greater St. Louis individual bowling tournament on Peterson's alleys. Harry Rood seems to have the championship clinched, while Whitehead during the past week lost a great chance to place himself secure in second position by losing two matches. Jerry Ameling, Jule Schmitt and other stars are also in the hunt for the runner-up positions.

SPORT SALAD

BY L. C. Davis

The Plaint of the Rookie.

'TIS the voice of the rookie,
  I hear him declare:
"This training camp business
  Is not on the square.
These major league managers
  Give me a pain;
They don't know enough
  To come out of the rain."

"I've got all these veterans
  Lashed to the mast;
I'm there with the 'pep';
  On the bases I'm fast.
In Jeffersonville
  I played every posish,
And batted .300
  In Coldwater, Mich."

"I burned up the bushes
  In Carterville, Mo.,
And won the gonfalon
  For Circleville, O.
I startled the natives
  In Stillwater, Minn.,
But here they won't give me
  A chance to go in."

"I polished the bench
  Till I wore out my pants,
In hopes that some day
  I'd be given a chance.
I know what's the trouble,
  It's plain as can be:
These major league guys
  Are all jealous of me."

"'Twas yesterday morning
  The manager said,
'I never have seen
  Such an ivory head;
It's very apparent
  You're out of your class;
I think I will send you
  To Marblehead, Mass.'"

'Tis the voice of the rookie,
  I hear him complain:
"I'll have to go back
  To the bushes again.
It's as plain as the nose
  On Buck Herzog's face,
For .300 hitters
  This isn't the place."

Concordia Seminary to Have Championship Nine in Field, Manager Says

Concordia Seminary will be represented on the diamond this season by another good team, according to Manager P. Selz. Three stars of last year were lost by graduation, but the return of several veterans, out of school in 1916, and a crop of new youngsters make the team look even better than a year ago, at least in the early workouts.

Manager Baumann is at present trying to complete a schedule for the nine. With St. Louis University and Washington giving up baseball for the campaign, these two schools cannot be played and it is expected that Concordia and C. B. C. will again fight it out for the collegiate title.

Catcher Weinhold, outfielder Schmitt and Manager Baumann were the tossers lost by graduation. It is expected, however, that the absence of this trio will be offset by the return of Pitcher "Tan" Schleuter, Meyer infielder, and Bob Deumler, outfielder and pitcher.

The players left over from last season's regulars are Manager Selz, who will without a doubt again play third base; Oettiag and Grabarkowitz, infielders; Engelbrecht, pitcher; Sohn and Haas, outfielders. Selz's chief worry seems to be to develop a first-class catcher from the new material, which comes to the local school teach term from Fort Wayne and other cities.

E. A. FAUST ADDS $75,000 MURILLO TO ART COLLECTION

"St. Joseph and the Infant Christ" Formerly Owned by King Louis Phillippe.

Edward A. Faust of 1 Portland place will soon add to the art collection in his private gallery a Murillo painting, "St. Joseph and the Infant Christ," which he has purchased from a New York dealer at a price said to be $75,000.

Murillo, who lived from 1617 to 1682, is considered, next to Velazquez, the greatest of Spanish painters. He painted several pictures of the same title as the one which Faust has purchased. In this particular picture St. Joseph is shown as holding the sleeping infant on his lap.

The picture was in the collection of Prince Conti, in Paris, in the days before the French Revolution, and it was later in the collection of King Louis Philippe. It was in the hands of an English owner for a time, being exhibited in the Royal Academy, and then went back to France, whence it was purchased by the New York dealer.

Faust has in his collection the noted "Holy Family," by Rubens, which he bought in New York six years ago. He has also a "Virgin and Child," by Jost Van Cleef.

GERMAN PROTEST TO U. S. BASED ON SEARCH AT HALIFAX

Bernstorff Party Had Assurances It Could Keep Personal Property, It Says.

THE HAGUE, via London, April 7.—The version received here of the German note transmitted through the Swiss Minister for the information of the United States, protesting against Count von Bernstorff's treatment at Halifax points out that the Von Bernstorff party, under the terms of their American passports and Anglo-French safe conduct, were to be permitted to take with them their personal effects, household goods and a reasonable amount of money, but were forbidden to carry confidential papers. The party, the note continues, believed they might rely upon American assurances in this respect, but found themselves mistaken.

There was an unusually prolonged examination period at Halifax which was a source of unnecessary annoyance and interference, it is claimed, while money and other objects, possession of which was to have been permitted, were seized as contraband under conditions asserted to have been incompatible with decency and good manners. Personal property in some of the cabins was roughly thrown about, the note declares, after the men, women and children, with the exception of Count von Bernstorff, had been submitted to a body search, many of them, including women, being compelled to disrobe.

Count von Bernstorff, it is asserted, was not permitted to lodge an official complaint until an hour before the steamer left Halifax. Non-German passengers are also mentioned as declaring they also were treated ruthlessly and it is alleged that two Canadian customs officers were intoxicated while on duty.

Germany, the note says, was obliged strongly to protest against this treatment as the passports mentioned free passage without delay or interference and further spoke of friendly aid and protection.

"The German Government," the note concludes, "believes it may expect that the American Government will take up this affair as its own and remonstrate with the British Government all the more as it is the American nation's boast that it always will stand for chivalrous treatment of women and children. Therefore, America must learn with especial indignation that women, trusting in the protection of the American Government, were not protected against degrading treatment.

"The Swiss Legation at Washington may be requested to take steps to induce America to make representations to Great Britain to obtain a refund of the monies and other objects taken from the German official, or immediate return to their owners or to be placed in the custody of the Swiss Legation until the end of the war. The German Foreign Office reserves the rights to furnish details of the monies and objects concerned."

QUITS BELLEVILLE LIBRARY BOARD OVER FLYING OF FLAG

Dr. G. E. Hilgard's Motion to Raise Old Glory Lost; One to Wait on Congress Adopted.

Dr. George E. Hilgard has resigned from membership in the Board of Directors of the Belleville Public (Carnegie) Libary, because of the refusal of the other directors, at Thursday night's meeting, to vote for his motion that the United States flag should be raised over the library building.

The seven other members of the board voted that the flag should be raised over the building after Congress should vote to declare war, but not before that time. As it happened, Congress completed its vote for war before daylight Friday, and so the flag was raised Friday morning, as soon as it would have been raised if Dr. Hilgard's motion had been adopted. But Dr. Hilgard declared that his difference with his fellow members was one of principle, and he sent his resignation to Mayor Duvall Friday. He said yesterday that he would not reconsider it.

The substitute motion, which was adopted, to fly the flag after Congress should declare war, was made by Otto G. Neuhaus. The other members who supported his motion were: L. R. Osterhaus, brother of a retired Rear Admiral in the United States Navy; Max Eckhardt, Henry Baumgarten, W. A. Hough, E. P. Leuscher and C. W. Schuchardt.

WAGNER ELECTRIC TAKES STEP TO ASSURE EMPLOYES' LOYALTY

Pledge to Be Signed by Those Having German Ties, and Volunteer Internal Guard Organised.

The Wagner Electric Manufacturing Co., one of the largest munition-making concerns in the St. Louis industrial district, has taken measures to assure the loyalty of all its employes to the company and to the U. S. Government.

W. A. Layman, president of the company, has prepared a blank form for a pledge of loyalty, to be signed by employes who have famlliy ties connecting them with Germany. He has also encouraged the formation among the employes of the Volunteer Internal Reserve Guard, to supplement the regularly employed guards, who have been on duty since the manufacture of munitions for the allies commenced. Members of the volunteer guard are pledged among other things to inform the company's executives of any act of hostility, in word or deed, against the Government, by any person inside or outside the company's employ.

The Wagner company finished, March 31, the last of its munition contracts for the allies.

WILL REQUEST ROCK ISLAND TO ABANDON TRACK NORTH OF PARK

Board of Public Service Engineer Goes to Chicago to Confer With Road Official.

L. R. Bowen, bridge engineer of the Board of Public Service, will go to Chicago tonight to confer tomorrow with C. A. Morse, chief engineer of the Rock Island Railroad, in an effort to induce that company to abandon its present tracks and right of way from De Baliviere avenue to the western city limits, and use the Wabash tracks from Ferguson or some other point in St. Louis County.

The Board of Public Service has been attempting to obtain the abolition of grade crossings on the Wabash between Forest Park and the city limits north of Delmar boulevard, but has been unable to get the concurrence of the Rock Island in the plan for depression. Both the Rock Island and the Wabash prefer the elevation of their tracks.

The city's scheme of abolition contemplates the abandonment of the Rock Island tracks north of Forest Park, west of De Baliviere avenue, and the operation of trains over the Wabash line, so that only one series of crossings will have to be eliminated.

Soldier Accidentally Killed.

FORT BLISS, Tex., April 7.—A ball cartridge which was fed into the magazine of a machine gun at rifle range by mistake yesterday killed Private John Ryan of Company L, Sixteenth U. ARKANSAN FLIES GERMAN FLAG Guard Commander and U. S. Marshal Decline to Enforce Its Removal.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., April 7.—George Hubman, living at Collinsville, near here, last night hoisted a German flag over his home and it continued to float there today.

Col. C. D. James, commander of the First Arkansas Infantry, revoked an order of the Governor detailing a squad of militiamen to take down the flag. Col. James held that the regiment was subject to orders of Gen. Pershing. The United States Marshal, when ordered to remove the flag, declined, saying he did not know officially that war existed and that he had received no order under President Wilson's proclamation.

Zenatello Singing in Tone Test With the Edison

Suppose Giovanni Zenatello Came to Your House and Sang the Monolog from the Opera "Otello"—It Would Be a Treat, Wouldn't It?

The NEW EDISON
"The Phonograph with a Soul"
—New York Globe.

Reproduces Zenatello's voice so perfectly that you cannot tell his living voice from the New Edison's Re-Creation of it! That sounds like an extravagant statement, doesn't it? But it has been proven in public. It is a fact.

Come to Our Store

—and hear the re-created voices of Zenatello and other great artists, then listen to the New Edison's Re-Creation of the violin, the cello, the flute, the piano and finally, to the wonderful orchestra Re-Creation.

There is a musical surprise awaiting you. Come in tomorrow and be convinced.

This is what Zenatello said in an interview?

"Signor, I am surprised, I am astounded—I am—how you say it?—I am overcome, when I hear Zenatello on the Edison. I don't believe it at first. Then I cry, 'It is Zenatello! It is Zenatello!'

"I hear myself on talking machines, signor. I sing for talking machines in Milan and New York, but," and here the tenor made a little grimace, "but I do not hear Zenatello on talking machines.

"Mr. Edison is the only one who—what you say?—Re-creates my voice. On the Edison I sing like I sing at home or on the stage. I sing like Zenatello always sings. You sing yourself and the Edison sings, and you cannot tell the difference, signor.

"My favorite role, signor?" Smiles eddied in the tenor's blue eyes.

"Otello! Otello, signor! All over the world I have sung Otello. I sing Otello at La Scala, at Buenos Aires, in New York and all over your country. It is my favorite. I sing Otello for the Edison like I sing Otello on the stage. My wife is in the next room and she thinks the Edison is Zenatello, and my friends think the Edison is Zenatello. And I cannot tell the difference, signor. I don't know if I am in the next room or not, signor. That is the proof. Si, signor?"

COME in at any time and we will be pleased to demonstrate the New Edison. You owe it to yourself to hear recreated music.

Frantic buying and price advances of unparalleled rapidity and extent resulted in the local wheat market yesterday from a Government crop report that was characterized as the most sensational ever issued in the United States. The closing was wild, and in some instances at the zenith quotations reached, with the market as a whole, 5⅝c to 12½c net higher with May $2.20½, July at $1.84 to $1.84⅛ and Sept. at $1.72½. Corn gained 5c to 6c, and oats 1¾c.

It was not until business had been under way half an hour that the Government crop report was received and the wheat market began to somersault in earnest. During the first 30 minutes of the session the chief movement was a swift break in prices owing to reports that German sea raiders had been sighted off Nantucket and the Virginia capes, and that outbound merchant steamships for Europe were being warned back by the United States naval authorities. As soon, however, as the fact was evident that the worst fears concerning damage to the domestic winter crop had been more than realized, values started on an almost vertical ascent, that at no time afterward was fully checked.

Crop Outlook Is Poor.

In view of the fact that with but a single exception the crop condition reported by the Government was the lowest on record at any season of the year, and was far under even the most bullish predictions, all other influences were temporarily thrust aside. Kansas and Nebraska percentages especially showed such a radical setback that many shorts who at first were dazed and incredulous became afterward clamorous to cover. They paid dearly for hesitating, for although on the bulge important holders seized the chance to take profits, the amount of offerings was at no point equal, for very long, to satisfying the demand.

Strength in corn and oats was almost entirely borrowed from the violence of the upswing in wheat. Traders in feedstuffs, though, evinced a notable disposition to be relatively conservative on the bull side. There was a huge general trade, which was well divided.

WASHINGTON, April 7.—The winter wheat crop of the United States will be about 430,000,000 bushels, the Department of Agriculture announced today in its first estimate of the crop which was sown last autumn on one of the largest acreages ever planted, but which had adverse conditions through the winter. Last year 481,744,000 bushels were harvested and 673,947,000 bushels were produced in 1915.

Condition on April 1 was 63.4 per cent of a normal, compared with 78.3 last year; 88.8 in 1916, and 86.2 the 10-year average. The condition decreased 22.3 points from Dec. 1 to April 1, compared with an average decline of 4 points in the past 10 years between those dates.

Condition of winter wheat in the important growing states on April 1 was: Ohio, 80; Indiana, 65; Illinois, 60; Missouri, 62; Nebraska, 35; Kansas 45; Oklahoma, 74.

Conditions of rye on April 1 was 86.0 per cent of a normal, compared with 87.8 last year; 89.5 in 1915, and 89.6 the 10-year average.

RECORD PRICES ARE SCORED IN THE HOG MARKET

Reported for the Post-Dispatch by the National Live Stock Commission Co., National Stock Yards, Ill.

COMPARATIVE RECEIPTS

	Last Week	Week Before	Last Year
Cattle	13,200	15,400	11,000
Hogs	50,300	59,100	40,000
Sheep	6,400	4,400	8,600

Stimulated by a vigorous demand not only from local buyers, but outsiders as well, the cattle trade the past week was the best ever recorded in the history of the local market. Sharp advances followed the active trend of the market, and had suitable quality and flesh in the killing line been available phenomenal sales no doubt would have resulted. As it was, some choice steers sold as high as $12.30 per cwt.

Prices at the close of the market Friday, which was virtually the wind-up of the week, showed a gain of 35c to 50c per cwt. on killing steers, while canners, butcher stuff and cows improved 50c. Stockers and feeders came in for their share of the good inquiry, though the price advance on these was not so strong, being covered by a gain of 25c per cwt.

Choice to prime beef steers were quoted at $11.75 to $12.75; good to choice, $11 to $11.75; medium to good, $10.25 to $10.75; common to medium, $9.50 to $10.25; common off-colored light killing steers, $8.25 to $9; good to choice stockers and feeders, $8.75 to $9.75; medium to good, $8.25 to $8.75; common to medium $7 to $8.25; good to choice stock cows, $7.25 to $7.50; common to fair, $6.50 to $7.25; good to choice light stock heifers, $7.50 to $8.25; choice to prime fat yearling butcher cattle, $11 to $11.75; good to choice, $10 to $11; connon to medium $8 to $9.50; choice to fancy heavy beef cows, $9.50 to $10.25; good to choice, $9 to $9.50; medium to good, $8 to $9; cutters, $7 to $8; canners, $5.50 to $6.50; good fat beef bulls, $9.25 to $10; heavy sausage bulls, $8.25 to $9; light sausage bulls, $7 to $8.

There were two distinct markets in hogs during last week. One was a materially higher session for the good weight hogs such as average 180 lbs. upwards at an advance of 50c to 60c per cwt., compared with the trade a week ago. The other was a dull, slow market for pigs and light stuff at no appreciable change in values. The cause of the activity for the better weights was due to their scarcity, and buyers centering their attention upon this kind, and as a result record prices prevailed.

On the other hand, owing to the fact that Eastern markets had fair supplies, orders dwindled for light stuff to insignificant volume. At the close of the market yesterday, choice hogs, 180 lbs upwards, sold at $15.80 to $16.05; mixed hogs, 160 lbs up, $15.25 to $15.75; best dough hogs, $15 to $15.25; half-fat rough hogs, $10 to $12.50; pigs, 120 lbs to 150 lbs, $13 to $14.50; lighter pigs, $9.50 to $13. The week's record on good hogs was $16.05.

There was no change in sheep trade

SUNDAY POST-DISPATCH'S REVIEW OF MARKET CONDITIONS

DRIFT OF STOCK PRICES REFLECTS BEARISH FLAVOR ON THE NEW YORK MARKET

Standard Shares Record Wide Losses on the Week's Speculation.

WAR THE BIG FACTOR

Adverse Winter Wheat Outlook Also Is a Depressing Influence.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, April 7.—The Evening Post, in its copyrighted weekly financial review, says:

"That the financial markets should have hesitated—rather in perplexity than in alarm—at the announcement of the Government's far-reaching program of military purpose and war finance, was not unnatural. Convinced as Wall street itself had been during a good many months before last Monday, that war with Germany was unavoidable, there had undoubtedly been a widespread expectation that our own active preparation and participation in the conflict, in either direction would be relatively small. This week's developments at Washington have come in the nature of a disillusionment.

"The burdens on the country's resources in the way of both national loans and national taxes will be heavy; its corporated industry must share them with individuals. A very mean and base conception of the facts is exhibited, however, by the group of carping critics who have instantly begun to talk about the "pocket nerve," and point triumphantly to a 4 or 5 per cent decline on the Stock Exchange as proof that Wall street's patriotism has been "dollar patriotism," and is now being chilled by the prospect of financial burdens.

Stock Market Is Complex.

The stock market is a complex organism, whose variations reflect its view of immediate intrinsic values as well as its view of larger general influences, and what has occurred on the Stock Exchange this week, reflected simply the first confusion of ideas as to which was the predominant influence of the moment on the attitude of investors.

"There will be abundant time for the financial community to appraise both influences. The first and most powerful offset to the uncertainty of sentiment shown this week will come on consideration of the extent the plans for military preparedness on the large scale will guarantee the national security in the existing situation. Nowhere has the absence of such preparedness been more frequently insisted on as a precarious element in a country on the verge of war than in our own financial circles. With the declaration of war come prompt and comprehensive measures to correct that part of the situation. Far reaching in character, they have not been described by any one as reckless or haphazard. The talk of the United States 'going into war with its eyes shut' will not be very widely heard hereafter.

The Market's Position.

It is impossible that this consideration should not be reflected in financial sentiment. How far it will offset other legitimate considerations it remains for the market to show. But no one need wait for the movement of the coming weeks or months, on the Stock Exchange, to learn the real financial view, first, regarding the capacity of our immensely prosperous and well organized finance to meet all necessary requisitions on it, second, regarding the manner in which our international power and prestige has been fortified by our bringing of Germany to final account for her attitude towards the United States and the civilized world at large.

"The Government's estimate on the condition of the winter wheat crop—the first of the season, and awaited with the greatest interest, in view of the world-wide food supply situation—was published at 11 o'clock today. It unfortunately bore out the most unfavorable conjectures of the grain trade. Even a condition 70 per cent of normal, which the trade had rather generally predicted, would have been the lowest April figure in a generation. But the Department of Agriculture puts the percentage at 63⅜. For this result, it would not be easy to find a parallel in the department's records; the only figure as low as this was the 62 per cent of June, 1885, and that came at the end, not the beginning of the growing season.

Crop 430,000,000 Bushels.

"On the basis of today's condition, the Government estimates an indicated winter wheat yield of 430,000,000 bushels. This compares with 495,000,000 normal as last year's April indication, and with 481,700,000 bushels actually turned out at harvest.

"The grain market's view of the estimate was expressed by a rapid advance of 12 and 14 cents per bushel in wheat prices for future delivery. The one offsetting consideration to this winter wheat situation is the possibility of large planting and a successful outcome to the spring wheat crop. In 1912 on a much smaller planted acreage than this season's the yield of winter wheat was only 400,000,000 bushels. But the spring wheat states produced the largest crop on record, and the country's total wheat yield was the largest in half a dozen years and the third largest in our history.

London Review.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

LONDON, April 7.—Your Government's formal declaration of war was not generally known here yesterday, because of the holiday and the absence of afternoon newspapers. But in the city and elsewhere flags were flying wherever the news was known, and over the world's largest bank, the London City and Midland, the Union Jack and the Stars and Stripes were hoisted together on the first cable announcement. But London's real response will not come until after Easter.

The city is especially enthusiastic over President Wilson's refusal to allow America's importance and influence to blot out of consideration the necessity for conserving resources. His reference to the necessity for closest co-operation, with a view to efficiency and economy, and his reference to the dangers of inflation arising from large loans not supported with heavy taxation, command admiration.

Control of Supplies.

It is greatly hoped that the President's ideas in these directions will lead to formation of strong international committees, especially as regards finance. It is also considered that great opportunities are afforded by control of certain commodities like coal; while as regards gold, shipments not absolutely required could be averted by "earmarkings" at arranged centers.

The Economist emphasizes the importance of your seizure of the German shipping on your side.

The week's movements in the foreign exchanges, especially French, have been due to expectations of enlarged credits in your markets for the allies.

French exchange has been particularly influenced by the evident disposition in your country to deal with her with great liberality. Arrangement of the machinery for these advances, however, will necessarily take time, hence the necessity for early commencement of financial action.

It is believed that the huge American Government buying will conceivably affect your money rates, therefore, although our bank rate was reduced on Thursday to 5 per cent, as a result of your entry into the war, our market's attitude is cautious, pending developments. Moreover, universal caution is justified by the consideration that, however helpful your action may be to the allies, the fact remains that the enlargement of the area of war, with each additional combatant, involves expansion in aggregate war expenditure and in the consequent demands on the world's capital.

War Tax a Heavy One.

Moreover, the war is of such magnitude as to tax the very resources of nature herself, hence if prolonged, the necessity for economy in consumption and stimulation of production is for us quite as necessary as if you were not taking part.

Briefly summarized, the best opinions here, while considering your participation in the war as insuring victory, believe that the first essential, and the one on which the duration of the war depends, is the closest, most intelligent and most skillful co-operation of America and her allies; we, profiting by your help, you by our experience of the two-and-a-half past years. There must, however, be complete understanding, both on general principles to be employed and on methods of procedure.

Our future money rates now depend largely on financial arrangements with you. Despite the lower bank rate, the joint stock banks have not yet reduced deposit rates, awaiting developments; while the Government must necessarily go on borrowing for war at the rate of something around £40,000,000 weekly, thus strengthening money rates.

—"sample" this source of active capital

75% of our $35,001,972.59 business in 1916 came from concerns rated $35,000 to $1,000,000

77.4% of our customers have first or second credit ratings.

In these days of rapidly expanding business, even a liberally financed house may find itself temporarily short of ready money for some important purpose, like carrying new accounts, discounting bills, picking up spot cash bargains or starting a new selling campaign.

To raise this money by selling stock or taking a partner, means a permanent division of profits. To secure acceptances for discount usually means concessions to your customers, and always means annoying them and suggesting financial dependence.

Far better to let us release part or all of your capital now tied up in accounts receivable. It costs less than the discount you probably offer your customers, they know nothing of the transaction, and you can "sample" it by selling us a small batch of your accounts.

If you like the method, you can sell us more. If you don't, your account will soon pay out, and the transaction is closed. Our very brief little rate booklet explains our plan very clearly. We should like very much to send a copy to Manufacturers and Wholesalers worth $20,000 and over—or our nearest representative will call on request.

On Sale

On Tuesday morning, April 10, we shall place on sale at our offices a limited allotment of shares in Harroun Motors Corporation.

This stock is now offered at $8 per share of $10 par value.

The same price is being quoted by brokers in New York, Chicago, Detroit and elsewhere. It represents the fourth upward step of this security which was first marketed to investors, four months ago, at $5 a share.

HARROUN

Unusual safeguards have been thrown about your investment in this security.

All holdings of Ray Harroun and his associates have been placed in escrow with the Treasurer of the State of Michigan, to remain until the success of the enterprise has been firmly established by earnings of at least $600,000, or to be used if needed as a source of other benefit for the company.

To make money for themselves, the organizers of the company must make money for you.

No Other Security Obligation

The Harroun Motors Corporation has but one security issue—its $10,000,000 of common stock. There is no preferred stock, no bonds, no borrowed money.

Incorporated only six months ago, the Harroun Motors Corporation now has—

A CAR far in advance of all competition in the popular-priced field.

An ORGANIZATION of skilled specialists of national reputation in the automobile industry.

A great chain of modern and nearly automatic PLANTS completed and paid for.

The most modern equipment of MACHINERY in the industry, paid for and now being installed.

Signed ORDERS, by contract and backed by cash deposits, for 95% of its output for five years to come. These orders amount to more than $11,000,000 for this year and increase automatically with expansion.

Within a short time the company will be producing 150 cars a day at a profit of at least $100 a car.

Here is your chance to make an investment in independence.

Motor car industry annals tell of no other automobile manufacturer whose early history equaled that of the Harroun Motors Corporation in rapid, successful progress.

Good management has always succeeded when applied to the manufacture and sale of motor cars.

Recent developments indicate that, within a very short time, we shall advance the price of stock to par.

See the Harroun car, on exhibition April 9-14 inclusive, at the Hudson-Phillips Motor Car Co., Harroun St. Louis distributors, 3301 Locust St. Open evenings.

ST. LOUIS REALTY ACTIVITIES NOT AFFECTED BY WAR

High Prices of Materials Likely to Hamper Construction, but Planning of Improvements Continues on a Scale Noteworthy for Breadth.

CELLA AND TATE CLOSE BIG DEAL

Combination Hotel and Theater Projected on Grand Avenue and Olive Street Corner—80 Offices Leased in New University Club and Demand Is Brisk.

BY BERRY MOORE.

Apparently the entry of the United States into the war will have no adverse effect on local realty and building activities. With the advent of April, operations in this field have been on a notably broad scale, notwithstanding the fact that prices of material and of labor have increased the cost of construction to almost prohibitive figures.

Construction work may be curtailed somewhat as a result of the rising tide of prices, purchases of flats and of apartments for investment, as well as of homes, the indications are, will be in greater volume, according to Sam Koplar of the Sam Koplar Real Estate and Building Co., the largest builders of bungalows and apartments in St. Louis.

As a matter of fact, what promises to be the most important deal of the year has just been concluded by Louis A. Cella, together with Frank R. Tate, who has thus acquired control of the southeast corner of Grand avenue and Olive street, as a site for an 18-story hotel and theater structure to be erected by the Southern Realty and Financial Co., of which Cella is president. The proposed improvement will be extended to include the Players' Theater on Grand avenue, which will be reconstructed with a greater seating capacity.

The three-story office building now on the corner and the theater were the assets of the Mid-City Realty Co., which transferred all its property to Cella and Tate. The transaction was made by J. H. Farish & Co., as agents for the Mid-City Co.

Players' Theater Reconstruction.

The theater improvement will be made immediately, it was announced. The new owners will remodel the building at an expense of $100,000 into a large modern theater, not only adapted for vaudeville and moving pictures, but also made available for operas, concerts and conventions.

The hotel will be built upon the expirations of two short leases now existing on the corner building, it was stated. The hotel will cost more than $1,000,000 and will go far, realty agents declare, toward insuring future realty values in that district.

As president of the Southern Realty and Financial Co., Cella has been a commanding figure in realty and building operations in downtown St. Louis, he having erected the American Hotel and Theater structure at the northeast corner of Seventh and Market streets, and the American Hotel Annex at the southeast corner of Sixth and Market, together with the Grand Opera House and the Orpheum Theater now being completed at the southeast corner of Ninth and St. Charles streets. Cella recently purchased the northeast corner of Tenth and Chestnut streets, attracted by the future of Chestnut street as a center for automobile interests. This corner is to become the site of a large building, the first floor of which probably will be available for the display of automobiles and the upper floors for offices of such interests.

Combination Hotel and Theater.

Another plan for the improvement of this corner contemplates a combination hotel and theater structure. All his operations have been on a comprehensive scale, the Southern Realty and Financial Co. being the vehicle of his operations, his holdings, including, among others, the Central National Bank building, the Columbia Theater, the Imperial Theater, the Strand Theater and the Emerson Electric Co.'s building at Twentieth street and Washington avenue. He also laid out North Parkview Addition, which was disposed of recently under the auspices of John S. Harris, now secretary of the Fletcher R. Harris Realty Co., at public auction, and which is being built up with pretentious apartment houses.

The advent of Cella at Grand avenue and Olive street with ambitious building plans, following on the heels of Isaac T. Cook, who has just launched construction of a 13-story building at the northwest corner of Grand and Washington avenues, real estate operators declare, heralds a new era of construction on central Grand avenue.

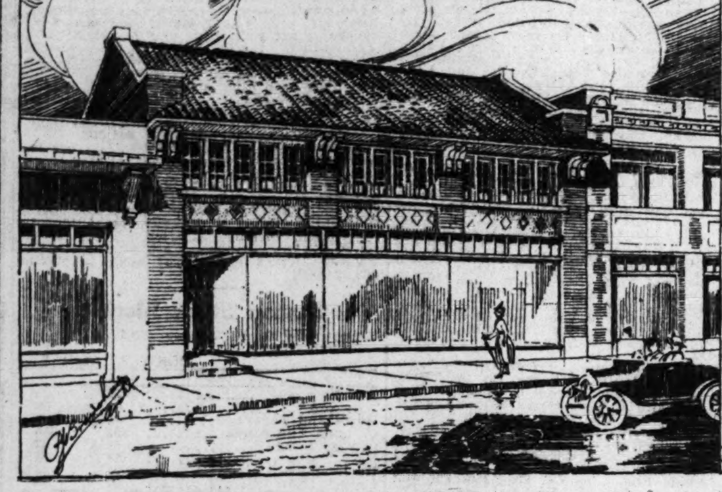
Rentals in University Club.

According to William F. Shannon, whom Isaac T. Cook has placed in charge of the rental end of the enterprise, there have already been 58 applications for offices in the new University Club Building, the site for which has just been cleared.

One lease embraces an entire half of one floor of the building, which is arranged in suites equipped exclusively for offices for physicians, surgeons and dentists.

Grover W. Bell, manager of the selling department of the Isaac T. Cook office, reports having made sales of investment holdings since April 1 aggregating more than $200,000. This embraced, in the main, he said, flats and apartments and uptown business corners.

New City Department Headquarters of the Moon Motor Car Company



The Moon Motor Car Co. of St. Louis is having built for its exclusive use, at 3115 Locust street, a city department, which will be in charge of F. E. Lindsey, who for a long time has been in charge of St. Louis city sales.

The new building fronts 40 feet on Locust street by 120 feet deep. The exterior construction is of the Spanish renaissance style, with typical Spanish upper windows and red-tile roof, making a very striking effect. Large plate-glass windows extend the full length of the first floor. The salesroom in the front of the building is laid with tile floor. There is a reception room for women and all conveniences for the office force.

The rear of the building will be fitted up for a downtown service station and Manager Lindsey will have on display at all times one or more models of the Moon company's line of automobiles.

The Trade Realty and Building Co., through the Rhodes Realty Co., is erecting the building for the Moon company. Preston J. Bradshaw is the architect.

HILLCREST SITE BOUGHT FOR HOSMER HALL SCHOOL

Alumni Association Plans Expenditure of $70,000 for Modern Plant—Miss Mary Josephine White Engaged as Principal of Popular Institution.

The Hosmer Hall Alumni Association has purchased a site in Hillcrest, a new high-class subdivision lying immediately west of Forest Park, and extending west from Skinker road, for a building to cost, including the site, $70,000.

The lot, which has a frontage of 100 feet on the south side of Wydown boulevard, is situated between Dartford avenue and University Lane. The location was selected because of the exclusive and otherwise attractive character of this district. It is just outside the city limits and is adjacent to Brentmoor and to Forest Ridge, and overlooks Washington University and the homes of Robert Brookings and other wealthy residents on Forsythe boulevard.

The new building will have accommodations for 40 boarding and 100 day pupils.

The association has engaged as principal of the school Miss Mary Josephine White, formerly of the St. Timothy School of Baltimore, and of Miss Hersey's School of Boston.

The Clayton cars traverse Wydown boulevard, while the United Railways announces that at an early date the Hamilton avenue car line will be extended to provide additional street car facilities for Hillcrest and for HiPointe, situated at the northwest corner of Skinker and Clayton roads.

The tracks are already laid on De Mun avenue, a north-south street of Hillcrest, over which the Hamilton avenue cars will be operated.

The sale of the ground was made by W. W. Butts of the Butts Realty Co., and secretary of the St. Louis Real Estate Exchange, on behalf of Thomas J. Skinker its former owner. The price paid was $10,000.

The school which is one of the best known and most exclusive in the city, is now located at Pendleton and Washington avenues.

KESSLER PLANS HOTEL ENTERPRISE

Will Rearrange Real Estate Building at Ninth and Chestnut Streets for That Purpose.

Sam Kesler, furrier and real estate operator, has acquired a long lease of the Real Estate Building, formerly known as the Pezoni, at the northeast corner of Ninth and Chestnut streets, and has plans for its conversion for hotel purposes.

An entrance will be constructed on the Ninth street side of the building. Otherwise the first floor of the building, which is divided into real estate offices, will not be changed.

This is a three-story structure of an antiquated type, but of solid construction and of an arrangement susceptible of the proposed conversion.

The lease was negotiated by the Martin-Breitt Real Estate Co.

Several of the tenants of the upper floors have leased space in modern office buildings recently erected by the Odeon E. & R. G. Scott Real Estate Co.

HI POINTE HOME SITES CENTER OF POPULAR INTEREST

Hundreds of Persons Visit Attractive Subdivision Offered by Broadway Savings Trust Co.

MANY LOTS DISPOSED OF

Ruling Prices Relatively Low for High-Class Property Adjacent to Forest Park.

More than 500 home site seekers and persons desiring to buy lots either as an investment or as a speculation, have visited Hi Pointe, at the northwest corner of Skinker and Clayton roads, according to Charles de Largy, real estate officer of the Broadway Savings Trust Co., which is marketing the property in conjunction with David P. Leahy and A. R. Schollmeyer.

Many lots have already been sold from the plats, and in a number of instances purchasers have ordered plans for flats, apartments or bungalows, which will be erected forthwith.

So far as the present venders are concerned, the indications are that the subdivision soon will be entirely out of the market. Charles de Largy, real estate officer of the trust company, declares the lots are being sold at prices relatively low for property of this high character, the subdivision being opposite Forest Park and otherwise attractive. These prices, it is announced, include complete municipal improvements, among them the highest order of street and sidewalks, water, gas and sewer mains.

The lots have a uniform frontage of 40 feet and depth ranging from 150 to 165 feet.

The subdivision has been divided into sections for the exclusive erection of houses, bungalows and flats and apartments, all of which must measure up to a prescribed standard.

Plans are being perfected for the extension of the Hamilton avenue car line west and through Hillcrest and the De Mun tract, to Hi Pointe, which was formerly known as the Maffitt tract, and south to connect with the Market street car line.

The buildings are each on 75-foot lots and are being constructed at a cost of about $200,000.

J. I. Epstein, who is in charge of the management of the buildings, reports that several of the apartments are already leased and quite a few reserved, although the buildings will not be ready until some time in May.

Theodore E. Gayeski, a large land operator, has closed a deal for the sale of 50,000 acres of land in Alabama and Mississippi for a sum reported to have been well above $250,000, the deal being on a cash basis.

Gayeski attributes the sale of the land to advertisements run in the St. Louis papers. He states that 1000 acres of the tract will be retained as a fruit farm, and that 500 acres will be utilized as a livestock ranch.

BILLY SUNDAY WELCOMED TO NEW YORK BY CHEERING THRONG

Evangelist Will Begin Three Months' Campaign Against Sin in That City This Afternoon.

NEW YORK, April 7.—"Billy" Sunday has come to town.

"It's a long jump, fellows," said he to reporters, "from that little old opr'y house out there in Garner, Io., 21 years ago, upstairs over the hay and feed store, with its 300 old seats, up to this great city with its immense tabernacle for 20,000."

Ten minutes later he was in the midst of a cheering, racketing, flag-waving crowd at the Pennsylvania Station. An assemblage of several thousand men and women boomed forth in that swinging march hymn of his, "Brighten the Corner Where You Are."

As he ascended the stairs towards the Thirty-second street exit of the terminal, Sunday had almost to force his way through a tightly jammed press that even the 50 policemen on duty could not hold back.

Through another cheering lane of admirers outside the station the evangelist was led to a waiting limousine and driven to the 20-room house which he will occupy during the three months he stays in the city, at 184th street and Northern avenue. And there another crowd waited for him outside the house, and as many within as it could accommodate, and there were more cheers and welcomes and handshaking.

Sunday's campaign will begin tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock at the tabernacle.

STOKHOD OFFENSIVE UPSETS GERMAN SOCIALISTS' PLANS

Complaint That Government Broke Promise to Let East Front Alone During Peace Move.

COPENHAGEN, April 7.—The German offensive on the Stokhod River appears to have upset considerably the leaders of the majority Socialists in Germany, who were counting on a relaxation of German efforts on the Russian front to permit them to get in touch with and to further the peace movement among the Russian Socialists.

The Associated Press hears from Berlin of a recent conference of the leaders of the Scheidemann wing on the Russian situation, of which, according to one of the participants, it was stated that the German Government had given definite assurances that no offensive movement on the eastern front would be undertaken for the present, so that the Socialists could continue to endeavor to convince their Russian colleagues that Germany was not endeavoring to take advantage of the revolutionary movement or to re-establish the Romanoff autocracy.

This participant now speaks bitterly of the "breach of faith" that will make it difficult to convince the Russian Socialists of the good intentions of the German Socialists.

UPLANDS SUBDIVISION FINDS FAVOR WITH HOMESEEKERS

Tract on Natural Bridge Road Contains Shade Trees, Grove, and Has City Facilities.

Prospective home purchasers are very favorably impressed with the Uplands subdivision, situated at 6300 Natural Bridge road, just a block west of the Kirkwood-Ferguson car line. A feature that adds to the attractiveness of this sloping tract is that it is covered with a beautiful grove of shade trees.

All streets and sidewalks have been made, and every facility of the modern district is there, giving the residents all comforts which the city folk enjoy, minus many of the discomforts. Thomas Francis, the owner, says that the restrictions will be rigid and that everything practicable will be done to preserve the parklike appearance of the subdivision.

The lots are large, none being less than 50 feet front, with a depth of 150 to 200 feet. Every home is to be different, although all are to have modern equipment. Francis says that his aim is to insure the future of this neighborhood as a high-class residence district.

The property is being handled by Perry & Francis, real estate agents, with offices in the Laclede Building.

In the new Sterling subdivision the promoters are constructing concrete walks, oiled drives, etc.

New industries are buying sites in Woodriver and planning large manufacturing plants. The Standard Oil Co., whose present plant cost a million or more and employs about 1800 men, has just bought 257 acres adjoining and will spend another million to increase its plant. Another big oil company has bought several hundred acres, and still another is negotiating for ground. Egg-Laying by R. I. Reds and Scrub Hen

Poultry Editor Post-Dispatch:

I have 10 S. C. white leghorns, three Rhode Island reds, one speckled Wyandotte and scrub hen. The leghorns and reds will be one year old April 23, and they started laying the latter part of October, 1916. Their egg yield since Dec. 1 follows: December, 70; January, 94; February, 115; March, 198. I received 52 eggs during February from three reds and 21 from the scrub hen during March. The feed for the black includes Purina chicken chowder, scratch feed, table scraps and oyster shells in abundance. I also put permanganate of potash in their drinking water.

WITHROW, MEMBER 30 YEARS, QUITS BAR ASSOCIATION

Was Not Endorsed by It for Judgeship Last August, but He Says That Is Not the Reason.

Former Circuit Judge James E. Withrow has withdrawn from membership in the Bar Association of St. Louis, of which he was a member for 30 years. When Judge Withrow sought renomination in the Republican primary last August, the bar association made up a list of approved candidates, in which he was not included.

William F. Fahey, secretary of the association, said yesterday that Withrow mentioned the association's failure to indorse him at the time when he gave Fahey notice of his withdrawal from the organization. Withrow, when asked by a Post-Dispatch reporter about the matter, said the two matters had no connection and that he withdrew because the association was, in his opinion, of value chiefly to younger lawyers. The older men are not active in its affairs, he said, and he has not the time or the inclination to take an active part, he thought it better to resign.

Body of German Officer Found.

Poultry Problems Solved.

Cholera Symptoms.

Please tell me what to do for my chickens. Their craws are swelled up and they eat very little, but they drink all the time. When away from the water the slime runs right out of them. I also wish you would give me a good remedy for diarrhoea, as the old hens seem to have it at times.—J. F., St. Louis.

The symptoms you mention—distended crop, heavy drinking, light eating, slimy droppings and diarrhoea—all indicate a cholera-like disease. In the later stages the birds appear drowsy, stagger about, often dragging their wings, and the strength and weight of the birds diminish ripidly. With cholera in the flock the safest thing to do is to kill the sick birds, burying every part of their carcasses so as not to spread infection. If you are not sure about the disease, you should separate the well from the sick birds and thoroughly disinfect all parts of the quarters. Meanwhile give all the birds two to four teaspoonsful each twice a day of ½ per cent carbolic acid solution. Also give them buttermilk to drink if you have it. If any of them die make a post mortem and if the heart shows red spots on the surface as if sprinkled with blood, you may be reasonably sure they have the cholera.

Breeding Pen Periods.

I have had some pure bred R. I. Red pullets with my mixed flock of hens and roosters. I bought a pure-bred R. I. male on Feb. 24 and separated the pullets and mixed flock on that day. When can I use the eggs from this mating for breeding so as to be sure chicks will be pure Reds?—G. W. D., St. Louis, Mo.

Poultry breeders ordinarily wait at least 10 days or two weeks before using the eggs from such a mating with the assurance that the offspring will be of pure blood. There are instances, however, where birds of mixed blood appear from eggs laid considerably later than this.

Hog Dip.

Will you please tell me what hog dip is and where it can be had? It is supposed to keep mites from the poultry house and not hurt the birds. —J. E. H., East St. Louis, Mo.

There are a number of dips by various commercial firms, most or all of them being coal tar preparations in various formulas and solutions. They are used ot kill parasites on hogs and also as a disinfectant against contagious diseases for all kinds of stock, including poultry. They are also used with good effect in eradicating mites and other parasites from poultry houses by spraying roosts, nest boxes and all parts of the house that may harbor vermin. These dips may be had at feed stores, livestock remedy supply houses and some drug stores also keep them.

Broken Egg.

What can we do for a hen that has a broken egg inside of her?—H. R., St. Louis, Mo.

Undoubtedly your hen is over-fat which is the usual cause of eggs breaking in the attempt to lay. Put the hen in a coop by herself and give nothing but water and green feed for about a week. This will cause her to lose enough surplus fat so that parts of the broken egg will pass off.

Feeding Lime.

Please tell me if it is harmful to feed chickens either unslaked or air slaked lime, or mix it in their feed? I was told that it would prevent disease.—C. J. D.

Air-slaked lime makes an excellent conditioner for fowls and it also supplies mineral elements needed in the formation of egg shells as well as the body growth. But there is nothing to be gained by mixing it with other feed, and we would not advise doing this. Don't give them unslaked lime. Lime is a preventive of disease in that it acts somewhat like a tonic or sweetener in the birds' digestive organs.

Poor Hatch.

I wish I could find out what is the matter with my eggs. They run about 70 per cent fertile but about 30 per cent of the germs die in the first 5 days of incubation, 15 per cent die from the fifth to the twelfth day and about 15 per cent more from that time until they hatch. I keep the temperature between 102 and 103 degrees. I have tested the thermometers and they are correct. I started to set my eggs in January. I have about 800 eggs and all of them are turning out the same way. Also the few birds I have been getting out appear to have paralysis. The toes turn inward and they lose control of their legs from the knee down. All the old birds are healthy and properly mated. They have been kept in a dry place with plenty of ventilation and have chicken chowder for feed, buttermilk mash, scratch feed, corn, wheat, oats, green feed and table scraps. I am disgusted with the business and would like some enlightenment.—J. J. Luxenberg, Mo.

The most common cause of weak germs is lack of vitality in the parent stock. The breeding birds may have run down from improper mating or they have been pampered and lack the power to transmit a strong constitution and vitality to their offspring. It is quite possible that your birds may appear healthy and yet lack this quality. Another cause of weak or dead germ is that the eggs have been kept too long before setting. Or they may have been kept in a place that is too cold or too warm. Quite often eggs for hatching are placed in a temperature so warm that incubation starts. Later they may be moved or the temperature is changed and the eggs cool off, thereby weakening the germ if not killing it. Our opinion is that you are testing the eggs a little early the first time. It takes quite a good tester to distinguish between live and dead germs the fifth day. It is safer all around to test the seventh or even eighth day. The heat in your incubator might also be increased a little the last week, preferably from 103 to 104 rather than 102 to 103 degrees. The most common cause of chicks coming from the shells crippled is that there is too much moisture in the machine the chicks get too large, and they cannot turn around in the shells as nature intends them to. We can find no fault with your feeds for the breeders except that you might get them too fat with this ration, especially if they have little or no opportunity for exercise. All breeding stock, of course, needs exercise no matter what is fed.

BATHING OF CANARIES A MATTER FOR CARE

Gentle Spraying Helpful in Breaking Obstinacy of Individual Birds; Guard Against Chill.

Under normal conditions most birds probably bathe daily, and canaries in captivity should be allowed the same opportunity. In open-wire cages in common use for singing birds the base is removed and the cage placed over a small dish containing water. In open-front cases, in which the bottom is not detachable, small bath cages which fasten at the open door are used. These are only a few inches wide, but serve to hold a dish for water.

Many birds are notional in bathing and at times ignore the offered bath. Usually the small acts of cleaning the cage and renewing the seed and water will excite in them a desire for bathing, and often when a bath is not provided the bird will do its best to perform its ablutions in the small supply of water in the drinking cup.

When individual birds obstinately refuse to enter the water gently spraying will usually induce them to bathe.

Birds brought into strange quarters usually refuse to bathe for the first few days. When the water is offered they either ignore it or, sitting on a perch, go through the motions of bathing and drying, fluttering wings and tail with a great whirring of feathers. The bath should be offered whenever the cage is cleaned, and if left alone the bird will act normally after a few days.

Small china dishes that are not too deep make good bathing pans. When a bird becomes accustomed to one dish it will usually refuse to bathe in another of different shape or color. In winter the water should be warmed until tepid. Even in warm weather too cold water is not advisable. If the room, ordinarily warm, becomes cold temporarily, birds should not be allowed to bathe. With the plumage wet and bedraggled there is increased susceptibility to cold drafts.

During molt the bath should be given not more than twice each week. If the bird is molting on color food, one bath each week is sufficient.

When breeding, the female canary should not be allowed to bathe from the time the eggs hatch until the young are 3 or 4 days old.

Ship Hatching Eggs in Market Basket

I do not know of a better method of shipping eggs for hatching than by the use of an ordinary market basket with a handle. The handle is an advantage. It is likely to induce more respectful handling by the expressman, for one thing.

Wrap each egg first in a piece of newspaper and use excelsior in which to pack them. Keep the eggs from direct contact with the bottom or sides. Over the top stretch a piece of stout muslin. With a darning or similar needle and with twine string attach the cloth to the basket. This is the commonest and, I have found, the best method of shipping eggs for hatching. Other methods may be as good, however. Fancy boxes and patent containers have not worked well in my own experience.

I admit the basket method is not the most convenient for the shipper. I tried one patent box that seemed to me to be ideal. It looked good, but after getting bad reports from the first two shipments, most of the eggs in one case being broken en route, I concluded that the old method was best.

I advise against shipping eggs for hatching by parcel post. This is all right for eggs for eating. I believe the experience of many buyers and sellers has not been favorable to the parcel post method.

Purina Chicken Chowder and Purina Chick Feed

Grain feed contains an excess of heat and energy elements, and is short on bone, blood, feathers and lean meat forming elements. A chick fed only grain develops only as fast as the least quantity of these elements is supplied in the feed. Purina Chicken Chowder provides the elements deficient in grain feed, and develops the chick to the maximum. When fed with Purina Chick Feed, as directed, we guarantee

POET D'ANNUNZIO SINGS PRAISE OF 'NEW' AMERICA

"For Soul of Italy Today Capitol at Washington Is Beacon Light."

"LOVE'S FACE RADIANT"

"Stars on Banner Spiritual Token for Nations Fighting Righteous War."

ROME, Friday, April 6.—Few persons in Italy were moved more deeply by the entrance of America into the war than Gabriele D'Annunzio, the poet, who is now serving as a Captain in the aviation corps. His estimate of the significance of the event is expressed in the following message, which he wrote for the Associated Press to the people of America:

"For the soul of Italy today the Capitol at Washington has become a beacon light. A Roman garland wreathes the bust dedicated to the hero whom free men call the glorious knight of humanity. It is a garland pure as the branch of lilac offered by a poet on the bier of Lincoln. It is sacred as the ever-flowing bough 'with heart-shaped leaves of rich green.' It seems as though in this April of passion and tempest there re-echoes the cry of that April, tense with joy and anguish, 'O, Captain, O, Captain! my Captain, rise up! hear the bells. Rise up, for your flag is flung!'

"Constellation of Spring."

"Now, the group of stars on the banner of the great republic has become a constellation of the spring, like the pleiades; a propitious sign to sailors, armed and unarmed alike, a spiritual token for all nations fighting a righteous war. I give the salute of Italy, of the Roman Capitol to the Capitol at Washington; a salute to the people of the Union who now confirm and seal the pledge that liberty shall be preserved.

"To Italy alone of the allied nations, the possibility was open of avoiding war and remaining a passive spectator. Italy took up arms gladly, less for the re-conquest of her heritage than for the salvation of all the things which symbolize the grandeur of freedom. She armed herself as today the American nation is arming herself—for the sake of an ideal. The spontaneous act consummated by the people of Washington is a glorious sacrifice on behalf of the hopes of all mankind.

"America has achieved a new birth, she has molded herself a new heart. This is the miracle wrought by a righteous war, the miracle that unexpectedly today we of Italy see performed beyond an ocean dishonored by assassins and thieves.

Man's Ideal of Man.

"Our war is not destructive. It is creative. With all manner of atrocities, all manner of shameful acts, the barbarian has striven to destroy the ideal which, until this struggle began, man had of man. The barbarian multiplied on the innocent infamous outrages inspired by hate, alternating senile imprudence and brutal stupidity. The barbarian ground heroism to earth, cast down the airy cathedrals where congregated the aspirations of the eternal soul, burned the seals of wisdom decked with the flowers of all the arts, distorted the lineaments of Christ, tore off the garments of the Virgin.

"Now once again we begin to have hope of the nobility of man. Love's face is radiant, though its eyes are moist with tears, for never was love so much beloved. Love overflows on all the world like a brook in May. Our hearts are not large enough to gather it and to hold it. The people of Lincoln springing to their feet to defend the eternal spirit of man—the fury of the barbarian.

America Transfigured.

"'Ah, Liberty! let others despair of thee. I will never despair of thee,' once cried your rugged poet. In this hope your nation arises today, in the north, south, east, west, to offer your strength, proclaiming our cause to be the noblest cause for which men have ever fought. You were an enormous and obtuse mass of riches and power; now you are transfigured into ardent, active spirituality. The roll of your drums drowns out the last wail of cowardice.

"April 15 is the anniversary of Lincoln's death. From his sepulchre there issue again the noble words which fell from his lips at Gettysburg, on soil sanctified by the blood of brave men. All your states, north, south, east and west, hear them. I say to you, 'This nation, under God, shall have a new birth of freedom.'

"GABRIELE D'ANNUNZIO."

Greetings of Italian People Cabled to President Wilson.

PARIS, April 7.—Greetings of the Italian Government and people have been cabled by Premier Boselli to President Wilson, says a Havas dispatch from Rome.

In his message the Premier states that the Italian people are proud and happy because of the fraternal union now brought about between the old and new worlds which, he declared, are united in a common cause for liberty and the restoration of justice among nations.

Kings of England and Italy Congratulate U. S. on Entrance Into War.

WASHINGTON, April 7.—President Wilson today received cablegrams from King George of England and King Victor Emmanuel of Italy, congratulating the people and Government of the United States on their entrance into the war against Germany.

Woman's Head Nearly Severed.

ST. PAUL, Minn., April 7.—Mrs. Petreu Zivan was found dead in her home in a suburb here today by her husband when he returned from work. The woman's head was almost severed from her body. The police are searching for Nick Prooka, a brother of the woman.

STONE APPEALS TO MISSOURIANS TO 'SHOW METTLE'

"Close the Ranks, Be Game and Make Good," He Says in Statement.

CALLS FOR VOLUNTEERS

Hour for Discussion Is Past; Hour for Action Is On, Senator Declares.

WASHINGTON, April 7.—Senator Stone of Missouri, chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee issued a statement to the people of Missouri tonight. Although he spoke and voted against the war resolution, Senator Stone urged that everything be done now to bring victory. The statement said:

"The United States is at war. The Congress has so declared. Many people in Missouri, as in other states, were opposed to the Government taking this action. But it has been taken and we are at war. The hour for discussion has passed. The hour for action is on. The powers of the Government authorized to speak for the American people have declared war. The people must support the Government. Every other consideration must be subordinated.

Men and Money Essential.

"Two things are absolutely essential to the waging of war—men and money. I hope and expect that a high spirit of real patriotism, such as has characterized a great people, will fill the hearts of all Americans. Our virile men must get ready to do whatever the exigencies of the Government may require. All the people must get ready, as they should and as I believe they will willingly, to bear the burdens of war. Shirking now would be worse than treasonable; it would be cowardly and dishonorable.

"The Constitution imposes on the Congress the duty of providing the sinews of war—men and money. Sanely, not passionately; thoughtfully, not impulsively, that very serious duty should be performed.

Appeals to Missourians.

"What I most desire and hope for is that Missourians will show their mettle and set an example of true patriotism to the country; and especially do I hope that this will be done by those who wished that some other solution of the quarrel with Germany might have been found. The best type of patriotism is reached in the man who would avert war by every honorable means, but who stands ready to give his life, if need be, to his country when war eventuates.

"I appeal to Missouri men and women to end all differences, close the ranks, be game and make good. Let us make up Missouri's quota by volunteers, not conscription."

FIRE CHIEF TO GO; M'KELVEY TO GET SWINGLEY'S PLACE

Chief Henderson to Be Removed by Mayor Kiel "in Interest of Harmony in Department."

SWINGLEY CAN HAVE JOB

Offices of Building Commission and Safety Director to Be Combined.

The first changes in Mayor Kiel's official family, following his re-election, will be the removal of Frank E. Henderson as Fire Chief, the demotion of Charles E. Swingley from Director of Public Safety, and the promotion of Building Commissioner James N. McKelvey to Swingley's position. The Mayor has offered Swingley a position as Fire Chief, which Swingley had held until 31 months ago.

Announcement of these changes was made yesterday by the Mayor, 24 hours after 40 business men had visited him at his office to urge that Henderson be retained as Fire Chief.

In announcing that Henderson was to be superseded, "in the interest of harmony in the Fire Department," Mayor Kiel said that Swingley had agreed to consider the appointment and give his reply within a day or two. To a Post-Dispatch reporter Swingley said:

"I have not fully made up my mind, but I don't think I can accept the position."

Salary Cut in Half.

As Director of Public Safety Swingley's salary is $8000 a year. He would receive $4000 as Fire Chief. Notwithstanding the demotion implied in his transfer, it is believed that Swingley will yield to the persuasion of Mayor Kiel and others in the administration and finalyl accept the appointment.

Mayor Kiel says he has no intention of filling the office of Building Commissioner after McKelvey's promotion. MceKlvey will be expected to serve both as Director of Public Safety and Building Comissioner, the Mayor says, and thus save to the city the salary of $5000 a year paid to the Building Commissioner.

Chief Henderson, when informed of his intended removal by Mayor Kiel, dictated this statement to a Post-Dispatch reporter:

"If Mayor Kiel thinks it best in the interest of his administration and the city to depose me as chief, in the face of the record I have made, I will gracefully accept dismissal. But I would like to have it understood that so far as I know, there is perfect harmony throughout the department."

At the time of his promotion to Chief, 31 months ago, Henderson was secretary to Chief Swingley, with the rank of Lieutenant. Shortly after assuming his duties as Chief, Henderson issued stringent rules for the conduct and government of the department and he was vigilant in enforcing his regulations. One of his favorite methods of determining whether rules were obeyed was to make unexpected visits to engine houses late at night to satisfy himself that firemen were at their posts.

Conduct at Fire Investigated.

Chief Henderson published a paper in the interest of fire prevention and had moving pictures prepared and exhibited to illustrate how carelessness causes fires. He was the originator and promoter of a successful "firemen's show" last September. This enterprise made profits of $18,000, which was turned into the Firemen's Pension Fund.

After the Christian Brothers' College fire, Oct. 5, 1916, Chief Henderson's conduct in directing the work of firemen was the subject of a Coroner's inquest and an Aldermanic investigation. He was exonerated by both inquiries. Six firemen lost their lives in the fire.

McKelvey is one of the Mayor's closest political henchmen. He has been Building Commissioner since 1909, his first appointment being from Mayor Kreismann. He formerly was allied with the Republican faction opposed to Mayor Kiel, but became a Kiel convert shortly before receiving his reappointment as Building Commissioner from Kiel. McKelvey is a building contractor and is Republican City Committeeman from the Twenty-third Ward.

KITE BALLOON FOR WAR USE IS MADE BY HONEYWELL

Cigar-Shaped Bag, 90 Feet Long, Is Inflated; Will Be Tested at Fort Omaha.

A. Leo Stevens, instructor and inspector of the Aeronautical Department of the army, who several years ago was a pilot in balloon races from St. Louis, yesterday inspected a "kite balloon" manufactured in St. Louis by H. E. Honeywell, an aeronaut, under commission from the Government. The balloon is designed for observation work under conditions of actual warfare, and is patterned somewhat after balloons used for the same purpose by the German army.

The test was only of the workmanship. The balloon was inflated with air in the Coliseum and examined. It will be sent to Fort Omaha today for complete tests.

The balloon is cigar shaped, 90 feet long and 24 feet in diameter. The car for observers is suspended 25 feet beneath the gas bag, from the sides of which, above the car, fins project. There is a rudder at the stern. The fins serve to guide the balloon and to aid it in rising, being so arranged that the force of the air against them causes the balloon to rise.

In actual use such a balloon always is in communication with the ground through a cable, attached to an automobile, which contains telephone wires leading to the balloon car. The automobile can drag the balloon.

The usual place for a war balloon is about five miles back of the firing line. In service it differs from aeroplanes in that it always is in communication with the ground. It is equipped with about 5000 feet of cable.

The Honeywell balloon is the only one the Government has contracted for in the West, though several have been made in the East. It is understood the Government contemplates the purchase of a large number of them. Honeywell would not disclose the cost.

NEW YORK, April 7.—Fire of incendiary origin today did $1,000,000 damage at the Belmont race track. Among the structures destroyed are the main grandstand, the stand of the United Hunts Association, the betting ring and the Jockey Club House. The Belmont Park Club house was badly damaged by smoke and water. None of the stables was destroyed.

Bottles of benzine and other inflammables were found in the clubhouse. Alan Pinkerton was sent to the ruins by August Belmont, who owns the park.

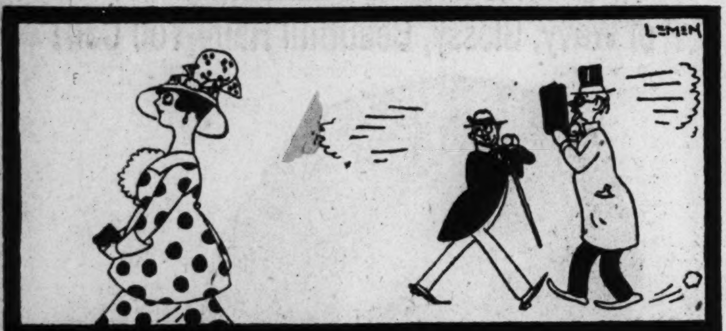
ARABELLA'S EASTER HAT.



MISS ARABELLA SIMPKINS BROWN, this glorious Easter morning,
Is quite the gayest girl in town, all cause for worry scorning.
For she has got that lovely hat for which she went a-shopping,
And so she saunters from her flat with never thought of stoppng.
To church at first of course she goes, a very solemn duty,
Where every worshipper she knows will vote her hat a beauty.
Then home for lunch and out again, the boulevard a-gracing.
Where gowns of women, suits of men, the granitoid are pacing.
We'd fain describe that charming hat, but words would never do it.
That bonnet's round and sort o' flat and you can see right through it.
We think it's trimmed in baby blue and has a flower upon it;
And yet we only know for true that it's a pretty bonnet.
In fact we find ourselves at sea when millinery scanning.
A mystery will always be its weird and wondrous planning.
So we cannot describe that hat, this glorious Easter morning,
That sallies from a little flat, the fair Miss Brown adorning.
But you will know it right away because you'll see below it,
A face as radiant and gay as ever sung by poet.
And though the hat above that face be green, or blue or yellow,
You'll know, by every sign of grace, the wearer's Arabella.

THEY'RE OUT AGAIN.

Scene—Any golf links. Time—Now.

(Chorus of caddies).

WE'LL tote the bag and chase the ball;
You'll always find us at your call.
We'll applaud your shot
As like as not,
Though we know that you can't play at all.

(Foresome of beginners).

O, CADDIE wise, we bow to you
And humbly beg you'll see us through.
Tell us which is a mid-iron and which a cleek
For we're not very strong on club technique.

(Enter lady golfers).

WE made the round in a hundred flat.
(Minnie, how do you like my hat?)
We love to hit the little ball.
(I don't like Mollie's skirt at all.)
This game of golf is just too dear.
(Doesn't Mary's waist look queer?)

(Solo by the club professional).

FORE! Fore!
It's a beastly bore
To have to watch these amateurs play.
Tut! Tut!
Watch me putt,
And you may be as good as me some day.

(Amateurs tremble).

WAY for the great professional man
Watch his stroke the best you can.
Have a care!
He's a bear!
This highly proficient professional man.

(The professional).

HOLD your club thus and swing back so,
Swing it around and hit it low;
If you want to learn just how to tee
Step up and keep your eye on me.

(He tees off).

Well, well, what a very remarkable thing
That a man like me should miss his swing!

(Amateurs in chorus).

A VERY remarkable thing, indeed!
Has the great professional lost his speed?
We thought he would hit the ball a mile,
But he foozled in most outlandish style.
He couldn't knock it off a tub,
In fact we're inclined to think he's a dub.

(Caddies dance with glee).

COME on, come on and play a round;
No better players can be found.
We always said we'd bet a farm
That professional was a false alarm.

(Enter the amateur champion. Golfers and caddies bow low).

AH, here is the player that's best of all;
He won in the tournament last fall.
He is no common professional chap,
But a simon-pure amateur. Take off your cap!

(Amateur champion condescends to beam).

BOY, give me a ball and give me a stick,
And I'll show you how to do it quick.
If you want to learn just how to tee
Step up and keep your eye on me.

(He tees off).

Well, well, what a very remarkable thing
That a man like me should miss his swing.

(Chorus of amateurs).

DON'T mind a little thing like that;
We know you knock all players flat.
You could do much better we're quite sure,
For you are an amateur simon-pure,
And not a mere professional dub who couldn't knock it off a tub.

AT THE FRONT.

"WELL, Binks, it's Easter."

"How bright of you to notice it, Jinks."

"How about a little Easter music?"

"All right. Let 'er go."

"The time of carnage is at hand,"

"And much as we deplore it."

"We'll take our score-card to the stand."

"And see the game and score it."

"There is no peace, there is no peace."

"The Cardinals' awful slaughter."

"Will make us pray for war to cease."

"While drinking soda water."

"The humble peanut is abroad."

"And bleacherites will crunch it."

"And though it be an arrant fraud."

"Contentedly they'll munch it."

"The park cigar will puff and fume."

"With odor aromatic."

"And everyone will give it room."

"With ardor acrobatic."

"The umpire Czar will wield his power."

"And no one dare dispute him."

"Though all the world may sit and glower."

"And wish that it could boot him."

"The foul into the stand will fly."

"The crowd will quickly pipe it."

"As with a cunning stab and sly."

"Some pass fiend straight will swipe it."

He Wondered.

MR. STYLES: What do you wear those hatpins for?

Mrs. Styles: To keep my hat from blowing off.

"Yes, but what prevents your hair from blowing off and taking the hat and the pins with it?"

A LOOK AROUND

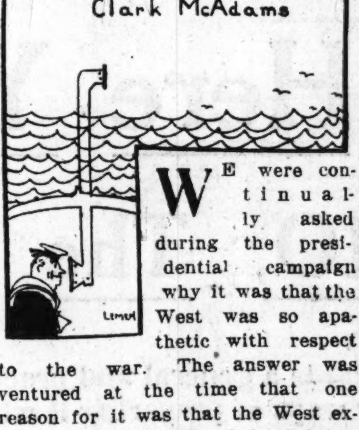
Clark McAdams



WE were continually asked during the presidential campaign why it was that the West was so apathetic with respect to the war. The answer was ventured at the time that one reason for it was that the West expected to do the bulk of the fighting when we got into the conflict, and that it therefore was not quite so excited about it as some of the people whose interest would not be so vital after the rumpus started. How far was that true? Well, we have had recruiting stations open all over the country ever since it became obvious that we are going in, and where do you suppose the response has been greatest in proportion to the population? In Indiana. Mr. Taft says if we are attacked by land it will be by way of Mexico. If that is to be true, who shall lead in defense on that front but the one-time apathetic West? The West will be there when the bugles blow. It has not been exposed to the passions of the conflict in Europe as the East has been. That is all. It wanted to wait, as Mr. Wilson wanted to wait—appreciating, as he did, what it meant. The West does not brandish its hardware before it is time to shoot, but when it does begin to shoot—wow!

America and France.

WHAT is your guess as to sending troops to Europe? My guess is this: If those troops are to go to France, and are to fight with France, the opposition to such an expeditionary force will fall to the ground. We have all but forgotten in this country that French troops fought by the side of Colonial troops in the siege of Yorktown. Probably that will not have to be recalled to us many times before we shall feel that in her present extremity we can do no less for France. It is estimated that France spent something between $250,000,000 and $400,000,000 in assisting us on the field and the sea against Great Britain. That was in addition to money loaned, much of it without interest, and subsequently repaid. Our debt to France is going to be the determining factor in this debate. That becomes more apparent every day. It seems that we could not do less and still look France in the face. Our gratitude to that country has passed the bazar stage.

Seeing It Through.

PROBABLY the best picture we have had of any country in the war is that of England in "Mr. Britling Sees It Through." In that really fine story of the war Mr. Wells has doubtless given us a fore-glimpse of ourselves. We think of the war now as England once thought of it—as something far off—something not likely to rouse us from that feeling of security in which we look on. No doubt the war shall come home to us soon enough, as it did to England. Then, like her, shall we reel in pain and wrath—to stand at last in the firm resolve to see it through. We all ought to read that book. It will save us some surprises—in a measure prepare us for what is to come. The inconceivable is no doubt to happen here, as it happened there. It took the British writers a while to get going. They were for a long time without any better inspiration than their prejudice. Mr. Wells has recovered from that so far as a man can. Not all the virtue lies with England, any more than we shall see in time that it lies with us. A world is being purged of something—and we are in that world.

An Incident.

A FEW days ago there appeared in St. Louis a Japanese who carried a letter of introduction to a business man. The latter was out, and the Oriental wandered down to the river front to take some pictures. A little later he reappeared between two secret service men who had picked him up on the river front after watching him snap a few picturesque objects like the Eads bridge. He was vouched for by an acquaintance, and subsequently released. One has to be careful. It is not a time when anyone can go blithely kodaking this and that without being pounced upon for better credentials than mere curiosity to see what one can get. If that imposes a hardship upon amateur photography, we are sorry—but it is a precaution taken in all the countries at war. The President has warned us that the country is full of spies, and they do not wear an S on their backs.

England Raising Chicory.

LONDON, April 7.—For the first time in 40 years, chicory is being raised on a large scale on English farms. The initial crop from a large market gardener in Lincolnshire yielded 20 tons to the acre.

LEMONS CREATE A LOVELY, WHITE SKIN

Use the juice of fresh lemons and mix with Orchard White to make a cheap lotion.

At the cost of a small jar of ordinary cold cream one can prepare a full quarter-pint of the most wonderful lemon skin bleach, skin softener and complexion beautifier by squeezing the juice of two fresh lemons into a bottle containing three ounces of orchard white. Care should be taken to strain the juice through a fine cloth so no lemon pulp gets in, then this lotion will keep fresh for months. It really will bleach and remove such blemishes as pimples, freckles and tan and is the ideal skin softener, smoothener and beautifier which absorbs readily and is not sticky or greasy.

Just try it. Get three ounces of orchard white at any pharmacy and two lemons from the grocer and make up a quarter-pint of this harmless lemon lotion and apply it daily to the face, neck, arms and hands. It really does soften, freshen, bleach and bring out the roses and beauty of any skin.—ADV.

TOO FAT?

Here's a Simple, Safe and Reliable Way to Reduce Your Weight.

Maybe you have nearly worn out body and patience trying to secure satisfactory weight reduction by following drastic rules requiring starvation dieting or tiresome, troublesome exercises, or drugging.

Even so, you should not lose hope and imagine that you must carry through life a load of burdensome, unhealthy flesh. Here's a very simple, easy-to-follow system of treatment that is said to bring truly remarkable results for others, and it will be easy to prove what it can do for you.

Go to your druggist and get a small box of oil of korein capsules. Take one capsule after each meal and one before retiring at night; also follow the other simple directions that come with the capsules.

This method should reduce your weight ten to sixty pounds (or whatever you wish) in a short time and leave your general health and figure greatly improved.

You will be amazed at the improvement in your mind as well as your body when you have begun to reduce your weight.

Oil of korein is absolutely harmless, is pleasant to take, and this treatment is surely worthy of a fair trial if you want to become thinner, healthier and younger in appearance.—ADVERTISEMENT.

How Are Your Nerves?

How often you hear the remark: "It's my nerves!" Many strong appearing men and women fret because they do not feel as well as formerly, yet their physicians tell them they have no organic disease. They are weak, listless, sleepless, neuralgic, and have a variable appetite, are excessively irritable and sometimes hysterical. As soon as any of these symptoms appear, Warner's Safe Nervine should be taken according to directions. It has a direct action on the nerve centers and is a medicine of proven merit. It allays irritability which nervous exhaustion causes, produces healthful and refreshing sleep and leaves no unpleasant symptoms. It contains no narcotics and may be taken with no fear of ill effects. To any who suffer from loss of sleep, neuralgia, nervous headaches and nervous prostration, Warner's Safe Nervine brings immediate relief. For sale by Wolff-Wilson Drug Co. and all leading druggists. 50 cts. and $1.00. Free sample on request. Warner's Safe Remedies Co., 245 Rochester, N. Y.

TEN CARLOAD WAR EXHIBITION OPENS HERE TOMORROW

Material and Relics From France to Be Seen at Moolah Temple During Bazar.

WOMEN IN CHARGE

Trenches Like Those on West Front Will Be Built on Lot Nearby.

The French War Exhibit, which opens at Moolah Temple, on Lindell boulevard near Vandeventer avenue, at 1 o'clock tomorrow afternoon, is a 10-car-load display of war material and war relics which will be presented in connection with a group of bazars conducted by committees of St. Louis women for the relief of the wounded and distressed of France and the allied nations. The exhibit will continue through the week.

The exhibit will be on display both inside and outside the temple. The lot west of the temple, extending to Vandeventer avenue, has been converted into a miniature sector of the western war front, with trenches which are not so long as those in France, but are just as wide and deep. Dugouts, machine guns and trench batteries are features of this part of the exhibit, for which an extra admittance fee will be charged. There will also be an extra charge for the moving picture program, where 30 reels of war films, taken officially for the French Government, will be shown. These pictures show the fighting before Verdun, Peronne and Combles.

The exhibit has been shown in New York, Chicago, Boston, Toronto, Montreal and Baltimore, and will be taken to San Francisco. It is in charge of Baron Charles Huard, a French army officer. The Baroness, who is here with him, is well known here and is the daughter of Francis Wilson, the actor.

Within the temple the different booths will make a very colorful scene. The principal booths, and the heads of committees in charge, are:

American Benefit for French Wounded, Mrs. E. J. Walsh; British and Canadian Relief, Mrs. J. P. Jamison; Fatherless Children of France, Mrs. Jesse McDonald; Alliance Francaise, Mrs. Walter T. Campbell; Servian Relief, Mrs. John H. Holliday; Belgian Relief, Mrs. Marc Seguin; The Donegal Fair for Irish Relief, Mrs. George F. Steedman; and Russian-Polish Relief, Mrs. David R. Francis.

Every afternoon and evening a tea dance will be conducted on a 10-cent admission plan, with the debutantes and younger set assisting. On Tuesday night there will be a bal poudre at $5 a couple, of which Mrs. Charles Cummings Collins of 20 Lenox place has charge. Soloists from the Boston National Opera Company will sing at the ball. Thursday afternoon there will be a junior dance for children, with prizes in the one-step, fox trot and waltz competitions.

The Donegal Fair for the Irish Relief will be under the supervision of Countess Kingston. The Countess, who comes to St. Louis today, has been very successful in selling shamrocks and posters in other cities. At this concession, there will be found a typical Irish village, where visitors will find frankfurters, various kinds of wursts and other eatables for sale. By way of variety, there will be offered at auction a fine blooded Irish terrier, a dachshund, a donkey and a horse all of which have been donated.

The Russian-Polish booth, in charge of Mrs. Francis, wife of the American Ambassador to Russia, will introduce several Polish girls, who will assist a committee of society women. The booth itself will be decorated with flags and Cossack accoutrements. Among the articles this booth will offer for sale are dolls dressed by Mme. Paderewski, and the barbaric Russian jewelry so much in vogue at present, together with wood carvings and laces. In the committee are Mrs. Sidney Francis, Mrs. Breckinridge Jones, Mrs. Harvey G. Mudd, Mrs. Samuel Fordyce, Mrs. N. A. McMillan, Mrs. Thomas Francis and Mrs. Kenneth Carpenter.

The American Fund for French Wounded will conduct a tea garden to be operated in connection with the dances. The Fatherless Children of France will serve soft drinks and sell waffles. The Serbian Relief and the Belgian Relief, the latter conducted by Mrs. Marc Seguin, wife of the French Consul, will display posters and photographs and sell articles.

L'Alliance Francaise will feature its exhibit with a pearl necklace, costing $6000, proceeds of which will be divided by the alliance between the American Fund for French Wounded and the Fatherless Children of France. The necklace was specially ordered from New York and on its arrival last week was placed in the show window of a local jewelry firm. A large committee, headed by Mrs. W. H. Cocke and assisted by Miss Mary Clark, is in charge of this feature.

The proceeds of the general admission will be divided equally, one-half to go to the local committee, to be forwarded to France for relief purposes, and the other half to go to an object named by Baron Huard. He announced, when the contract was signed three weeks ago, that should America be at war during the exhibit, he would reserve the right to give his share of the receipts to the American Red Cross.

The following executive committee has had the direct plans in charge: Dr. Nathaniel Allison, George Oliver Carpenter, Peyton T. Carr, L. Ray Carter, Dr. M. B. Clopton, Dwight F. Davis, Mrs. S. C. Davis, Gaston Du Bois, Philip B. Fouke, Benjamin Gratz, Mrs. R. A. Holland Jr., Mrs. Kate Howard, Dr. F. T. Murray, Mrs. Henry C. Scott, J. Herndon Smith, E. H. Steedman, G. F. Steedman, J. Porter Tirrell, Dr. Louis Veillon, E. J. Walsh, Mrs. Julia Walsh and Mrs. N. R. Wilson.

JAIL FOR MAN WHO TEARS DOWN RECRUITING POSTER

Socialist Is Fined $100 and Associates Let Him Go to Jail for Thirty Days.

YORK, Pa., April 7.—Because he tore a poster calling for recruits for the navy, Robert Burke, 32 years old, a member of the local Socialist party, was committed to jail for 30 days in default of $100 bail by Mayor E. S. Hugentugler.

Burke, it is claimed, wanted to appear in the flag day parade, driving a team to advertise an anti-war meeting which the Socialists were planning, but the police prevented it.

After midnight following Burke is alleged to have torn down the naval poster, and Patrolman Thomas D. Jones arrested him. Burke claimed it was an accident. The Mayor intends to take up the case with the Federal authorities. Burke was once in the navy.

WITH 2 SONS AND 4 BROTHERS IN RANKS, WOMAN OFFERS SELF

Mrs. Juanita Hopkins of Joplin Goes to Kansas City Recruiting Office to Enlist.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., April 7.—Mrs. Juanita Hopkins of Joplin came to Kansas City to offer her services as a war nurse.

"I have two sons and four brothers in the navy and army," Mrs. Hopkins said to Capt. Ruby D. Garrett. "I have nothing further to offer my country except myself. If you can think of anything for me to do, let me know. I am here for that purpose."

Capt. Garret told her there are few opportunities for women to enlist, but that the call might come later.

ARKANSAS YOUTH LEAVES PLOW IN FIELD TO ENLIST

Lad Arrives at Recruiting Station in Time to Speak at Preparedness Meeting.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., April 7.—When knowledge that the United States wanted men to join the army and navy for defense of their country against a foreign Power reached Harvey Ethridge, 18 years old, of Conway County, he stopped his plow in the midst of a furrow and made his way to this city to enlist in the navy.

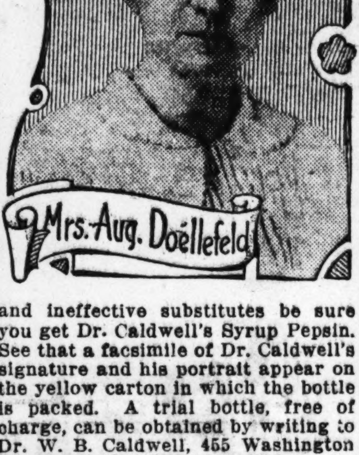
He arrived on the very day that a preparedness meeting had been arranged to take place under auspices of the Chamber of Commerce and attended that meeting. When enthusiasm was at its height the chairman of the patriotic gathering summoned Harvey to the platform. The distinction almost took the breath of the country youth and he hesitated. Finally he was induced to stand before the audience, and when invited to state his reasons for promptly offering his services to the country could do so only in halting language that could be heard only by those nearest him. Nevertheless, the crowd cheered him long and loud as one who, although clearly not a fluent orator, had shown himself ready to do his bit in a way that counts more strongly than a mastery of public speaking.

GIVES UP A $15,000 OFFICE

LONDON, April 7.—In volunteering for national service in clerical work at the regulation salary of $6.25 a week, Sir James Bell, Town Clerk of the City of London, is leaving for the time being a post with a salary of $15,000 a year.

Keeps Her Four Children Always in Perfect Health

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin the Family Laxative for Many Years.



Mrs. Aug. Doellefeld

Mrs. Aug. Doellefeld of Carlyle, Ill., recently wrote to Dr. Caldwell at Monticello, Ill., that she has used Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin in her home for a number of years and would not be without it, as with it she has been able to keep her four children in perfect health.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a combination of simple laxative herbs with pepsin that acts on the bowels in an easy, natural way, and regulates the action of this most important function. Nearly all the sickness to which children are subject is traceable to bowel inaction and a mild, dependable laxative, such as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, should have a place in every family medicine chest. It is pleasant to the taste and children like it, and take it readily, while it is equally effective for adults.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is sold in drug stores everywhere for fifty cents a bottle. To avoid imitations and ineffective substitutes be sure you get Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. See that a facsimile of Dr. Caldwell's signature and his portrait appear on the yellow carton in which the bottle is packed. A trial bottle, free of charge, can be obtained by writing to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 455 Washington St., Monticello, Illinois.

Yuan Shi Kai's Daughters to Wed.

PEKIN, April 7.—The betrothal has just been announced of two daughters of the late President Yuan Shi-Kai. The young women are both daughters of the second wife of the late President, a Korean whom Yuan Shi-Kai married when he was serving as Governor-Resident in Korea.

Does Your Husband Drink? Druggist Tells How to Cure The Liquor Habit at Home

Free Prescription Can Be Filled at Any Drug Store and Given Secretly.

H. J. Brown, a Cleveland man, was for many years a confirmed drunkard. His friends and relatives despaired of ever redeeming him. His sister sought the best medical men in Europe in the hope that she might find something which would cure him. Finally she was recommended to an eminent chemist, who gave her a private formula (the same as appears below) and told her how to use it. She had it filled at a drug store and gave it to him secretly. The results were startling. In a few weeks he was completely cured. That was over ten years ago and he has not touched a drop since. He now occupies a position of trust and is enthusiastic in his efforts to help others overcome the liquor habit. He feels that he can best do this by making public the same formula which cured him. Here is the prescription: Go to any first-class drug store and get prepared tescum powders. Drop one powder twice a day in coffee, tea or any liquid. It is harmless, tasteless, odorless and cannot be detected. You can use it without the knowledge of any one. A lady who recently tried it on her husband reports: "My husband was on a spree when I got the powders and he usually stays drunk from three to four weeks at a time. After putting the powder in his coffee for four days he sobered up and has not taken a drink since and says he is through with it forever. He also complained that whisky did not taste the same. I shall not tell him what did it, but I am grateful for this help and I shall recommend it whenever possible."

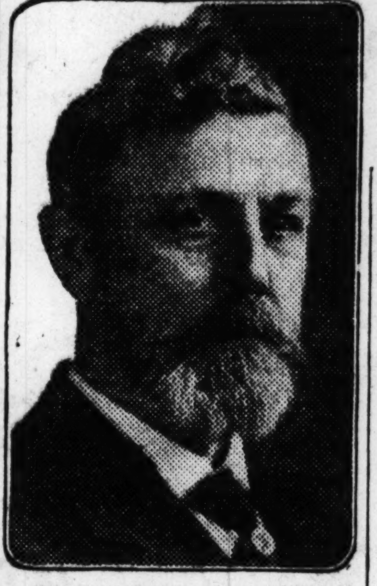
Note: A leading druggist, when shown the above article, said: "Yes, Tescum is a very remarkable remedy for the drink habit. It is harmless, wonderfully effective and is having an enormous sale. I advise every one who wishes to destroy the liquor habit to give it a trial." It is sold in this city by Johnson-Enderle-Pauley, Wolff-Wilson, and all other first-class druggists, and they guarantee it to do this work or refund the money. —ADVERTISEMENT.

The DOCTOR'S ADVICE

by Dr. Lewis Baker

The questions answered below are general in character, the symptoms or diseases are given and the answers will apply in any case of similar nature.

Those wishing further advice, free, may address Dr. Lewis Baker, College Bldg., College-Elwood streets, Dayton, O., inclosing self-addressed stamped envelope for reply. Full name and address must be given, but only initials or fictitious names will be used in my answers. The prescriptions can be filled at any well-stocked drug store. Any druggist can order of wholesaler.



Miss B. Y. writes: "I am writing for advice to cure myself of pimples and boils. My skin seems too oily."

Answer: The organs which eliminate waste matter need attention. Obtain three-grain sulpherb tablets (not sulphur tablets) and take regularly as per directions for several months.

Mrs. M. D. D. asks: "Do you think it is possible for me to increase my weight from 97 pounds to about 125 pounds?"

Answer: Yes, I believe that the regular use of a special tonic tablet will do this for you, as it has for thousands of others. Ask your druggist for three-grain hypo-nuclane tablets in sealed package with full directions. Take them for several months and get the full benefit.

"Ray" writes: "Can a sufferer from bronchial trouble be relieved? Doctors do not seem to help me. What would you suggest?"

Answer: To relieve chronic cold, sore throat bronchitis, I would advise the use of concentrated essence mentho-laxene. Purchase this at any drug store in 2½-oz. packages and mix according to directions given on bottle and you will very shortly be relieved of all bronchial trouble. This will not only relieve, but will correct, and is very pleasant to take.

Melville R. writes: "Should a man of 46 find himself utterly incapacitated? Am weak, nervous, timid, self-conscious. Do not sleep well. Arise with tired feeling, lame back and often have severe headache in the back part of head. Fickle appetite, but when I do eat, do not get strength."

Answer: To use common expression, "you have exceeded the speed limit" and your nervous system needs the aid of an invigorating tonic medicine. Get a tube of three-grain cadomene tablets. Take as per directions and continue treatment several months if necessary.

Miss Adele writes: "My hair is combing out, my scalp itches and dandruff is much annoying, and I want something to cure these conditions."

Answer: For hair and scalp troubles I have never found anything to equal the beneficial results of a thorough treatment of plain yellow minyol. It is cooling, cleansing and invigorating, and thousands now use it regularly as a hair and scalp tonic.

"Uneasy" writes: "I am uneasy about my health. My kidneys and bladder are not well. Have spells of depression, do not sleep well. My ankles puff, and under my eyes I have 'bags.' Please prescribe."

Answer: Your symptoms indicate you need treatment to tone up the functions of kidneys and bladder. Obtain in sealed tubes balmwort tablets and take as per directions for several weeks, or until relief is experienced.

J. R. G. writes: "When a person becomes uncomfortable from excess fat do you believe in reducing with medicine treatment?"

Answer: The treatment of excess fat for reduction can be carried out safely with five-grain arbolene tablets. I do not advise indiscriminate medication, but this treatment seems to be uniformly successful.

*NOTE: For many years Dr. Baker has been giving free advice and prescriptions to millions of people through the press columns, and doubtless has helped in relieving illness and distress more than any single individual in the world's history. Thousands have written him expressions of gratitude and confidence.—ADVERTISEMENT.

GIRLS! BEAUTIFY YOUR HAIR WITH "DANDERINE"

Get a 25 Cent Bottle! Freshen Your Scalp! Stop Falling Hair! Remove Dandruff! Grow Lots of Wavy, Glossy, Beautiful Hair—You Can!

If you care for heavy hair, that glistens with beauty and is radiant with life; has an incomparable softness and is fluffy and lustrous, try Danderine.

Just one application doubles the beauty of your hair, besides it immediately dissolves every particle of dandruff; you cannot have nice, heavy, healthy hair if you have dandruff. This destructive scurf robs the hair of its luster, its strength and its very life, and if not overcome it produces a feverishness and itching of the scalp; the hair roots famish, loosen and die, then the hair falls out fast.

If your hair has been neglected and is thin, faded, dry, scraggy or too oily, get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine at any drug store or toilet counter; apply a little as directed and 10 minutes after you will say this was the best investment you ever made.

We sincerely believe, regardless of everything else advertised, that if you desire soft, lustrous, beautiful hair and lots of it—no dandruff—no itching scalp and no more falling hair—you must use Knowlton's Danderine. If eventually—why not now?—ADV.

DRESS WARM AND KEEP FEET DRY

Tells Rheumatism Sufferers to Take Salts and Get Rid of Uric Acid.

Rheumatism is no respecter of age, sex, color or rank. If not the most dangerous of human afflictions it is one of the most painful. Those subject to rheumatism should eat less meat, dress as warmly as possible, avoid any undue exposure and, above all, drink lots of pure water.

Rheumatism is caused by uric acid which is absorbed into the blood. It is the function of the kidneys to filter this acid from the blood and cast it out. The pores of the skin are also a means of freeing the blood of this impurity. In damp and chilly, cold weather the skin pores are closed, thus forcing the kidneys to do double work, they become weak and sluggish and fail to eliminate this uric acid which keeps accumulating and circulating through the system, eventually settling in the joints and muscles, causing stiffness, soreness and pain called rheumatism.

At the first twinge of rheumatism get from any pharmacy about four ounces of Jad Salts; put a tablespoonful in a glass of water and drink before breakfast each morning for a week. This is said to eliminate uric acid by stimulating the kidneys to normal action, thus ridding the blood of these impurities.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, harmless and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and is used with excellent results by thousands of folks who are subject to rheumatism. Here you have a pleasant, effervescent lithia-water drink which overcomes uric acid and is beneficial to your kidneys as well.—ADV.

'THE LODGER' COMEDY OF A BOARDING HOUSE

Vachell's Play at Garrick, Winter Garden "Passing Show" at Jefferson.

"The Lodger," the first of Horace Annesley Vachell's plays to be seen in St. Louis, will open tonight at the Shubert-Garrick Theater, with the same company which lately presented it in New York and Chicago. The play was first produced at the Haymarket Theater, London, and the first New York performance was at the Maxine Elliott Theater, Jan. 8.

Another of Vachell's plays, "Quinney's," was produced in New York last season, and his latest play, "The Case of Lady Camber," is now running there. "The Lodger" is a comedy, its scene being laid in the Bloomsbury boarding house section of London. The mysterious lodger, who goes out at night, distributing half-crowns concealed in buns, becomes an object of suspicion, in view of the search which is at the same time going on for a notorious murderer, known as "The Avenger." A love story and several incidents of interest are interwoven.

The playing of several of the principal actors in "The Lodger" has won praise, particularly Beryl Mercer as the Bloomsbury landlady, Phyllis Relph as one of the boarders, Lionel Atwill in the title role, and Harry Ashford.

Winter Garden Show Here.

"The Passing Show of 1916," last summer's New York Winter Garden production, will open tonight at the Jefferson. It has two acts and 16 scenes, including a spectacular cavalry charge of United States troops on the Mexican border. Song, dance and travesty form the entertainment, in which Ed Wynn is chief comedian. One of his funniest acts is a garage scene in which he repairs a damaged automobile. The cast shows a number of changes, as compared with that seen at the Winter Garden last June. Performers featured in New York, whose names do not appear in the local advance announcement, are Florence Moore, Frances Demarest, George Baldwin, Thirma Swirskaia and Dolly Hackett. The principal performers here, besides Wynn will be Belle Ashlyn, Herman Timberg, Charles Mack, Fred Walton, William Philbrick, James Clemons, the Ford sisters, Stella Hoban, Elida Morris, Jack Boyle, Wilbert Dunn, Guy Collins, Five Violin Girls, Andrew Harper, Bly Brown, William Healy, Bud Murray, Augusta Dean, Pearl Eaton, Vera Roehm and MaBelle, dancer, assisted by a ballet corps.

Next week's show at the Jefferson will be another Winter Garden spectacle, "Robinson Crusoe Jr.," with Al Jolson and a large company. At the Garrick, a new play, "Number 855," by Anna Goldmark Gross, will be presented by a cast including Helen Holmes, Joseph Rawley, William Canfield and Joseph Stanhope.

Louis Mann in War Satire.

Louis Mann, a noted German dialect comedian, now in vaudeville, heads tomorrow's bill at the Columbia with a one-act satire, "Some Warriors," which is the work of his wife, Clara Lipman, and Samuel Shipman. This sketch was first presented at a Friars' Frolic in New York. It is announced as being the first humorous play on the European war. The principal characters are Richard Strauss, the composer, as a German soldier, and Edmond Rostand, poet-playwright, as a French soldier. Opinions have differed as to the dramatic value and the good taste of this performance, and Mann has shown an intolerance of criticism which has not helped matters. In St. Paul he spoke abusively of a critic, who responded in the next day's paper with some paragraphs which have been widely reprinted.

Other acts on the Columbia's bill are: Aveling and Lloyd, in a "patter" written by Aaron Hoffman; Eva Taylor and Lawrence Grattan, in "Rocking the Boat;" Marion Weeks, 17-year-old coloratura soprano, and Dolores Vallecita and her group of performing leopards.

The Players Theater stock company, which opened its season with the Megrue-Cohan "Seven Keys to Baldpate," and which has not since found a play better adapted to the talents of its members, will repeat "Bald-pate" this week. The cast will be about the same as before, except that Olive Templeton takes the role played then by Thais Magrane. Mitchell Harris, Arthur Holman and Esther Howard, whose work at that time was very entertaining, are among those who will have their former roles. This may be the last week of the company's season, as the theater has been sold over its head.

"Linger Longer, Lucy," a musical military farce, will be presented at the American today by a company headed by Billy Single Clifford, dancing comedian. A feminine brass band promises daily parades. "Miss America," a musical satire, also of a military cast, is the Grand Opera House headliner for tomorrow. In burlesque, the "Sporting Widows," at the Gayety, will vie with the "Monte Carlo Girls" at the Standard.

GERMANS PROPOSE A CANAL FROM ANTWERP TO COLOGNE

Plans Outlined Provide for Waterway Suitable for Large Vessels.

BERLIN, April 7.—A movement is under way to form an association to build a canal from Antwerp to Aix-la-Chapelle and Cologne, to link up Belgium with the great German industrial districts. The project is based on the ground that "after the war Antwerp will be a port of vast political and economic importance to Germany."

The plans now outlined provide for a waterway suitable for large vessels between the great harbor on the Scheldt and the Rhine. The Rhenish Canal Association now organizing will be on the lines of the Rhine-Danube Association founded in 1916.

It is expected that the new association will have official recognition and support, and the great industrial regions through which the canal will pass will be called upon to pay most of the expense of construction.

Farmers Good Guessers.

DARLINGTON, England, April 7.—At a Red Cross sale here four farmers correctly guessed the weight of a load of straw, which was 2816 pounds.

Denmark Not to Issue Iron Coins.

COPENHAGEN, April 7.—The Danish Government has abandoned the project of coining iron money, but will allow the importation of Norwegian and Swedish iron coins.

Position of the Neutrals.

BIRMINGHAM, England, April 7.—Attorney-General F. E. Smith, in the course of an address here, described the position of the neutral in the present war as that of an old man eating a scanty meal in the vicinity of a tiger's den.

Is Only Successful Remedy for Treating Gall Stones

MR. W. C. DILLEHAY

Fruitola and Traxo Brought Relief After Doctor Said Nothing but Operation Would Help.

In the opinion of Mr. W. C. Dillehay, 513 Morton St., Nashville, Tenn., Fruitola and Traxo is the only successful remedy for gall stone trouble. In a letter to the Pinus laboratories, Mr. Dillehay says: "After a leading Nashville physician had failed to relieve my wife, and we were told an operation was necessary, I heard of Fruitola and Traxo and we decided to at least give it a trial. I gave her this medicine as directed and after four doses she was relieved of nearly a quart of gall stones, conclusive evidence that an operation was by no means necessary."

Fruitola and Traxo are compounded from the original Edsall formulas at the Pinus laboratories in Monticello, Ill., and can be purchased in drug stores; a doctor's prescription is not necessary. Fruitola is a pure fruit oil that acts as an intestinal lubricant. One dose is usually sufficient to indicate its efficacy. Traxo is a tonic-alterative that is most effective to rebuild the weakened, rundown system.

A booklet of special interest to those who suffer from stomach trouble can be obtained by writing to the Pinus Laboratories, Monticello, Illinois.

York Mother Finds Ideal Cold Treatment for Her Little Boy

Nothing to Swallow—You Just Rub It On.

RALPH I. SMITH (4 YEARS OLD)

Mothers everywhere will be interested in the experience of Mrs. Chas. I. Smith, 623 West Gas Alley, York, Pa. Mrs. Smith tried the Southern remedy—Vick's VapoRub Salve, when it was first introduced in York, and writes—

"Our little four-year old boy had a cough for about a week. We gave him everything we knew, and nothing seemed to do any good. So when we got Vick's VapoRub I rubbed it on his chest well for two nights and I have not heard him cough since. I think it is the best medicine I have ever had in the house."

Vick's VapoRub comes in salve form, and when applied to the body heat, the ingredients are released in vapor form. These vapors are inhaled with each breath, opening the air passages and loosening the phlegm. It's a real "Bodyguard in the home" against all forms of cold troubles. 25c, 50c, or $1.00. At all druggists.

To Have Curly, Wavy Hair Like "Nature's Own"

Women who have trouble keeping their hair in curl, or of securing the desired wavy effect—and especially those who realize the harm that the hot iron does to the hair—will do well to try the new silmerine method. In no other way can they acquire such pretty waves and curls, having all the appearance of "Nature's own." And the hair, instead of being singed, ragged or dead looking, has such a lively luster and wholesome beauty. The curliness is more quickly acquired than when a waving iron is used, and it lasts considerably longer. When the hair is combed out it is nice and fluffy. The hair will be quite manageable, no matter in what fashion it is done up.

If one will get a bottle of plain liquid silmerine at any drug store and follow the accompanying directions she will be simply delighted with the result. This product is, of course, perfectly harmless, and there is nothing sticky, greasy or unpleasant about it. It is also prized as a splendid dressing for the hair. As so small a quantity is required at a time, a few ounces will last for months.—ADV.

GOOD LUCK

Here's a hint—or two:—It's usually "bad luck" to rely upon a window placard, or door sign, to attract the best class of tenants.

It's usually "good luck" to use the Post-Dispatch Want Columns so that you will have more applicants for rooms than you can accommodate—thus being able to turn away anyone who seems of doubtful desirability.

FOOD SOURING IN STOMACH CAUSES GASES, INDIGESTION

"Pape's Diapepsin" neutralizes acids in stomach and starts digestion.

Five minutes! No sourness, gas, heartburn, acidity or dyspepsia.

You don't know what upset your stomach—which portion of the food did the damage—do you? Well, don't bother. If your stomach is in a revolt; if sick, gassy and upset, and what you just ate has fermented and turned sour; head dizzy and aches; belch gases and acids and eructate undigested food; breath foul, tongue coated—just take a little Pape's Diapepsin to neutralize acidity and in five minutes you wonder what became of the indigestion and distress.

Millions of men and women today know that it is needless to have dyspepsia. A little Diapepsin occasionally keeps the stomach sweetened, and they eat their favorite foods without fear.

If your stomach doesn't take care of your liberal limit without rebellion; if your food is a damage instead of a help, remember the quickest, surest, most harmless antacid is Pape's Diapepsin which costs only fifty cents for a large case at drug stores. It's truly wonderful—it stops food souring and sets things straight, so gently and easily that it is really astonishing. Your stomach will digest your meals if you keep acids neutralized.—ADV.

GRAND OPERA HERE BEGINS TOMORROW NIGHT WITH 'TOSCA'

Boston-National Co. Season Will Consist of Four Performances at Odeon.

MATINEE ON WEDNESDAY

Impresario Rabinoff Brings Many Well-Known Artists, Large Orchestra and Chorus.

What promises to be one of the outstanding musical events of the local season is the engagement of the Boston-National Grand Opera Co. for four performances at the Odeon, tomorrow night, Tuesday night and Wednesday afternoon and night. Because three of the operas selected are by Puccini, the engagement has been announced a "Puccini Festival." The fourth opera will be Verdi's universally known "Aida."

Tomorrow night's performance will be Puccini's "Tosca," which has not been heard here since it was given at the Odeon by the Chicago Grand Opera Co. in 1914. "La Boheme," Tuesday night's bill, was last performed in this city by the Metropolitan Opera Co. in 1910, at the Coliseum. "Madame Butterfly," scheduled for the Wednesday matinee, was sung by the Boston-National Co. at the Odeon in October, 1915. "Aida" has been heard here several times in the last few years, but its most recent production of strictly high class was that of the Chicago Grand Opera Co. at the Odeon three years ago. The present engagement is the only one sponsored this year by the St. Louis Grand Opera Committee.

Rabinoff Again in Charge.

The Boston company's engagement here last season left a most favorable impression, because of its excellent artistic standards and achievements. The work of the individual singers and actors struck an unusually high average; the stage settings, by noted artists in this department, were memorable; and the orchestra and chorus were worthy of admiration. The company this year is again under the direction of the noted impresario, Max Rabinoff, and most of the favorite singers of last year are in the casts.

The Grand Opera Committee was well advised in repeating from last year's repertory the opera, "Madame Butterfly," because it affords scope for the inimitable acting of the title role by the Japanese prima donna, Tamaki Miura. It is conceded everywhere that her portrayal of the part is unlikely to be equaled, save by one of her own nationality and ability.

Roster of the Artists.

In the roster of artists of note all over the country and of friendly remembrance in this city are Luisa Villani, an excellent dramatic soprano, who will sing the name parts in "Tosca" and "Aida;" Giovanni Zenatello, a much admired dramatic tenor, whose roles will be Cavaradossi in "Tosca" and Rhadames in "Aida;" Ricardo Martin, popular American tenor, who is scheduled for Pinkerton in "Butterfly," and possibly Rudolfo in "La Boheme;" Maggie Teyte, a favorite lyric soprano, who is cast as Mimi in "La Boheme;" George Baklanoff, Russian baritone, cast as Scarpia in "Boheme," and Amonasro in "Aida;" and Maria Gay, who will sing Amneris in "Aida." Mabel Riegelman, American soprano, will take the part of Musetta in "Boheme."

Others in the casts are the soprano, Francesca Peralta; the mezzo-sopranos, Elvira Leveroni and Maria Lara; the tenors, Romeo Boscacci and Guiseppe Gaudenzi; the baritones, Giorgio Puliti and Thomas Chalmers, the latter a sterling American artist; and the bassos, Paolo Ananian, Virgilio Lazzari and Jose Mardones. The musical directors are Roberto Moranzoni and Fulgenzio Guerrieri, of whom the first will conduct "Tosca," "Boheme" and "Aida." The stage equipments are from the studios of Leon Bakst, Joseph Urban, John Wenger, Pieretto-Bianco and the Japanese artist, Arishma. There are a chorus of 50 and an orchestra of 55. The company, which is in its second season, has more than half completed a transcontinental tour, and is returning East from successful engagements on the Pacific coast.

NOTED JAPANESE SAYS U. S. HAS MENACING AMBITION AS TO ASIA

Declares That Proposed Expansion of American Navy Is Directed Against His Country.

TOKIO, April 7.—Militarism and pan-Asianism are the only possible means to cure Japan's internal and external troubles, declares the Rev. Kozui Otani, renowned through the Far East as the former Lord Abbot of the famous Nishi Honganji temple at Kioto and director of millions of Buddhist believers. His personal influence lends interest to his article which appears in the Central Review. He writes:

"The future menace to Japan will come from the United States and China. What most concerns the Japanese in the United States is the proposed expansion of the American navy. It is directed against Japan or is meant to menace Japan.

"How far-reaching the American ambition in the Orient is can be seen from the protest which the United States is raising against the Japanese occupation of the former German possession in the South Pacific. The Americans, who saw no danger in the German occupation of the islands, cry that Japan's occupation of them is a menace to their colonies, the Philippines and Guam. What does this all mean? The Americans know that if the Japanese really mean to fight they can do it without a footing in these small islands. Yet they cry that Japan's occupation is dangerous to the United States. This is unmistakably a kind of disgrace to the Japanese nation. American ambition in Asia is indeed menacing the very existence of the Japanese empire."

Fathers' Club to Sponsor Play.

The Fathers' Club of the Washington School will sponsor a play, "Rebecca's Triumph," at Soldan High School Thursday evening. The Triple C. Dramatic Club will present the play to raise funds to defray the expenses of the annual school picnic.

Important!

It will soon be useless for you to write for information about the new Encyclopaedia Britannica. Very few sets of this great work are left, and they will be gone before you can write for the booklet, read it, make up your mind and send in your order—unless you do so quickly.

You

owe it to yourself to find out whether you really need the New Britannica—whether it would be as helpful to you as it is to the 175,000 men and women who already own it.

The present sale of the new Encyclopaedia Britannica, printed on the beautiful India paper, will soon be over. Sets (the last there are) are being shipped out at the rate of hundreds a day on orders from all over the country.

We shall soon announce the LAST DAY on which any orders can be accepted with any prospect of filling them—because, when the remaining sets are gone, there will be no more India paper sets of the Britannica to sell.

It would be a sheer waste of money to send out booklets with this sale so near over. Therefore, if you desire literature about the Britannica, write for it before Wednesday, April 25—write for it NOW: fill out and mail the coupon in the lower right-hand corner.

Everyone interested in the Britannica—you, if you have thought of buying it—should decide before ordering whether this wonderful storehouse of knowledge would be helpful. In order to do so intelligently, send for the booklet (free) which tells all about the Britannica—what it is, in what way it serves your practical everyday needs, what India paper is, and so on.

Don't put this off. Don't wait "till tomorrow." To own and use the Britannica will mean—

To increase your knowledge your mental efficiency your earning power.

It is certainly worth two minutes of your time to write for the free booklet which will prove this fact.

Remember—after April 25 it will be useless to write for any literature because there will not be enough sets of the Britannica left to make it worth while to send out the free booklets. Moreover, the increasing rate at which these last sets are selling is rapidly lessening your chances to buy the Britannica in its most convenient form—the "Handy Volume" Issue, printed on genuine India paper.

Every day you delay inquiring into the usefulness of this wonderful work diminishes your opportunity to buy one of the last India paper sets at any price.

You can get all the information you seek about the Britannica out of the booklet—which is written to answer the questions which you naturally ask yourself before making an investment of this kind. And we don't want you or any one to order the Britannica unless convinced that the work would be helpful.

But we also say HURRY!

Judging from the daily increase in orders this week for these remaining sets, a very short time will see every last one of them sold. If you put off ordering till the eleventh hour, you are liable to disappointment. You now can avoid this—you can send for the booklet, read it, decide whether or not it would pay you to own the Britannica, and order a set if you want it.

No increase will be made in the present prices of the Britannica and, if you prefer, you can secure the entire set (29 volumes) on a first payment of only $1 and pay for it in a limited number of small monthly amounts—as low as $3 for the cloth binding. This gives you the use of the books while paying for them. But you cannot afford a set even on these easy terms unless you are convinced of the practical usefulness of the Britannica.

Here's the coupon—and there's no time like NOW

You can see and examine sets at:

SEARS, ROEBUCK AND CO.
Chicago, Ill.

Gentlemen:

Please send me at once your free illustrated, descriptive booklet about the "Handy Volume" Issue of the new Encyclopaedia Britannica, printed on genuine India paper.

I want this so that I can learn whether the Britannica will be useful to me in my work and my home, and so that I can decide before all the remaining sets are sold whether or not I want to buy.

Send me full information as to the smallest monthly payment I will have to make for one of these remaining sets; also the lowest cash price.

British Private Honored for Reckless Feat of Daring.

LONDON, April 7.—One of the most reckless feats of daring reported during the war is recorded in a list of military awards just issued. Private Daniel Hall, who won the Distinguished Conduct Medal, "put his hand over the muzzle of a trench mortar as it was fired in order to prevent the shell from hitting a man who had inadvertently stepped in front of the gun."

The same list mentions awards to six men who picked up live shells and threw them over the parapet.

Nuxated Iron to Make New Age of Beautiful Women and Strong Iron Men

Say Physicians—Quickly Puts Roses Into the Cheeks of Women and Most Astonishing Youthful Strength Into the Veins of Men—It Often Increases the Strength and Endurance of Delicate, Nervous "Run-Down" Folks 100 Per Cent. in Two Weeks' Time.

Opinion of Dr. Schuyler C. Jaques, Visiting Surgeon of St. Elizabeth's Hospital, New York City

Since the remarkable discovery of organic iron, Nuxated Iron or "Fer Nuxate," as the French call it, has taken the country by storm. It is conservatively estimated that over three million people annually are taking it in this country alone. Most astonishing results are reported from its use by both physicians and laymen. So much so that doctors predict that we shall soon have a new age of far more beautiful, rosy-cheeked women and strong iron men.

Dr. King, a New York physician and medical author, when interviewed on the subject, said: "There can be no strong iron men without iron. Pallor means anaemia. Anaemia means iron deficiency. The skin of anaemic men and women is pale; the flesh flabby. The muscles lack tone; the brain fags, and the memory fails and often they become weak, nervous, irritable, despondent and melancholy. When the iron goes from the blood of women the roses go from their cheeks.

"In the most common foods of America, the starches, sugars, table syrups, candies, polished rice, white bread, soda crackers, biscuits, macaroni, spaghetti, tapioca, sago, farina, degerminated cornmeal, no longer is iron to be found. Refining processes have removed the iron of Mother Earth from these impoverished foods, and silly methods of home cookery, by throwing down the waste pipe the water in which our vegetables are cooked, are responsible for another grave iron loss.

"Therefore, if you wish to preserve your youthful health and strength to a ripe old age you must supply the iron deficiency in your food by using some form of organic iron, just as you would use salt when your food has not enough salt."

Dr. E. Sauer, a Boston physician, who has studied both in this country and in great European medical institutions said: "As I have said a hundred times over, organic iron is the greatest of all strength-builders. If people would only take Nuxated Iron when they feel weak or rundown, instead of dosing themselves with habit-forming drugs, stimulants and alcoholic beverages I am convinced that in this way they could ward off disease, preventing it becoming organic in thousands of cases and thereby the lives of thousands might be saved who now die every year from pneumonia, grippe, kidney, liver, heart trouble and other dangerous nervous maladies. The real and true cause which started their disease was nothing more nor less than a weakened condition brought on by lack of iron in the blood.

"Not long ago a man came to me who was nearly half a century old and asked me to give him a preliminary examination for life insurance. I was astonished to find him with the blood pressure of a boy of twenty and as full of health, strength and vitality as a young man; in fact, a young man he really was, notwithstanding his age. The secret, he said, was taking iron—Nuxated Iron had filled him with renewed life. At 30 he was in bad health; at 46 he was careworn and nearly all in; now at 50, after taking Nuxated Iron, a miracle of vitality and his face beaming with the buoyancy of youth. Iron is absolutely necessary to enable your blood to change food into living tissue. Without it, no matter how much or what you eat, your food merely passes through you without doing you any good. You don't get the strength out of it, and as a consequence you become weak, pale and sickly looking, just like a plant trying to grow in a soil deficient in iron. If you are not strong or well you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two five-grain tablets of ordinary nuxated iron three times a day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see how much you have gained. I have seen dozens of nervous, run-down people who were ailing all the while double their strength and endurance and entirely rid themselves of all symptoms of dyspepsia, liver and other troubles in from ten to fourteen days' time simply by taking iron in the proper form. And this after they had in some cases been doctoring for months without obtaining any benefit. But don't take the old forms of reduced iron, iron acetate or tincture of iron simply to save a few cents. The iron demanded by Mother Nature for the red coloring matter in the blood of her children is, alas! not that kind of iron. You must take iron in a form that can be easily absorbed and assimilated to do you any good, otherwise it may prove worse than useless. Many an athlete and prize fighter has won the day simply because he knew the secret of great strength and endurance and filled his blood with iron before he went into the affray; while many another has gone down in inglorious defeat simply for the lack of iron."

Dr. Schuyler C. Jaques, Visiting Surgeon of St. Elizabeth's Hospital, New York City, said: "I have never before given out any medical information or advice for publication, as I ordinarily do not believe in it. But in the case of Nuxated Iron I feel I would be remiss in my duty not to mention it. I have taken it my self and given it to my patients with most surprising and satisfactory results. And those who wish to increase their strength, power and endurance will find it a most remarkable and wonderfully effective remedy."

NOTE—Nuxated Iron, which is prescribed and recommended above by physicians in such a great variety of cases, is not a patent medicine nor secret remedy, but one which is well known to druggists and whose iron constituents are widely prescribed by eminent physicians both in Europe and America. Unlike the older inorganic iron products, it is easily assimilated, does not injure the teeth, make them black, nor upset the stomach; on the contrary, it is a most potent remedy in nearly all forms of indigestion as well as for nervous, run-down conditions. The manufacturers have such great confidence in nuxated iron that they offer to forfeit $100.00 to any charitable institution if they cannot take any man or woman under 60 who lacks iron and increase their strength 100 per cent or over in four weeks' time, provided they have no serious organic trouble. They also offer to refund your money if it does not at least double your strength and endurance in ten days' time. It is dispensed in this city by Judge & Dolph Drug Co., Wolff-Wilson Drug Co., Johnson-Enderle-Pauley Drug Co., Keiffer Drug Co. and all good druggists.—ADVERTISEMENT.

The chief figures in the story are two mothers and their daughters, and a man. The difference in the training given by the two mothers is shown working out in its results. Katherine Kaelred, Frank Sheridan and Zena Keefe have leading parts.

Why do druggists recommend PLUTO water
America's Physic

THE druggist is frequently called upon to "prescribe" for his customers' minor ills. There is nothing that your druggist is quicker to recommend for constipation—either occasional or chronic—than PLUTO Water, because he knows it is held in high esteem by the medical profession and used by thousands of intelligent Americans who realize the seriousness of irregular and incomplete bowel movements.

Frequently when you feel "out of sorts," constipation is to blame. The next time you have the "blues," take a dose of PLUTO Water and see how soon the sun will shine again.

PLUTO Water is more than a physic—it is a wonderfully helpful curative agent in the treatment of kidney, liver and stomach troubles, rheumatism and nervous disorders. Look for the little red devil on every bottle. It is there for your protection.

Why Society Women Wash Their Own Hair.

They do, not because it is a fad, but because they wish to obtain the greatest possible hair beauty and be sure they are not using anything harmful. They have found that in washing the hair it is never wise to use a makeshift, but is always advisable to use a preparation made for shampooing only. Many of our friends say they get the best results from a simple home-made canthrox mixture. You can use this at a cost of about three cents a shampoo by getting some canthrox from your druggist and dissolving a teaspoonful in a cup of hot water. This makes enough shampoo liquid to apply to all the hair, instead of just the top of the head, as with most preparations. Dandruff, excess oil and dirt are dissolved and entirely disappear in the rinsing water. Your hair will be so fluffy that it will look much heavier than it is. Its luster and softness will also delight you.—ADV.

Would You Gain a Pound A Week for Three Months?

Then begin taking regularly three grain hypo-nuclane tablets, which are made from a health-germ of ordinary yeast and combined with hypophosphites and an absorptive phosphorus.

Physicians and chemists assert that this tablet is very largely used for increasing the weight and improving the nervous system because of its aid to digestion, assimilation and absorption. The food elements which go to make blood and solid tissue is retained when this treatment is regularly used for several months. Most physicians and apothecary shops supply them in sealed packages.—ADVERTISEMENT.

MUTUAL MOTORS MAKES INCREASE IN PRODUCTION

J. I. Handley, president of the Mutual Motors Co., has been in the field analyzing carefully the trade conditions in all sections of the country and the prospects for spring and summer business. He has returned to Jackson with "first hand" knowledge that this year is going to be the greatest in the history of the industry.

In view of this condition and the increased popularity of the Marion-Handley, together with the resultant growth of the dealer organization, Handley's first step was to increase the production of "Marion-Handleys" 300 per cent, beginning April 1.

Of course, the larger operations necessitatad a larger organization and to take care of this two new members have been added.

Mr. George E. Drawe has been appointed assistant general manager and H. R. Cooley, sales manager.

THE VELIE SKELETON

"Skeletons" may not be beautiful, but they certainly attract attention," says Alex Steiner of the Velie Auto Co., in speaking about the skeleton framework of one of the Velie Built-Well Six bodies, which is being shown at the Velie salesroom.

The idea in making this unique exhibit was to impress upon the buyer's mind the sturdiness of construction which is incorporated in Velie bodies. The framework is made of oak and hickory, reinforced with steel. All of the joints are mortised and glued, then additionally secured with screws. Over this framework is placed the sheet steel that makes up the casing.

Many unique details of construction are brought out clearly. The windshield support, of solid steel, is rigidly bolted to the frame. Another feature is the manner of hanging the doors on their hinges. One-piece hinges with double swings are employed instead of two separate ones and the doors are so arranged as to lift completely off without any unscrewing. The exhibit has attracted a great deal of attention since it was reecived.

TRUCK PAID ITS WAY

"One of the very best ways to gauge the earning possibilities of a motor truck," says R. E. Chamberlain, truck sales manager of the Packard Motor Car Co., "is to determine how much a truck will earn when employed in the express or general haulage business. In that line, if it fails to earn more for the goods it hauls than it costs to maintain and operate it, the owner is doing business at a loss.

"Of the hunareds of expressmen in this country operating Packards at a substantial profit, perhaps there is no better example than the Baltimore & Belair Auto Express, Baltimore. Its owner, G. E. Biddison, started out three years ago with only a few hundred dollars. With this he made a payment on a Packard truck. In a short time he had the truck paid for. Then he bought another. Today he owns seven silent chainless Packards, every one paid for out of the profits of the business, and he is well on the road towards a substantial life competence."

NEW MOTORCYCLE RECORD

The world's record for continuous riding on a motor cycle was broken by Allen T. Bedell, Redlands, Cal., riding a Harley-Davidson twin-cylinder stock machine, fully equipped. Bedell circled the Los Angeles Ascot Speedway for a total of 1153¾ miles in 24 hours, breaking the previous international mark set up by "Cannon Ball" Baker in Australia. Bedell also broke the 1000 mile record when he reeled off that distance in 20 hours 42 minutes 30 seconds, or 21 minutes better than the previous time. At the conclusion of his long grind Bedell felt fine and claimed that he could continue for another 24 hours on the same machine and better his time.

WORM DRIVE MEETS FAVOR

The Ameston Motor Sales Co., distributors of the Ameston worm-drive unit for Fords, Dodges, Dorts and other cars at 1317-19 Chestnut street, reports that the Ameston factory at Owensboro, Ky., has been enlarged, in order that the increased demand can be supplied. This worm drive unit is manufactured by the F. A. Ames Co. of Owensboro, Ky. who have manufactured wagons, buggies and carriages for 35 years and who for five years have also been engaged in the manufacture of automobile bodies. The local distributers report having sold 100 truck units within the last nine months.

NOW CALL IT "FACT CAR"

The Chandler factory after three years' experience has come to call the latest model the "Fact Car" and in the advertising is featuring the "facts" regarding its product.

The Lewis Automobile Co., St. Louis Chandler ristributor, has just issuel a booklet along the same line, calling it "Local Chandler Facts." It is made up of letters from 97 Chandler owners in St. Louis, telling of their experience with their cars and "Lewis service."

Many unique compliments are paid the car by the various owners in their letters. One calls it a "brother car"—a car one might recommend to his brother. Another says "6500 miles without 5 cents' worth of repairs." One owner writes Mr. Lewis, "I owe you a vote of thanks for selling me the car."

Two letters are from men who are now driving their third Chandler, while there are numerous ones from those with their second Chandler. One of the most interesting pages in the booklet is the itemized operating report of an owner showing a cost of .036 per mile over a distance of 9500 miles.

SPEED DRIVERS FOR WAR

Messrs. David F. Reid and H. S. Leyman, presidents respectively of Chicago and Cincinnati speedways in conference in Cincinnati, reached the conclusion that no definite action be taken regarding Decoration Day auto races until after Congress decides the war question. If it appears that the Government will want the racing drivers for aviation schools or aviation fields in any capacity or will want the Speedway property for any purpose whatever, that the Speedway management will lend all the assistance and encouragement of the enrollment of drivers and mechanicians for any service.

REPRESENT SELDEN TRUCK

Igou Motor Co., 4333-35-37 Warne avenue, announced last week that it had become distributors in this territory for the Selden Truck, a product of the Selden Truck Sales Co., Rochester, N. Y. The Selden, which is made in five sizes ranging from three-quarter-ton to five tons capacity, has been on the market since 1910. The output, however, has heretofore been consumed in the East, but increased factory facilities now enable them to come into this territory.

The trucks are made in both worm and internal gear drive with various wheel bases in the different sizes, thus increasing the adaptability. They have 21 different styles of stock bodies including hydraulic dumps, one of which will reach St. Louis next week.

S. C. Igou, the head of the distributing company, has been in the motor car business in St. Louis for six years, prior to that being factory superintendent for the Moon Motor Car Co. He has purchased the 50-foot lot adjoining his present place on the north and will erect immediately a new building 50x100 feet to be devoted exclusively to the truck sales and service department. A 24-hour service will be established and a complete line of both trucks and parts will be kept in stock at all times. Geo. Cousins, formerly with the G. M. C. Co. will be associated with Mr. Igou.

NEW PUNCTURE CURE

An office has been opened at 911 North Nineteenth street by Emil V. Noser as the representative of the Korker Puncture Sales Co., The product distributed is the Korker puncture cure, a powder used when mixed with water in inner tubes to seal punctures. Noser was for a long time with the Mound City Auto and Buggy Co., Allen & Jackson distributors.

10,000 MILES FROM TIRES

"I've just received the record of one of our cars in Chicago, which went 10,000 miles before having tire trouble," said L. W. Leigh. "The owner bought his Apperson in May, 1916. He had driven it in Chicago and on tours a couple of hundred over 10,000 miles when he had his first puncture.

"That's a good record. But it's no more than many other Apperson owners are getting. In fact, I've heard of so many 8000 and 9000 and 10,000-mile tire records on Appersons that 10,000 miles even with all four is only a little more than I expect.

"It's natural that the Apperson should be easier on tires than most cars. While it's big, has 130-inch wheel base, yet it weighs, ready for the road, only 3000 pounds."

Prices Increased May 1st
Order Now and Order Quick

We have expected a price increase right along and only the immense quantity being produced will enable us to sell at the May 1st price—we of course have no assurances that further increases in price will not be necessary.

Everything that goes into the Maxwell is the best—this we do know and can prove.

The steel is the finest that money can buy—the motor—no finer, no tougher, no steadier can be built according to our experience and the steeper the hills and the tougher the roads the more the Maxwell seems to like them.

Our April allotment will be delivered to us at the old price. That's agreed and that's fair to us, and we are going to be fair to our customers.

— But—after May 1st, we can't buy a Maxwell for a penny less than the new price and we shan't sell you one for a penny less than $665. We ought to get $1000.

Come in—study this car—see if we are right or wrong about it.

When we say biggest value, we mean it and we can prove it by any known tests or standards.

We put it up to you to judge after you consider these features.

Maxwell Style Same as Highest Priced Cars

The Maxwell lines are pleasing to the eye. The design conforms exactly to the prevailing style, as illustrated by any number of high-priced motors cars.

Comfort to the Point of Luxury

The Maxwell car is roomy. It seats five passengers in comfort. There is plenty of leg room in front and rear. The long semi-elliptic Maxwell springs and the soft, extra-deep upholstery make riding easy.

150,000 Miles Not Unusual

There are Maxwell cars in daily use which have already run over 150,000 miles. Think of it—more than 20 years of average driving! There are Maxwell cars in the mountains and in sections where there are rough roads or no roads, that have gone 50,000 miles—50,000 miles that would wreck and tear most cars to pieces.

The World's Endurance Champion

This record was set by a five passenger Maxwell stock touring car, by running for 22,022 miles—44 days and nights—WITHOUT A MOTOR STOP, AND WITHOUT ANY REPAIRS OR ADJUSTMENTS. The run was sanctioned and constantly observed by the supreme court of this industry—The American Automobile Association. The car was a stock car and was so certified. The facts are indisputable.

Maxwell Running Expense $8.19 Per Month.

Maxwell cars, on account of scientifically correct balance and light weight are very economical to operate. Hundreds of instances are on record, showing from 30 to 44 miles per gallon of gasoline. Mrs. Miriam Seeley—Professor, Oregon Agricultural College—has just completed a trip from Corvallis, Oregon, to Boston and return—9,700 miles—(about 1½ years of average driving). The total expense for gasoline, oil and repairs was 1½ cents per mile—or the equivalent of $8.19 per month.

Complete Equipment—No Extras to Buy

Maxwell cars have every device and accessory for the greater convenience and comfort of the owner. Not a single thing is lacking. When you buy a Maxwell, no further investment is necessary.

Remember—$665 May 1st. $635 Now.

PRESENT AN ARMORED CAR

An exact duplicate of the new light type of armored motor car, such as is being manufactured by the King Motor Car Co. of Detroit and the Armored Motor Car Co., is to be presented to the Maryland militia by the people of Maryland.

The car is to be paid for by public subscription. The King Motor Sales Co., Inc., the distributors for the King in Maryland, is heading the subscription list.

The project is being exploited by the Maryland League of National Defense. Subscriptions are being received by the Baltimore newspapers. A committee has been appointed and the treasurer of the King Armored Motor Car Co. has been empowered to receive subscriptions.

Many other states are making inquiries about furnishing armored motor cars to their military bodies. At the present time the King Motor Car Co. are furnishing their standard eight-cylinder chassis to the Armored Motor Car Co., who are placing the new type war bodies on the chassis for the Ordnance Department of the United States Army and the United States Marine Corps.

GOVERNORS AS GUIDES

SAN FRANCISCO, April 7.—Governors of all the states through which the San Francisco Ad Club's caravan will go have been sent invitations to accompany the overland tourists through their territory.

Letters this week were sent to Mayor James Rolph of San Fransico to go as far as Sacramento with the tourists; Gov. Stephens of California to ride to the Nevada line; Gov. Edge of Nevada, to ride to the Utah line; Gov. Ferguson of Utah, to accompany the delegates to the Colorado line; Gov. Gunter of Colorado, to be the ad men's guest to the Kansas line; Gov. Capper of Kansas to occupy one of the overland cars through his State, and Gov. Gardner of Missouri to meet the caravan at Kansas City and enter triumphantly into St. Louis with the first West-to-East overland motor caravan.

The 2500-mile overland trip will be an epoch-making one, and keen rivalry has been engendered among the different towns, and representatives of the several routes across the country as to which road the tour shall take.

STANDARDIZATION BENEFIT

"The Maxwell manufacturing policy has been to produce in large quantity a light and efficient car of standardized parts," says President Walter E. Flanders of the Maxwell company. "We have adhered to the original practice of standardizing all Maxwell parts and will continue to do so. The policy has resulted in a degree of manufacturing efficiency by which we have been able to overcome the great increases in the costs of our raw materials.

"These increases have been enormous. In the aggregate they amount to over 30 per cent. In some individual instances they have run from 1000 to 1500 per cent. Every item that enters into the making of the car has increased in cost by a margin several times greater than the percentage of increase we have given the selling price.

"This gives a forcible illustration of what car standardization means for the automobile buyers. Because of it we find it possible to keep on with our production. We could have accepted suggestions a number of times that looked to a change in the car. These involved taking out something that we now give the Maxwell buyers. W did not deem such changes to be advisable in order to effect so-called economy."

GRANT IN NEW HANDS

The St. Louis Grant Motor Co. moved last week in permanent quarters at 3948 and 50 Olive. This company recently took over the distribution of Grant Six motor cars in eastern Missouri and Southern Illinois. The Grant is well known in this territory and the majority of those dealers who in the past have profited by its popularity have aligned themselves with the new distributor and J. C. Barcus reports that he is rapidly closing the country territory.

The new building gives an excellent show room with ample room for service station in the rear. The second floor will be used for storage purposes. The Grant car was one of the first to enter the popular price "six" field and has made every effort to keep the price down, although it was necessary on March 1 to make an increase of $50, on all models The five-passenger touring car and the three-passenger roadster now sell for $875.

BECOMES BIG CENTER

Indianapolis long has been the center of some of the greatest activity in the automobile industry, and the Cole Motor Car Co., located there, has been responsible for a great deal of it, ever since its inception about eight years ago.

However, not until the National Automobile Show, held in New York early in January, was the true status of what has been going on in an automobile way at the Hoosier capital really been made public.

For at that time it was discovered that of the seven companies building cars exclusively in Indianapolis plants, one had reached the 10,000 mark and none built less than 2500 automobiles annually.

Unusual expansion was most apparent, perhaps, in the case of the Cole Motor Car Co., now under the active management of A. F. Knobloch, formerly general manager of the Northway Motor and Manufacturing Co of Detroit. From a production of about 2700 cars for the calendar year of 1915, the Cole jumped to 5000 cars in 1916 and has made certain of a production of 10,000 cars for 1917—beginning the year with a growth of 200 per cent over the year just passed.

Studebaker

The Studebaker SIX
The Latest and Best Studebaker Automobile

STUDEBAKER has spent four years in perfecting a single basic automobile design.

Each year Studebaker has produced a better car.

The Series 17 Studebakers offered such remarkable values at their prices that the entire output was sold early last August.

The Series 18 is still better.

They embody ninety distinct improvements of mechanical construction, convenience and comfort.

In ratio of power to weight they are probably the most powerful cars on the market.

In ratio of power to gasoline consumption the most economical.

Their balance is refined to such a point that a single set of tires frequently runs from 8000 to 12000 miles.

Their lines are distinctive.

Their paint and varnish work excellent.

Genuine leather is used for all upholstery—leather not only genuine, but high grade genuine leather.

Their seats are formfitting, deep, comfortable, luxurious.

See the Studebaker SIX, examine it thoroughly, see how carefully every detail is finished—even the tonneau carpet is bound with leather.

Ride in the Studebaker SIX, sense its ease, its roadability.

Then you will realize why at $1250 it is the greatest "buy" on the automobile market today.

MARMON CLIPS A RECORD

"From Baltimore to Pittsburg in high gear in 7 hours and 15 minutes' actual running time is the record of a Marmon 34," declared Walter Scott, Marmon dealer in Baltimore, according to a story for automobilists printed recently in the Baltimore American. Jacob R. Pfeiffer of Baltimore, a Marmon owner, and Mr. Scott started to Pittsburg together for a business trip, and without any intention of breaking a record, Mr. Scott said, but he made a record of 240 miles, and proved that he got better than 13 miles for every gallon of gasoline. Mr. Scott and Mr. Pfeiffer drove by way of Hagerstown, through Mercersburg and McConnellsburg, where the roads are by no means so good as they might be, and where there are some pretty steep hills.

SAYS MISREPRESENTED

The Jackson Automobile Co. of Jackson, Mich., is in receipt of a complaint from the Zenith Carburetor Co. of Detroit, to the effect that the Jackson company, in its advertising, is not doing justice to the fuel economy of the Jackson "Wolverine Eight," which uses the Zenith double-jet carburetor.

The Jackson company has been advertising the "Wolverine Eight" model, upon which it is concentrating, as delivering 17.7 miles to the gallon of gasoline, but the Zenith Carburetor Co. contended that the mileage should be 19.9 to the gallon, and desired the Jackson company to use that figure in its advertising.

The Zenith company's engineers forwarded carefully kept records of 12 Jackson cars, which in everyday service had given better than 19 miles to the gallon, averaging 19.9 miles. The Jackson is locally handled by the Mound City Buggy and Auto Co.

UP HILL WITH BRAKE ON

Mr. Williams of the Knight Motor Co., known as the "man in the green hat," reports a record on hill climbing with the Empire model 70 Friday morning, April 6, in Forest Park, on Nigger Hill, a hill that is well known to all motor drivers as a very steep grade, and few cars have been known to make this grade alone in high speed.

Mr. Williams, instructing Mrs. McLundie in driving her new Empire 70 in Forest Park, Friday morning, Mrs. McLundie's third lesson, then turned the car over to her on Nigger Hill. She forgot to release her emergency brake, but the car, in high speed, nicely climbed the hill without a knock and the emergency brake partly locked.

SALESMEN VISIT PLANT

A large party of United States truck tire salesmen recently paid a two-day visit to the United States Truck Tire factory at Providence, R. I., for the purpose of studying the process of manufacture of the tires they sell.

Mr. Welch, manager of the truck tire department, headed the party which was received by Manager Waite and his officials from the factory. A thorough tour of inspection was carried out under the able direction of Mr Waite, and the keenest interest was displayed by the salesmen in the highly scientific steps taken in the making of United States truck tires.

FOREIGNERS LIKE IT

The new construction by which weight is reduced and efficiency, ease of riding and handling increased, has been a prime factor in attracting former buyers of foreign cars to American-made cars, according to F. E. Moskovics, commercial manager of the Nordyke & Marmon Co. Furthermore, Mr. Moskovics says that rapid acceleration and good riding qualities at high speed have made [illegible] favorable impressions on these critical buyers.

Three Great Triumphs

VESTA

STORAGE BATTERY

Vitality

There are reasons for Vesta's vitality—three great specific reasons and one big general reason.

Vesta Indestructible Isolator, Vesta Impregnated Wooden Mats and Vesta Titanium are the three specific reasons for Vesta's Vitality.

Vesta Indestructible Isolator locks the plates apart and prevents short circuits—Vesta Impregnated Wooden Mats absolutely prevent "treeing" and its costly consequences—Vesta Titanium hardens the lead plates, giving them longer life, and precipitates all minerals and impurities in solution, thus giving marvelous efficiency.

These three remarkable features actually do give Vesta double life. They are exclusive and patented. No other battery can use them.

The big general reason for Vesta's Vitality lies in these three specific reasons combined with the all-'round excellence of Vesta construction.

Yet Vesta, with its double life, costs no more. Investigate the Vesta.

Buying automobiles is very like buying investment securities.

You consider
—the relation of price to value,
—the security or integrity of value,
—the return.

When you consider the relation of price to value the Overland Big Fours and Light Sixes conspicuously stand out as more automobile for the money than can be had in any other cars of similar specifications.

This is as it should be, for no other similar cars are produced in quantities and under conditions so favorable to economies of administration, manufacture and distribution.

As to security—The Willys-Overland Company,—firmly intrenched,—with more than sixty-eight million of assets,—with more than four thousand successful dealers and branches, is squarely back of the integrity of value in these cars throughout the whole period of their use in your service.

As to return—the return these cars give you in service. Their economy of operation and rugged reliability are established by over three hundred thousand in use. These cars, improved and refined, continue the perennially successful 35 horsepower Overland which for years has outsold all cars of similar specifications.

Value! Security!! Return!!!

Until May 1st, Big Fours $850, Light Sixes $985, while we have them to deliver—thereafter $895 and $1025.

FOR RUN-DOWN PEOPLE

The condition of being "run-down" is one that doctors do not recognize as a disease; the physician of today who gets his training in a hospital where severe disorders only are encountered knows little about it. But those who are run-down in health know that it is not a fancied affliction.

The expression "run-down" comes from the feeble action of an unwound clock, and the comparison is a good one. Applied to health it means a condition in which all the bodily functions are enfeebled. Appetite fails, the digestion is impaired, the nerves are impoverished, the complexion becomes pale, there is no animation but rather worry and mental depression. Fatigue is a constant symptom.

No particular organ being affected you must look for relief to the blood that circulates everywhere. Improvement in the blood is quickly felt throughout the entire system and Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People are the best and most convenient blood builders. As the blood becomes rich and red, the various organs regain their tone and the body recovers its vigor. If you have any or all of the above symptoms try the tonic treatment with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Fifty cents a box at your druggists.—ADV.

PRESIDENT'S WAR POLICY TO BE O K'D BY PROGRESSIVES

National Convention of Party Will Convene at the Planters Hotel Thursday.

800 DELEGATES EXPECTED

Object Is to Form Organization of Progressive Thinkers From All Parties.

The Progressive national convention, which will meet in St. Louis this week, will indorse President Wilson and Congress in declaring war on Germany, and probably also will pledge the services of its members to the Government in whatsoever capacity they may be needed.

The first session of the convention will be held at the Planters Hotel Thursday. Claude Muse, in charge of local arrangements for the convention, said yesterday that 800 delegates had been elected and that he expected a large attendance.

The primary object of the convention will be to organize progressinve thinking people into a party to hold the balance of political power in the United States.

Will Adopt Working Plan.

It is probable that the convention will go on record as favoring the support of President Wilson in his legislative program, pertaining to domestic affairs, since much of the legislation asked for by the Progressives in their 1912 platform has been enacted since Wilson has been President.

Permanent working plans for the future of the party also will be adopted, and a platform declaring for nearly, if not all, of the planks of the 1912 platform which have not been adopted by the Democratic Congress, will be reaffirmed.

Matthew Hale, acting national chairman of the party, in the call for the convention, stated that practical steps should be taken to unify the liberal elements of the country, uniting them into a dominant power for good, whereas they are at present but elements of protest.

Party Leaders to Attend.

Many leaders of the Progressive party, as it was reorganized last fall after Roosevelt's desertion, will attend the convention. Chairman Hale of Boston, and Secretary Frederick H. Chase will arrive in advance of the delegates to go over the plans for the convention.

President Wilson was invited to attend the convention and deliver an address. Bainbridge Colby of New York, Victor Murdock of Kansas, former chairman of the Progressive National Committee, and John M. Parker of Louisiana, who was the candidate for Vice President last fall, are all expected to attend.

The Socialist convention, which is now in session, will not finish its program of work before the Progressives meet. On Thursday, Friday and Saturday the two national conventions both will be in session on the same floor of the Planters Hotel. The Socialists opened their convention in the main dining room of the parlor floor, and will occupy that room until Thursday, when they will turn it over to the Progressives. The Socialist convention then will move into a smaller dining room at the north end of the hall.

The Progressive Plan.

In detail the plan of the Progressives for unifying serious-minded men of all parties is:

To bring the radical or liberal elements of all parties together immediately after the Progressive convention and thus put forward the suggestion of a League of Liberals, corresponding to a national committee, with subsidiary leagues in each state, corresponding to state committees. Each party entering into the league will have representation upon these committees.

A set of principles upon which all can agree will be adopted by the League of Liberals as its platform. A preliminary resolutions committee has been in session in New York several days working on a platform. The result of the committee's work will be submitted to the convention.

CELEBRATES 101ST BIRTHDAY BY DANCING JIG IN A STORE

Badger State Advises Gaping Spectators to Abstain from Worry, Tobacco and Liquor.

VIROQUA, Wis., April 7.—Thomas Edwards, living on a farm near Viola, celebrated his 101st birthday by dancing a jig on the floor of one of the leading stores here.

"Never worry about anything and you will live to be 100 years old," was his advice to the gaping villagers who viewed the performance of the centenarian, who is hale and hearty.

Besides abstinence from worry, "Uncle Tommy," as he is better known, advises giving tobacco and liquor the cold shoulder. He says he has never made their acquaintance.

Edwards is a cousin of Gen. Tipton of Civil War fame and took part in the battles of Williamsburg, Gettysburg, Fredericksburg, Rappahannock, Williamsport, Flint Hill, Chain Bridge and the seven days' conflict before Richmond. He retains in his mind vivid details of all the battles and relates many interesting stories of his experiences.

"Uncle Tommy" lives on a farm with a brother, Joe Edwards. The parents of the old men attained the age of 92 years, but "Uncle Tommy" believes he has shattered the ancestral record for longevity.

Munition Workers Mostly Women.

LONDON, April 7.—New contracts being let by the Government for munitions provide that 80 per cent of the operatives must be women. This is done with a view to keeping down to a minimum the number of men employed in munitions factories.

Church of Ascension Services.

At the Episcopal Church of the Ascension the rector, the Rev. John S. Bunting, will preach this morning on "The Greatness of Life in the Light of the Resurrection." Two members of the choir will be J. Henry Merker, tenor, who comes from Denver to sing at this service, and Dr. J. J. Kessler, basso. Fred F. Sale is baritone soloist. The anthems will include "Christ Is Risen," by Simper; "Christ Our Passover," by Tours; "Awake, Thou That Sleepest," by Stainer; and a tenor solo, "My Hope Is In the Everlasting," by Stainer.

But in our hearts
She lingers still.
For all of us she did her best,
May God grant her eternal rest.
Sadly missed by Ida, Charlie, Harry and grandchildren.

In Memoriam.

In sad but loving memory of our darling son and grandson, Robert G. Sack, who died April 8, 1916.

There was an angel band in heaven,
That was not quite complete,
So God took our own dear loved one
To fill the vacant seat.
Robert was our only darling,
Pride of all the hearts at home,
But the angels floating lightly,
Whispered softly, "Robert, come."
Sadly missed by his parents,
MR. AND MRS. GEORGE SACK, AND GRANDPARENTS, AUNTS AND UNCLES.

CANADA offers 160 acres free to farm hands. Bonus of Western Canada land to men assisting in maintaining needed grain production. The demand for farm labor in Canada is great. As an inducement to secure the necessary help at once, Canada will give 160 acres of land free as a homestead and allow the time the farm laborer, who has filled on the land to apply as residence duties, the same as if he actually had lived on it. Another special concession is the reduction of one year in the time to complete duties. Two years instead of three as heretofore, but only to men working on the farms for at least six months in 1917. This appeal for farm help is in no way connected with enlistment for military service, but solely to increase agricultural output. A wonderful opportunity to secure a farm and draw good wages at the same time. Canadian Government will pay all fare over 1 cent per mile from St. Paul and Duluth to Canadian destinations. Information as to low railway rates may be had on application to C. J. Broughton, 112 W. Adams st., Chicago, Ill., Canadian Government Agent.

LET YOUR FAMILY KNOW WHAT A GOOD FELLOW YOU REALLY ARE

Buy one of our used cars—take your family out in the country. Best way to spend Sunday. Certainly you can afford it. Terms that make buying an easy matter.

Cadillac, 1912, 4-cylinder, 5-passenger, in good shape. Exceptionally good engine. Runs like a top. Climbs hills like a jack rabbit. Tires first-class. A good buy at $500. Terms if desired; $450 takes it.

Why ride on the crowded street cars and hang on to a strap when you can get this Detroiter, 1914, with electric lights, good tires and good upholstery and an engine that's a bear to pull, for only $285?

Another bargain is this 1913, 4-cylinder 5-passenger Overland, with good tires, upholstery and Presto-Lite tank. Engine in first-class condition. Worth $350, but for Easter it is priced at $250.

This 1913 Reo is by far the best value at $350 we have been able to offer for some time past. Has had exceptionally good care and is well worth the money. Ask our Mr. Smith to show you this car.

If you are looking for a "peach" of a car to make over into a speedster, this American underslung will be exactly what you want. With electric lights, starter; tires are in good condition. Extra tire. Engine purrs like a new car engine. Come down this morning and let us demonstrate it for you. $400 takes it.

Brand-new Overland, 1917 model, only run 7 miles; tires not worn and hardly soiled. This is not a used car; 5-passenger; make us an offer.

Velie, 1914, 6-cylinder, 7-passenger. Thoroughly overhauled. All worn parts replaced and car repainted. In excellent shape. Here's a car you can put the whole family into, get out in the country and be sure of an enjoyable time. Terms can be arranged. Ask our Mr. Ward to demonstrate it. Easter special price is $575.

Don't let lack of ready money keep you from buying. Tell us what you can do. You will be surprised at our liberal terms.

The former cost you less, but in either case you get full value for your money.

The prices we are asking for the cars listed below are by no means consistent with their intrinsic worth. Come and see them—ride in them. Packard square deal policy protects you against paying more than the actual worth of the car.

USE CARS THAT ARE GUARANTEED

YOUR MONEY BACK IF NOT SATISFACTORY

If, like many people, you are inclined to believe that the purchase of a used car is a "risky" proposition, you are the very person whom we want to meet and talk to.

According to our plan, you select the used car which you desire to buy and drive it for seven consecutive days. If at the end of this time you are in any way dissatisfied, bring the car back in good condition and we'll refund you your money.

AND REMEMBER

We offer a rare opportunity to the person who can only afford to invest a few hundred dollars. COMMON SENSE will dictate the wisdom of buying a quality used car that has only been slightly used rather than a CHEAP new car fresh from the factory.

PAY AS YOU RIDE CASH OR TERMS IF DESIRED. BALANCE EASY. COME IN FOR DEMONSTRATION. SEE THESE BARGAINS

Old Tires Rebuilt Like New

Not Double-Treaded.

This new method of rebuilding tires must not be confused with the stitching or retreading system. We furnish a brand-new Miller non-skid top, which adds from 4 to 6 plies of fabric, making the tire almost puncture proof. This new method makes old tires look and wear like new, and at a great saving in tire expense. Bring or ship your old tires to us. Mail orders promptly attended to. We also do tire and tube vulcanizing.

Now Ready

STERLING

INCOMPARABLE SUBDIVISION

Woodriver is probably the fastest growing community in the nation. In 12 months its homes have doubled and its population has almost trebled. People are begging for places to live. Builders are selling their houses before they are done. Living rooms bring fancy rents.

Enormous New Industries

are now buying sites. Old industries are making additions that will add thousands of employes. The Standard Oil Co., whose present plant cost millions of dollars and works about 1800 men, has just bought 257 acres adjoining and is proceeding to spend more millions to double their capacity. Another big oil company has already bought several hundred acres at Woodriver, and still another oil company, as well as the U. S. Armor Plate Plant and other big plants are negotiating. Woodriver also has big steel mills, cartridge works, lead works, an enormous new tannery now building, and many other big industries.

A Live Town is the Place to Make Money

Woodriver is no transitory town, but a young city of substantial and unusually attractive bungalow and cottage homes. Its future is assured by the character of its industries.

Big Things Are Going on in Woodriver

In 12 months we have sold all of the 140 lots in Picker Park, all of the 570 lots in Harnett Terrace, and since October last we have sold over $50,000 worth of lots in our Altwood and South Woodriver tracts.

STERLING

is the little gem of all subdivisions. Its elevation, outlook, surroundings and strategic position with regard to the main thoroughfares, street cars, schools, industries, etc., put it in a class by itself. We are putting in concrete walks, oiled drives, etc. Restrictions cover the character of all buildings.

There are only 254 lots in Sterling. They will go very quickly. It will pay you to inspect them at once, for they will surely make you lots of money. Any of our last year's buyers can now sell at a good profit. Dozens of them have done so.

Woodriver subdivisions are grabbed up in a hurry, so don't think you can get in any time. The title is perfect. The terms are reasonable. Do not write, for we are too busy to reply to requests for information, but if you wish to make money, and have got money to buy with, come. Take the Alton electric at Eads Bridge any hour.

Beautiful "Homey" Homes

It takes more than sticks and stones to make a home. The well built, artistically designed house is not more a part of a perfect home than is the velvet of the lawn, the protecting shade of large trees, or the neighbors, who, like yourself, are interested in beautiful "homey" homes.

Uplands Subdivision

One Block West of Kirkwood-Ferguson Cars on the Natural Bridge Road

is the place of perfect homes. Ten houses have been built. No two from the same plan. Six of them have already been purchased by homemakers.

Streets and sidewalks are completed throughout the subdivision. Electric, gas and water connections are made.

All lots, both those upon which houses are built and those which are vacant, are on high, slightly rolling ground. None have frontage of less than 50 feet, which, together with the deep building lines and other rigidly enforced restrictions, insures roomy grounds and pleasant surroundings for each dwelling.

Summed up, the Uplands Subdivision provides well-built, artistic homes in a highly restricted, yet easily accessible, neighborhood, just three or four blocks outside the city limits, at a medium price.

Hi-Pointe

THE HIGHEST POINT IN ST. LOUIS

Skinker Road and Clayton Road

THIS splendid new residence tract presents at one and the same time an opportunity to own a fine home in an exclusive neighborhood, or a rare chance for quickly turning a profit on the purchase of the ground alone.

So High that the City Lies Before It as a Panorama

From its extraordinary elevation you can look down from Hi-Pointe on the adjoining subdivisions and see beautiful and well-kept homes where lots are commanding all the way from $60 and $70 to $100 the front foot.

Yet not one of these proud vicinities compares in clean air, natural drainage and accessibility to Hi-Pointe. Our selling price covers all improvements—made and curbed streets, granitoid sidewalks with shade trees, water, gas, electricity and sewers. No extras or assessments for something forgotten; even the landscaping and total beautifying by Henry Wright are included—and you know how wonderful he made Brentmoor.

The Cheapest First-Class Proposition in St. Louis Today

This is the price per front foot for Hi-Pointe lots, all of which are 40 feet or more by an average depth of 150 feet. Plenty of room for the right sort of a house, a garage and a garden.

But think of the price! This property was purchased at the bottom—a sacrifice figure. You get the advantage of the foresight of men keen in the knowledge of real estate values, who were prompt to act when the time came—hence the rediculously low price of $40. It is now your time for action—a time when you can buy on a rising prospect, a condition that cannot be duplicated, probably ever. You cannot lose—the ground is here; it cannot reduce in value; on the contrary, prices are bound to soar. No stocks or bonds offer such profound security, and no real estate in this city furnishes an equal opportunity for such sure and certain profit.

A New Car Line Through Hi-Pointe

The Hamilton avenue line will cross the property within six months, and as it will cost the railway company thousands of dollars to make this extension you can positively rely upon Hi-Pointe being worth while or the new rails would never be laid. This extension and the Market street line make two fast means for reaching downtown.

Come out today and pick up one of the choice lots—don't wait until the best lots have been taken—get in on the ground floor—it's your big chance to turn a fine profit. Take Market street car direct, or Olive University car to Skinker road, and automobiles will convey you to wonderful Hi-Pointe.

For land and buildings; the first installment is payable on Dec. 1. Crops are always good under irrigation. The example of large numbers of successful farmer neighbors proves conclusively that soil, climate, water supply, transportation facilities and conditions in general are eminently good for the raising and marketing of large variety of money-making crops. AT YOUR DOOR

The most wonderful land in all the world lies at the very threshold of St. Louis, in the Little River Drainage District; the unimproved land in the district, worth from $200 to $400, can be bought today for $50 to $70 for the most perfect soils; well located, with some really good soil going as low as $40 and $45; I have secured options on cut-over unimproved lands, totaling nearly 10,000 acres, that I can sell at from $45 to $55; two-thirds cash, balance 6 per cent; these offerings present opportunities that can never repeat themselves. Box A-2, P.-D. (c99)

YOUR LAST CHANCE

I believe unimproved land in the Little River Drainage District, now selling from $40 to $75, will not be obtainable below $125 before the close of 1918. I and my correspondents have listed over 20,000 acres of cut-over unimproved land, which we will sell at $45 to $60. Some of this land is as fine as there is in the entire district, and is today well worth double what we are selling it for; terms, one-fourth to one-half cash, balance suit. Box A-13, Post-Dispatch. Extraordinary Heroism of French Peasant Girl

AN OFFICIAL WAR STORY THAT OUTDOES FICTION

Marcelle Semmer twice faced German firing squads and was miraculously saved from death—Rescued many wounded soldiers and has been honored by France with two of its most distinguished decorations

By LINCOLN EYRE.

IN a girl of 20, an orphan of simplest peasant stock, France has found her Edith Cavell. More fortunate than her ally, the republic can strain to her heart the living form of her most glorious daughter, upon whose bosom she has already pinned the cross of the Legion of Honor and the Cross of War—a combination no woman has ever before been privileged to wear.

For, although on two separate occasions she stood blindfolded facing a German firing squad, the heroine, whose name will blaze in history beside that of the martyred English woman, has lived to hear her country's plaudits and to receive the recognition that is her due. It came tardily enough, too, that recognition, for it was only a few weeks ago that a Cabinet Minister, speaking in the amphitheater of the Sorbonne, revealed to the French people the name and deeds of Marcelle Semmer.

Had not the first insight into the girl's amazing exploits come from so exalted a source, the story of her heroism would doubtless have been set down as one of the myths of the war. The author of the most harrowing of melodramas or the most sensational of "movies" would never have dared to inject such palpably "impossible" incidents into his plot. Nor would he have ventured to put into the mouth of his leading woman so unpretentious a "line" as the words with which Marcelle faced a German courtmartial—words that are already immortal in France:

"Do with me what you will. I am an orphan. I have only one mother—France—and it doesn't disturb me to die."

Marcelle Semmer was the child of a French-Alsatian father and a Picard mother, both of whom died when she was in her infancy. At the beginning of the war she was living with relatives in the village of Eclusier, on the Somme River, in Picardy, one of the points from which the great Anglo-French offensive was launched last July.

Her acquaintance with war began in the early weeks of the 1914 campaign. Retreating across the Somme, with the Germans at their heels, the French neglected to destroy a drawbridge spanning the lock at Eclusier. Marcelle, then a lass of 17, had never heard of tactics or strategy; plain common sense, the heritage of her peasant blood, told her, however, that the Germans must be prevented from using that bridge. Having no dynamite to destroy the structure, she did the next best thing, which was to open wide the draw and throw away the key, so that it could not be closed again.

This she carried out under a brisk fusillade from the approaching German infantry, whose advance guard, seeing what she had done, directed their fire as much at her as at the retiring French soldiers. They went further. They shot to death, at the other side of the canal, two Frenchmen, and yelled across to her that she would meet the same fate as soon as they reached Eclusier. She ran off unscathed, however, and with a dozen women, children and old men hid in the cellar of a farmhouse. For a fortnight they remained in their precarious shelter, but Marcelle nightly risked capture by sallying forth to get food for her companions and herself. On these excursions she would come across French soldiers, lost or wounded, and in momentary danger of falling into the enemy's hands. She would find civilian clothes for them and guide them across country until they were out of the German lines and able to rejoin their regiments. What she did all alone at Eclusier, with German troops on every side, was what Nurse Cavell did with the aid of others in the comparative freedom of Brussels.

But there was one of her soldier countrymen who was too badly wounded to make his escape. Every night Marcelle would creep out to the haystack in which he lay hidden and bring him food and water, and do what she could to make him comfortable. A German patrol found her there and dragged her before their Colonel. By drumhead courtmartial she was sentenced to death. They asked her whether she had assisted other French soldiers to escape.

"Certainly," she replied, with the directness of Jeanne d'Arc herself; I succeeded in getting 16 out of your reach."

It was in reply to a question as to whether she had any last request to make that, shaking her head, she exclaimed:

"Do with me what you will. I am an orphan. I have only one mother—France—and it doesn't disturb me to die."

Immediately she was placed with her hands bound and her eyes bandaged against a stone wall. A squad of 24 men leveled their rifles at her. Then, "as if it had fallen from heaven," as Marcele herself puts it, a French shell exploded right in the midst of the sinister firing party. Several were killed instantly and the rest fled. The first shell was the forerunner of a terrific bombardment, which drove the Germans back out of Eclusier and brought the French into the village again. They found Marcelle, still blindfolded and handcuffed, lying against the wall. Shells had burst all about her, but she was untouched.

Her frightful experiences failed to dismay her, for she immediately offered her services as a guide to the French scouts. She was piloting a reconnoissance patrol a few nights later when, the moon having suddenly come out from under a cloud, she was seen by the German outpost at Frise—another Somme village, since become famous— and made prisoner. The officer before whom she was led was the same who had condemned her to death in Eclusier.

"You escaped by a miracle last time," he informed her. "This time there won't be any miracle."

But the miracle repeated itself—and not once, but twice. First the moon, by the light of which the firing squad was aiming its rifles at the girl, was suddenly obscured by the clouds, which prevented the Germans from seeing their target, and forced them to postpone the execution till dawn. Then a French projectile from the celebrated "75" gun—"It's the Soixante-quinze that was twice my savior," Marcelle tells friends—pierced a hole in the solid stone of the church in which the Germans had incarcerated her, and passed on without exploding. That it didn't burst was miraculous in itself. Had it done so Marcelle would certainly have been killed. As it was, she was able to crawl through the hole it made and regain the French lines.

Still the young heroine's nerves remained unshaken. Besides herself, there was only one civilian left in that part of the country, a paralyzed woman more than 90 years old. Marcelle devoted her attention to caring for this bedridden invalid and to doing what she could for the soldiers. She was almost constantly under shell fire, for Eclusier was within half a mile of the front trenches until the advance on the Somme began on July 1. Once she was wounded by shrapnel. The General commanding in Eclusier sector summoned the girl before him.

"Marcelle," he said, "you are the best soldier I've got. You have the Legion d'Honneur and the Croix de Guerre, which no one of your sex and very few of mine have won. Therefore, when I order you to leave here and report for duty as a nurse at the Salpetriere Hospital in Paris, I feel sure you will understand—and carry out my orders."

Marcelle obeyed.

THE BIG MAN PRODUCED BY THE REVOLUTION IN RUSSIA

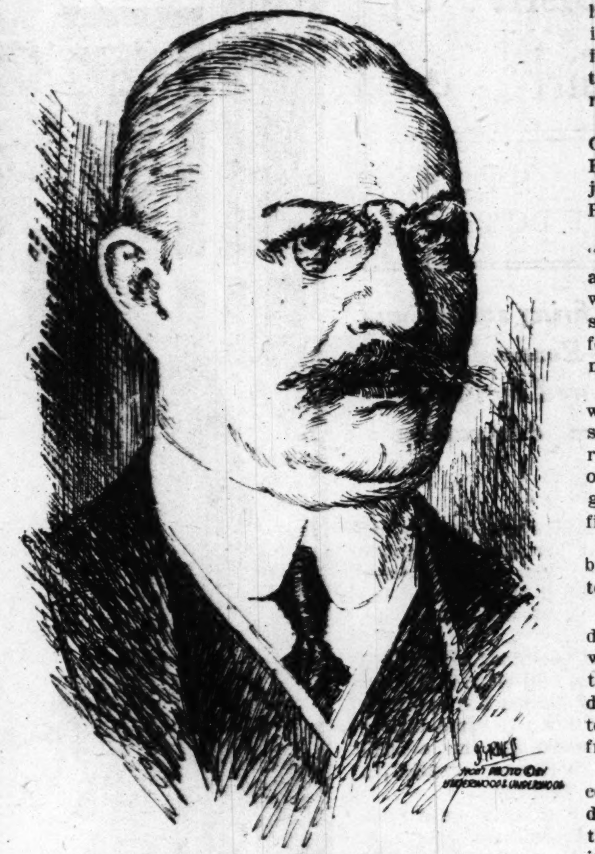
Paul N. Miliukoff, Foreign Minister under the new regime, is leader of the Constitutional Democratic party, the principles and policies of which triumphed in the revolt against the Romanoffs—He is one of the few men of academic training who, like President Wilson, has made good in practical politics—His life in the United States

WHEN Prof. Paul N. Miliukoff came to the United States from Russia, in 1908, to deliver an address before the Civic Forum in New York, he also accepted an invitation to a dinner in Washington, arranged by Herbert Parson, then in Congress. Three members of President Roosevelt's Cabinet attended this dinner—Taft, Garfield and Straus. Present also were Robert Bacon, then Assistant Secretary of State; William Loeb Jr., then the President's secretary; Speaker Cannon, Sereno E. Payne and more than a hundred Senators and Representatives.

President Roosevelt, however, could not attend the dinner, although it was reported that he was thoroughly in sympathy with Miliukoff's cause in Russia and an admirer of the man himself. The reason was that the Russian embassy, in the polite and bland manner of diplomatic intercourse, sent word to the White House that Miliukoff was persona non grata with the representatives of the Czar in this country.

The occurrence is narrated to show that autocratic Russia has feared this man for a long time. Recent events have shown that they had good cause, for Miliukoff is now Russia's man of the hour. Like the American Revolution brought forth Washington and Jefferson, the French Revolution Maribeau and Napoleon and the English revolt against autocracy Cromwell, the overthrow of the Romanoffs has produced Miliukoff.

Just what position in Russian history Miliukoff is to occupy is not known now. Russia herself does not know what form her Government is to take. Important as this is, she has other problems of greater moment, chief of which is the successful prosecution of the war, for it was rumors of the Government's plans to sue for a separate peace which hastened the revolution. But this much is known: the revolution was a triumph for the principles and policies of the Constitutional Democratic party in Russia, and Miliukoff is the brains of that party. Just now he is Russia's Minister of Foreign Affairs, and his appointment to that post is regarded as a happy one.



PAUL N. MILIUKOFF.

Who is Miliukoff? was the question asked by the people at large in this country when the news dispatches from Russia began carrying his name. He is in no biographical book of reference and only in the latest encyclopedia issued. It was difficult to find anyone in the United States who could furnish the details of his work, although it was known in a general way to his compatriots over here. It is only within the last few weeks that the steps in the progress of his career have become known.

To begin, Miliukoff is primarily an academician. He is one of the few men of academic training who have become successful in practical politics. In this respect he has been likened to President Wilson. Like the President, he deliberates before acting, he is averse to headstrong or extreme courses, yet he never fails to pursue determined policies with dogged persistence.

Born near Petrograd, in 1866, Miliukoff was educated in Moscow, specializing in constitutional history and law. From 1886 to 1895 he was a tutor in history in the University of Moscow. Here he first fell afoul of the Government, for he was banished for uttering "subversive" literature.

He went to Bulgaria, where he held a professorship of history in the University of Sofia through 1898. He had considerable time for writing and study and he investigated the principles of government in England and America, with plans for Russia in his mind.

Upon his return to Russia he became editor of the Free Nation, a Constitutionalist journal. It was suppressed by the Government and Miliukoff was jailed. He embraced this opportunity to learn the English language, and it is related of him that he mastered the book end of the subject with astonishing ease, but found that although able to read and write English he was unable to speak it. Accordingly, he arranged with the authorities that he should pass the latter months of his exile in England. It is said that at this time the case of Miliukoff was brought to the attention of Pobiedonosteff, Procurator of the Holy Synod, who regarded Miliukoff as a promising but harmless young man, who might some day be useful to the Government and that Pobiedonosteff obtained Miliukoff's release. It is further reported that Miliukoff rewarded this by writing a number of vigorous articles for Popular Rights, another Constitutionalist paper, and then left Russia in a hurry.

At any rate, he came to the United States and for four years was a lecturer at the University of Chicago. He had considerable leisure for traveling through the United States and England and also devoted this period to writing a number of books in aid of the Constitutionalist cause.

On his next return to Russia, Miliukoff became editor of the Retch, published in Petrograd, and to his work on this paper he probably owes much of his present prominence. The paper's readers were those of the intellectual element, the professional class and the more enlightened nobles. It had too great an influence to be suppressed and the Government had to be content with listing Miliukoff as a menace.

The massacres of "Red Sunday" in Petrograd, in 1905, found Miliukoff in the United States. He hastened back to Russia and was promptly imprisoned on general principles. Upon his release he took active part in the organization of the Union of Unions and went into his propaganda work with redoubled vigor.

After this revolution the Czar and his supporters saw that their only hope lay in conciliation. Thus was organized the impotent First Duma. Because of his balance and moderation, Miliukoff was virtually drafted into this Duma by the reactionaries. He and other leaders had formed the Constitutional Democratic party, which was permitted a large representation in the assemblage. The Premier, Count Witte, offered Miliukoff a portfolio in the Government, but he declined it upon the Government's refusal to stipulate its policy before the world.

For what do the Constitutional Democrats stand? The party constitutes the great middle ground between the reactionaries, the supporters of the autocracy, and the "reds," the bomb throwers. The reactionaries, now overthrown, were for absolutism, with a "Little Father" at its head; a benevolent landed nobility, a bureaucracy and a humble, contented peasantry, in a state of serfdom, nominal or virtual. The radicals were for nihilism, or for an abrupt plunge into a more or less inchoate Socialism, with the great landholders expropriated by force and the lands distributed among the people. But the Constitutional Democrats, or Cadets (so-called from the initials of the party name), have stood consistently for a consitutional monarchy, with the populace genuinely represented in the Government. That is the reason why Miliukoff and his compatriots have labored from the first to keep public opinion in support of the Duma, as its very existence was ground gained, despite the fact that the first was a sham and the others little more.

The Cadets' four great objects have been: Constitutional Government according to the English plan; practicable land reform, with justice to all concerned; the autonomy of Poland; the freedom of the Jews.

As Miliukoff stated it in his lecture:

"The revolutionary (radical) movement aimed at a commonwealth, while the reactionaries wanted to re-establish autocracy. The Constitutional Democratic party decided to fight for a parliamentary rule under a constitutional monarch.

"The revolutionists wished to have a charter worked out by a constitutional convention and sanctioned by a victorious revolution. The reactionaries did not want any charter at all, or at the worst a consultive representation granted by the Czar. (This was what the first Duma amounted to.)

"Our party proposed a charter worked out by the first representative assembly, subject to the approval of the Czar.

"As to agrarian reform, the revolutionists defended the principle, the whole land to the whole people, the land to be appropriated by the people themselves, acting through their delegates to local communities, which were to be elected on the basis of universal suffrage.

"The Government would permit nothing except a regular sale of land through the medium of the existing Peasant Bank, and at the open market price. (That is, any farming peasant who could scrape together money enough to pay what the great proprietors asked was graciously permitted to become a freeholder. The number of peasants able to do it would, of course, have been insignificantly small.)

"Our party proposed a systematic extension of the emancipation reform of 1861, by dealing out additional allotments from the free (crown) lands, and from the larger private estates, to be expropriated by means of a compulsory sale at a fair price. The price was to be settled by special committees formed of private land owners and representatives of the peasant communes in equal numbers."

The Cadets encountered enormous obstacles. On the one hand they were fought openly by the Government, which, however, was disposed to treat with them after the revolution of 1905. All the time secret agents of the reactionaries were attempting to discredit Miliukoff and his associates or to remove them. An attempt on the life of Miliukoff was reported within the last few months.

On the other hand, the radicals despised the Cadets as trimmers. The big problem of the Cadets was to popularize their creed and to arouse confidence in the Duma in order to get a working majority. Miliukoff, an effective orator and a prolific and vigorous writer, did much of this single-handed. An idea of the task is told by Miliukoff himself:

"Even in the Duma the Cadets did not always command a majority. There was another important group in the Duma, the so-called Group of Toil, which became very popular among the peasants owing to its revolutionary program of land nationalization. The activity of this group in the Duma and outside it rekindled revolutionary hopes for the attainment of full power.

"The revolutionists now completely changed their minds as to the part to be played by the Duma in the Russian revolution. After having discredited the Duma as bourgeoise and quite powerless, they now wanted it to take possession of the executive power. The Cadets found themselves in an exceedingly difficult position.

"On the one hand, they had to fight for a responsible Ministry in order to establish a normal influence on the part of the Duma over executive power. On the other hand, they had to hold in check every attempt to appropriate the executive functions by the Duma itself.

"Of course, this was enough to paralyze any great measure of exertion. But the chief reasons for the Government to abstain from any co-operation with the Cadets was the agrarian program, which frightened the nobility. Here again the Cadets had to debate between the Government, which did not wish to decide for the principle of compulsory sale, and the extremists, who proposed the pure spoliation of the landlords to the great satisfaction of the inexperienced masses.

"Finally the Government committed itself to the unconstitutional step of publishing an announcement to the people by which the legislative plans of the Duma were repudiated in advance. The Duma tried to reply, insisting on the fundamental principle of compulsory sale and inviting the population—this latter point being opposed by the Group of Toil—to remain quiet and await patiently the results of the Duma's legislation.

"Upon this attempt to address the population the Duma was dissolved and the address never published. The leading majority replied by the Viborg Manifesto, proclaiming the principle of passive resistance."

Miliukoff is credited with having framed the Viborg Manifesto. The document, signed in Viborg, Finland, by 200 members of the dissolved Duma, appealed to the nation to defend its rights by passive resistance to the Government by refusing to pay taxes and to serve in the army, rather than by attempting to carry on the struggle against the reactionaries until the Czar should be overthrown. But Miliukoff and his associates finally considered that the moment was not even ripe for passive resistance and the manifesto never was brought into execution. To a questioner in his American lecture Miliukoff explained:

"We considered, and I think it was a fact that the Duma had been

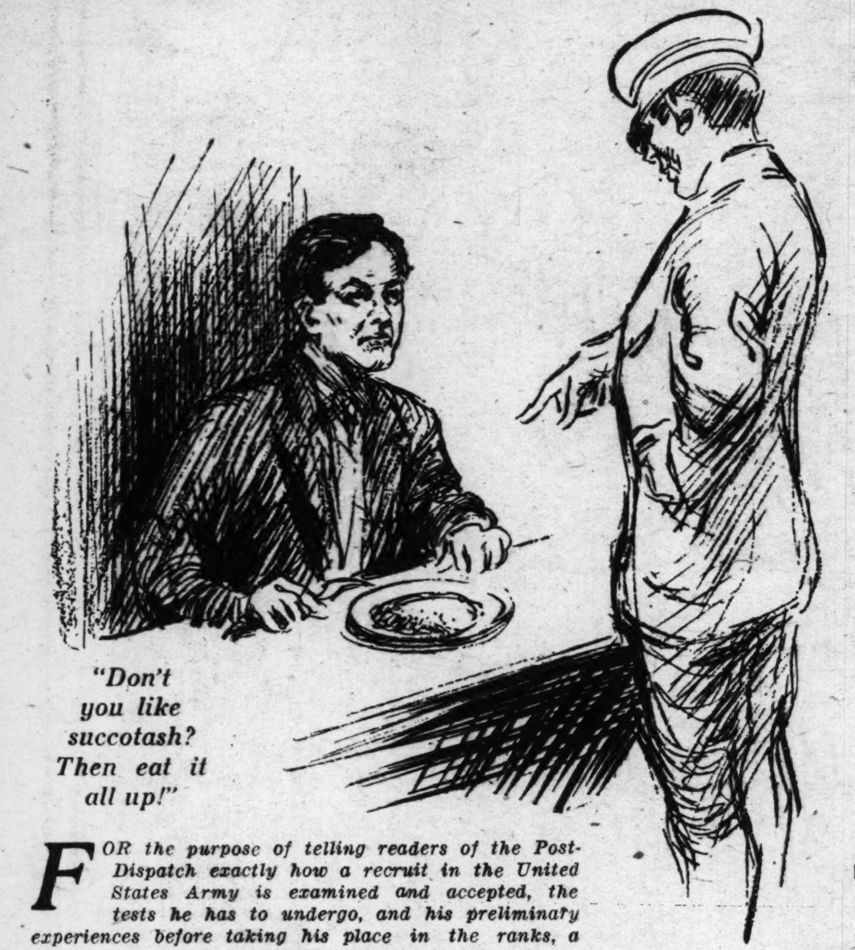
WHAT A RECRUIT GOES THROUGH TO BECOME A ROOKIE

Step by step experiences of a Post-Dispatch reporter who joined the regular army up to the point of taking the oath of allegiance — Routine at Jefferson Barracks and interesting sidelights on the day's duties from reveille to taps



"Don't you like succotash? Then eat it all up!"

FOR the purpose of telling readers of the Post-Dispatch exactly how a recruit in the United States Army is examined and accepted, the tests he has to undergo, and his preliminary experiences before taking his place in the ranks, a staff writer of the Sunday Magazine was given permission to make application for admission. None of the recruiting officers, or the instructors to whom he was turned over, knew the writer's real identity and purpose. He was simply one of a squad of civilians about to begin military life. His account follows:

BY arrangement with Maj. George W. Goode, recruiting officer of the United States Army Recruiting Station at 222 North Third street, I was permitted to enlist in the army for the purpose of writing an article on the first days of a recruit's life, on condition, however, that I confine the article to this one phase of the service. He also cautioned me to exercise particular care in avoiding the oath of allegiance, which is administered on the second day and makes a soldier of the civilian, unless I desired to remain in the army.

Unless you stop at the oath," he warned, "you may not get back to write your story."

A few hours later I returned to the recruiting office and presented myself for enlistment. Five soldiers, who had not been informed of the arrangement or my purpose, sat at desks in the large office adjoining that of Maj. Goode. One advanced and greeted me cordially. Informed that I desired to enter the army, he requested another soldier, seated before a typewriter, to take "the gentleman's application."

He took my name, address, age, place of birth and vocation, which he transcribed with much satisfaction, but with some difficulty, on the machine.

"What branch of the service do you wish to enter?" he inquired.

"Private soldier," I answered.

"You ought to enter the signal corps," he replied. "It's mounted."

I had told him I was a telegraph operator.

"The signal corps is attached to the air service," he added, alluringly, "and everybody wants to get in the air service."

Thoughts of dizzy heights and the thrilling stunts above the clouds "somewhere in France" flitted vividly before my mind.

"All right," I agreed, "the signal corps will do."

"You'll like it," he assured. "It pays up to $75 a month."

I was required to sign the application and was told to take a few hours in which to arrange my affairs and return at 4 o'clock for first physical examination.

The foregoing proceeding required only a few minutes.

At 4 o'clock I reappeared at the station and was conducted into a room farther down the hall, where nude applicants were being put through the paces of the physical examination. I soon joined them. Maj. Goode sat at a table making the record, a Sergeant conducted the examination, directing the aspirants by example. A simple vision test was made, after which we were weighed and measured. The Sergeant's commands were clear and compelling.

"Bend forward, legs rigid; try to touch the floor with finger tips! Extend right leg forward, resting on left foot, and work the other foot at ankle from side to side! Now, up and down! Same action with other foot! Stand erect, legs together, bend forward, touching knees to floor, and spring up quickly! Stand erect, arms extended forward! Work hands from side to side and up and down at wrists! Stand erect! Hop across room on one foot and back on the other!"

During these and a few more simple movements, the Sergeant watched each man critically and called out to Maj. Goode any defects he noted, such as "Slight varicose vein in lower left leg; deformed small toe on left foot; enlarged joint of great toe on right foot," not the slightest defect escaping him.

This concluded the first examination, and a period of an hour ensued while our papers were being made out by the Sergeant and countersigned by Maj. Goode. In the interim the applicants lounged in an anteroom and dropped into discussion of their reasons for quitting civil life. Five young men, all in their 'teens, had previously been examined and were waiting to be sent to Jefferson Barracks.

"Well," remarked a lad from Poplar Bluff, "I joined the army because I don't like the navy, where you have to be a good swimmer. I can't swim."

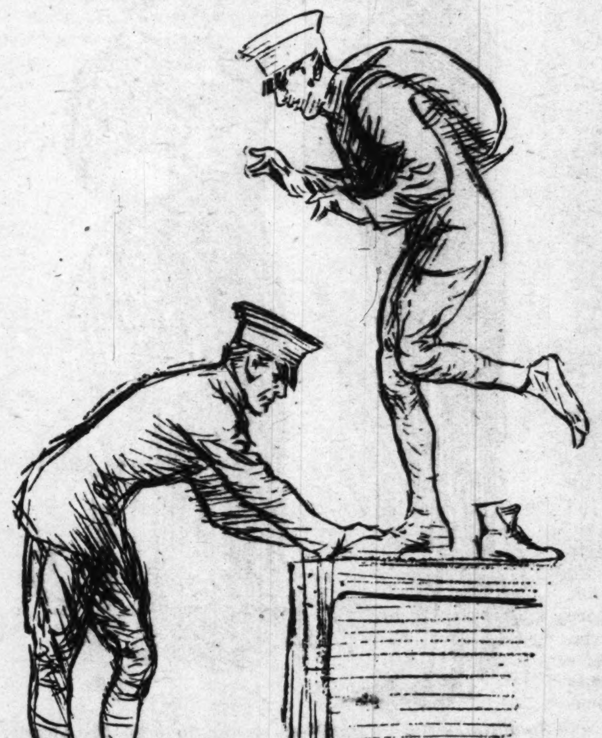
"The minute I saw you I knew you were from a dry town," was the good-natured quip from a young St. Louisan.

"Now, friend, there's where you're wrong," the one from Poplar Bluff retorted. "The Bluff ain't dry by a long jump, and she's wide awake all the time—a shootin' scrape every day or two."

"With things so warm down there, it seems strange tnat you would want to join the army," persisted the St. Louisan.

"Well, it's this way," the lad explained: "I just got tired of all this hot air about Germany, and I thought it was about time I was a-doin' my share."

We agreed to keep his enlistment secret, so that it could be sprung as a surprise on the Kaiser.



Shoes fitted while bearing a 40-pound sack, the weight of a soldier's equipment.

After more conversation in this vein, the Sergeant called each to take examples of our handwriting. We were required to write: "In case of fire or disorder, give the alarm." Our papers were then sealed in envelopes addressed to the commanding office at the barracks, and we returned to the waiting room. At 5 o'clock the Sergant appeared at the door and announced that he would take us to supper and then to the barracks.

"'Taint so bad after all," drawled a tall lad from the country. "Takin' us to supper before we're in is better'n I expected."

All agreed with this sentiment.

After partaking of a 35-cent lunch at a restaurant, we boarded a street car for the barracks. In less than an hour we arrived there and marched straight to the receiving barracks.

We were received by a Sergeant, who made a record of our clothes and other possessions. Then he gave a brief lecture on care of quarters and general conduct and informed us of the next steps we were to take. When he had finished we were each given a towel and made to take a shower bath in the basement. After the bath we returned to the receiving room, where two barbers administered haircuts and shaves. Then each received two blankets and a pillow and were shown our bunks, in a farther room on the same floor.

It was nearing 9 o'clock, when all lights were turned out, and we retired. The bunks in this room are double-deck affairs, made of iron, with a soft mattress and were scrupulously clean. The refreshing bath and cool air from open windows soon induced sleep.

At 5:45 next morning we were roused by a clanging gong. All turned out, received a towel and went to the washroom in the basement. After the toilet, we lined up in front of the barracks, fully a hundred, and marched to breakfast in the messroom, a block distant. We presented a motley, straggling appearance beside the nattily clad troops.

Breakfast consisted of corn flakes and milk, liver and bacon, bread and butter and coffee.

After breakfast we returned to receiving barracks and were released for a few hours' leisure on the parade ground, where most of the crowd diverted themselves with football and baseball. Our numbers kept swelling with applicants from the 12 Middle Western states, which enlist through Jefferson Barracks, who arrived by every car and train.

A few hours of play and we were sent to examination barracks. There a Sergeant conducted a preliminary examination and a surgeon went over us more carefully, giving particular attention to heart and lungs. All were inoculated with typhus serum and then required to take the soldier's oath of allegiance, where I stepped aside for a moment. Bertillon measurements followed and each was photographed. This record completed, we returned to our barracks and later to lunch, which consisted of fried halibut, boiled potatoes, stewed corn, cream sauce, bread and tapioca pudding.

The remainder of this, the second day, was spent in and out of the barracks, where daily papers, magazines and books were furnished for those who cared to spend their leisure time reading. We had sliced bologna, potatoes au gratin, ginger cake, bread, syrup and coffee for supper, and attended the free picture show in the post hall at night, returning to quarters before 9 o'clock.

The same clanging gong roused us promptly at 5:45 next morning, the third day. For breakfast we had oatmeal and milk, fried bacon, brown gravy, boiled potatoes, bread, syrup and coffee.

At 9 o'clock we were measured for uniforms and taken to the Quartermaster depot. Each received two pairs of breeches, one coat, one shirt, one hat, one cap, one belt, three suits of underwear, two pairs of shoes, six pairs of socks, one pair leggins and a kit containing comb and hair brush, shoe brush and polish, tooth brush, razor, shaving brush and soap, two towels, one whiskbroom and one "housewife," which is a case containing needles, thread, buttons, scissors and safety pins.

The shoes were fitted while wearing a leather sandbag weighing 40 pounds, strapped to the shoulders—the weight a soldier must carry on the march.

We returned to receiving barracks, where each was given an identifying number for the record, and this number was then stamped with indelible ink on each article of clothing. We were urged to retain the civilian apparel or send it home. All save two in our crowd sold it to the Government, after appraisal there and then by the Sergeant. One young man, who insisted on selling an extra suit he had brought along in a suitcase, could not be prevailed upon to keep it.

"No, I won't have it," he insisted. "I couldn't make any speed in civilian life and I'm through with it. I've been knocked about all my life, and I'm in the army to stay."

All civilian clothes were then taken to be fumigated, and each man was assigned to one of the five companies. Passing out of receiving barracks we received a copy of the soldiers' handbook of instructions on all phases of military life.

Sixteen of our crowd went to Twenty-seventh Company. At company barracks storeroom each received for permanent possession three blankets, two sheets, pillow and case, mattress and case, bag for soiled linen and an overcoat.

A Sergeant, with an inflection in his enunciation suspiciously savoring of the ould sod introduced himself as our commander and instructor for the ensuing 25 days, and with the command, "Folly me," led us to the company squad room. He informed us with ominous emphasis that the beds in the squad room were for sleeping purposes; that when we retired, it was to sleep and not "to lay there and giggle and squirm and tell funny stories like a lot of young girls at boarding school." He insisted that there be no "foolishness or skylarking or the like" in the squad room or barracks at any time.

"And when that bell rings in the morning," he added, solemnly weighing each word, "it means one thing: get out of that bunk as quick as you can—we do no coaxing here — dress, make your bed, go downstairs and wash your face and hands, and get out on the parade grounds, in 15 minutes.

"I have my doubts," he continued, fixing a group in conversation with a with-

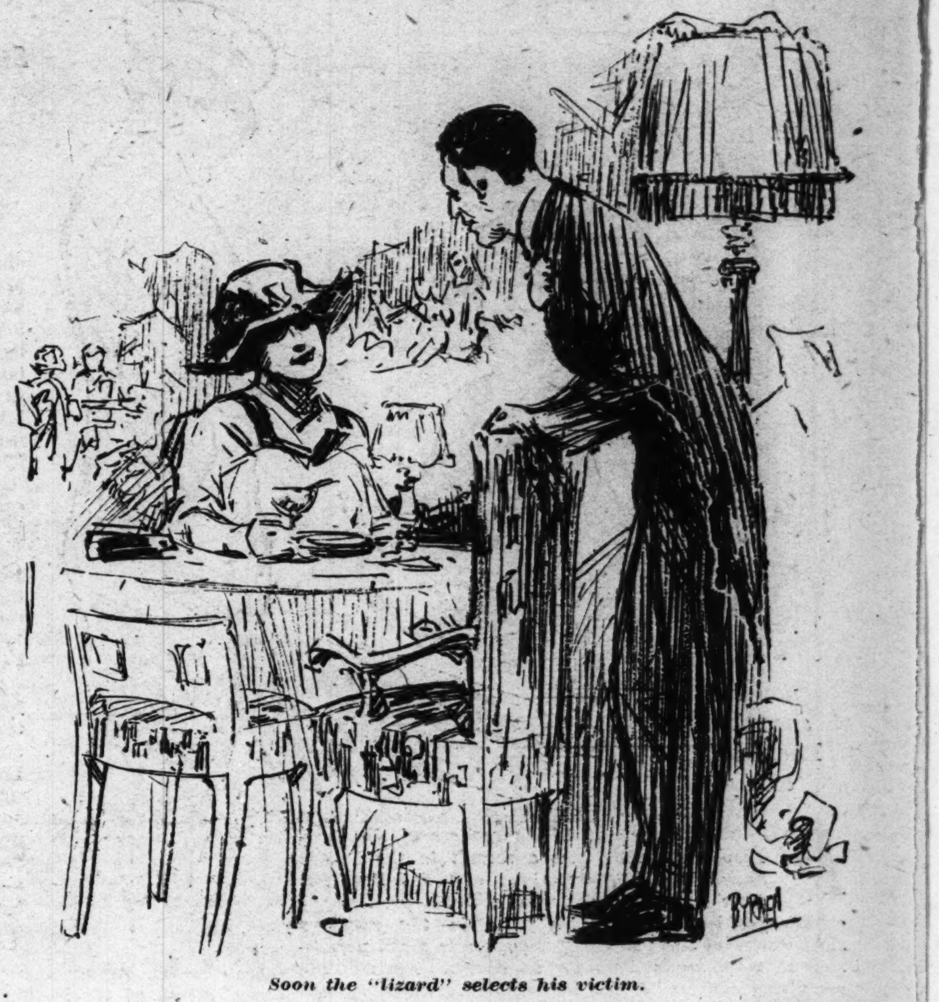
THE "LOUNGE LIZARD," A PARASITE BORN OF THE NEW YORK TANGO TEA RESORTS

Investigation following murder of Mrs. Elsie Hilair reveals blackmailing activities of professional "escorts," many of them ex-convicts, who prey on weak-willed women—How the crew of dancing men operates :: :: :: ::



Soon the "lizard" selects his victim.

UNDER dank stones covered with fetid mosses and beneath decaying logs the wood lizard is born, a repulsive reptile. In the cloying warmth of the New York tango parlors, with its sickish-sweet atmosphere, another variety of lizard has its habitat—the "lounge lizard," also a repulsive reptile.

The wood lizard is as old as the world—the lounge variety is a development of the past three years. The latter variety is a parasite which preys on weak-willed women. He is known to the New York police also under the names of "parlor snake," "slippery chameleon" and "tango pirate."

When the afternoon tea dance craze swept the East it brought with it the "lounge lizard." At first he was difficult to isolate, but he is readily recognized now, with his slickly parted hair, his tight-fitting trousers and spike-tailed coat.

While the police have had a general idea of the activities of these parasites, it was not until the murder of Mrs. Elsie Hilair in a downtown New York hotel a few weeks ago that complete details of their work have become known. The woman was found strangled in bed and much valuable jewelry had been stolen. It was learned that for nearly two years Mrs. Hilair, the wife of a well-to-do Brooklyn man, had been a habitue of tango tea resorts, unknown to her husband, and it was while following up clews in the case that the police were enabled to make a detailed study of the "lounge lizard" and his activities.

In most of the afternoon dance resorts of New York professional dancers are employed to look after unescorted women, shoppers usually, who drop in for tea and an hour or so of dancing. The professionals usually wear white or pink carnations and, under direction of a "hostess," or official introducer, select their partners. Their fixed salary is about $1.50 a day, but in most "parlors" they are allowed to receive tips from the women to whom they have been devoting their terpsichorean talent. One tip will occasionally amount to more than a week's salary. In other places the men are not permitted to take tips, but are allowed to eat and drink at the expense of the women guests, and they receive a percentage of the money spent under their guidance.

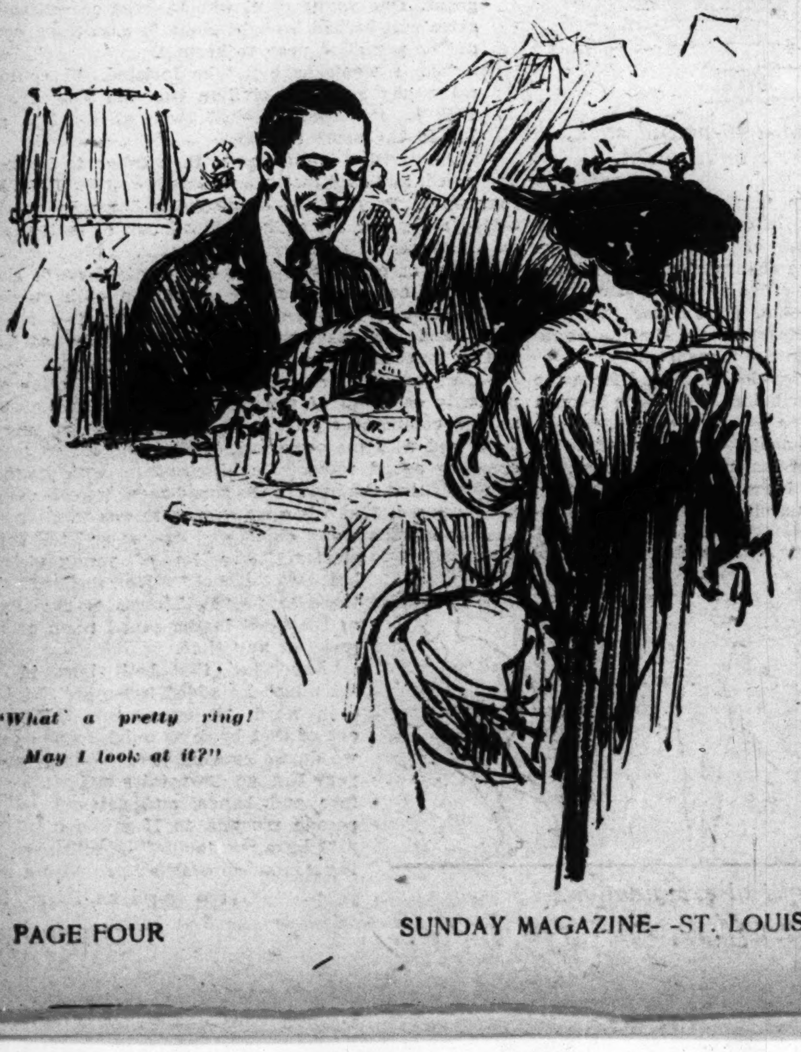
Not all of these professionals are "lounge lizards," however. Some are satisfied with the "honest graft" which is obtained through the means outlined above. Others are blackmailers.

The work of the tango lizard is done in this wise:

He arrives at the parlor—there are hundreds of them scattered around Greater New York—early in the afternoon. The lights are low and perfume has been sprayed in all corners of the room. Couples are gliding over the floor. About several tables are unescorted women watching the dancers and keeping time with their feet. Obviously they are anxious to dance, but they have no partners.

Soon the lizard selects his victim. He makes himself as entertaining as possible, and after the dance leads her to a table, at the same time nodding to a waiter. A cocktail is ordered. Dance follows dance, and usually cocktail follows cocktail, until the woman, probably the wife of a substantial citizen, realizes the hour and prepares to go home. The bill is called for and on this occasion is usually paid for by the "lizard."

The woman departs, in many cases announcing that she had such a delightful time that she will be sure to return. The "lizard" is waiting for her. By the end of the second day he usually has gained the confidence of his victim to such a degree that she is in his power to an extent not realized by the woman. Then the blackmailing begins.

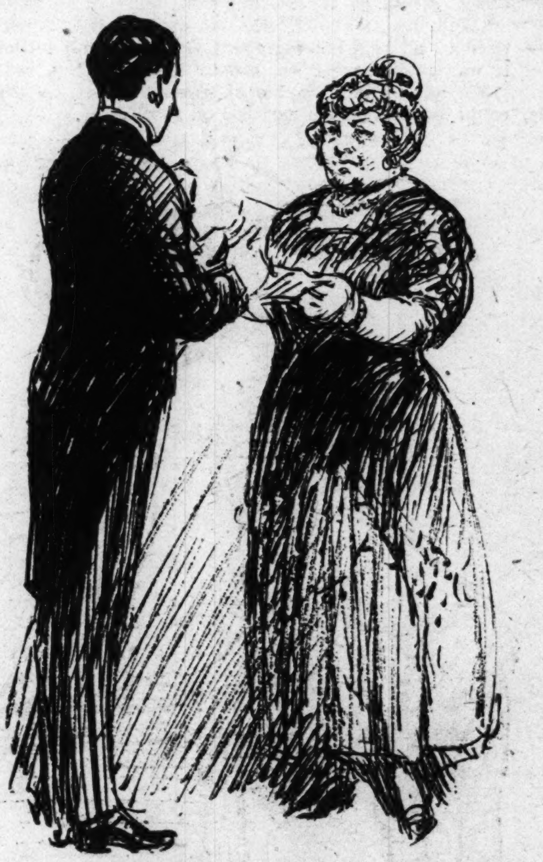


"What a pretty ring! May I look at it?"

When the bill for refreshments is brought the "lizard" remembers that he has forgotten to bring his money with him. So embarrassing, you know? Usually the woman, without any further suggestion, offers to lend him $10 or $20, as the need may be. He accepts it as a loan, to be repaid tomorrow. The woman is never allowed to pay a check. There is usually change coming back and the "lizard" has uses for the money.

The next day nothing is said of the loan. The man has apparently forgotten all about it and the woman hasn't the nerve to ask for the money. Later on the tango lizard gets bolder.

"That's a pretty ring you have on," he says. "May I see it?" The woman hands over the ring and it is never returned, and there is nothing the woman can do about it. She can't complain to her husband because then she must tell where she has been spending her afternoons. She can't go to the police with her troubles, because there will be lots of explaining to do at headquarters and the possibility of publicity.



Sometimes the "lizard" splits 50-50 with the owner.

Recent investigation by the police has shown that a large percentage of the dancing men are former convicts or men with police records. In many of the places the owners connive with the attendants, splitting the blackmailing receipts on a 50—50 basis. Many women crooks are also taking advantage of the tango-tea craze to make a "clean-up." It is easy to frighten a woman out of hush money by threatening to inform her husband of her presence at a "parlor" dancing and drinking cocktails with strange men, while he has been under the impression that she is shopping or making a visit at Cousin Mary's.

About a year and a half ago the New York District Attorney's office began an investigation of the tango resorts, with the result that for a time at least the "lizards" stopped their activities. Soon afterwards they again got busy and the police declare they are more active now than at any time since the afternoon dance craze started.

The first exposure of real conditions followed the publicity given to the elopement of Eugenia Kelly with a professional dancer. She said that for a period she had visited as many as six tango parlors a day. Among her dance acquaintances was Al Davis, whom she married in November, 1915, after wide notoriety had been given to her tango party escapades.

About a year ago considerable space was given in the New York papers to the wife of a wealthy cotton broker and her tango companion. They met at one of the most widely known hotels in New York and the dancer soon obtained the woman's confidence. In a short time he succeeded in getting possession of the keys to her apartment.

Soon afterwards jewelry valued at several thousand dollars was stolen from the woman's home on Riverside drive. The tango dancer was later arrested and sentenced to a term in Sing Sing. As a result of the experience the woman was for a time confined in a sanitarium.

A writer who has made a study of the "tango snake" thus describes his routine:

> We will arrive at the home of a "lizard" shortly after 11 o'clock any morning in the week. The "lizard" has had a very hard night and had not returned to his home much before 3 o'clock in the morning. The alarm clock has just sounded and according to his regular custom he knows he has just two hours before it will be time to head for the tango resorts which he left but a few hours before.
> From under the bed springs, where they have been "pressing" since he returned home, comes the black and gray striped trousers, while from the door knob come the socks which have been worn for perhaps several days. The most guarded part of the "lizard's" outfit is the black cutaway coat, edged with the broad, heavy braid. This part of his "make-up" has been honored with a coat hanger, on which it has hung on the side wall gas fixture, which besides serving to supply the gas needed for light, also furnishes the necessary fuel for the morning breakfast.
> On the left shoulder of the luring coat can be seen smudges of face powder, and as the gentle grafter notices this he gazes in pride towards the mirror which hangs suspended from the fixture on the side wall.
> First comes a shave, and then into his tight trousers and spike- tail coat climbs the buccaneer.
> The room of the tango resort at the time he arrives is filled with a luncheon crowd—clerks and stenographers, married women and others. Here and there are a number of tables at which a group of business men are still eating, while at other tables are any number of unescorted women, some alone and others in pairs and at times three and four. The lights as a rule are low, while sweet perfume has been sprayed about the room.

Then follows the real work of the day, as described in an earlier part of this article, the snaring of unescorted women and the campaign of blackmail.

Don't for a moment, continues the writer, be misled into thinking that the lounge lizard is a crude sort of animal. He's one of the slickest creatures preying upon women of the present day. He is a coward to a certain extent, for he takes little chance at detection or arrest. His methods are simple, and once in his clutches, his victims, in fear of being discovered by their unsuspecting husbands, calmly submit time and time again to blackmail.

In this respect it is generally conceded by the highest police authorities in New York that a large percentage of the "lost and found" advertisements appearing daily in the morning and evening editions of the newspapers are nothing more or less than

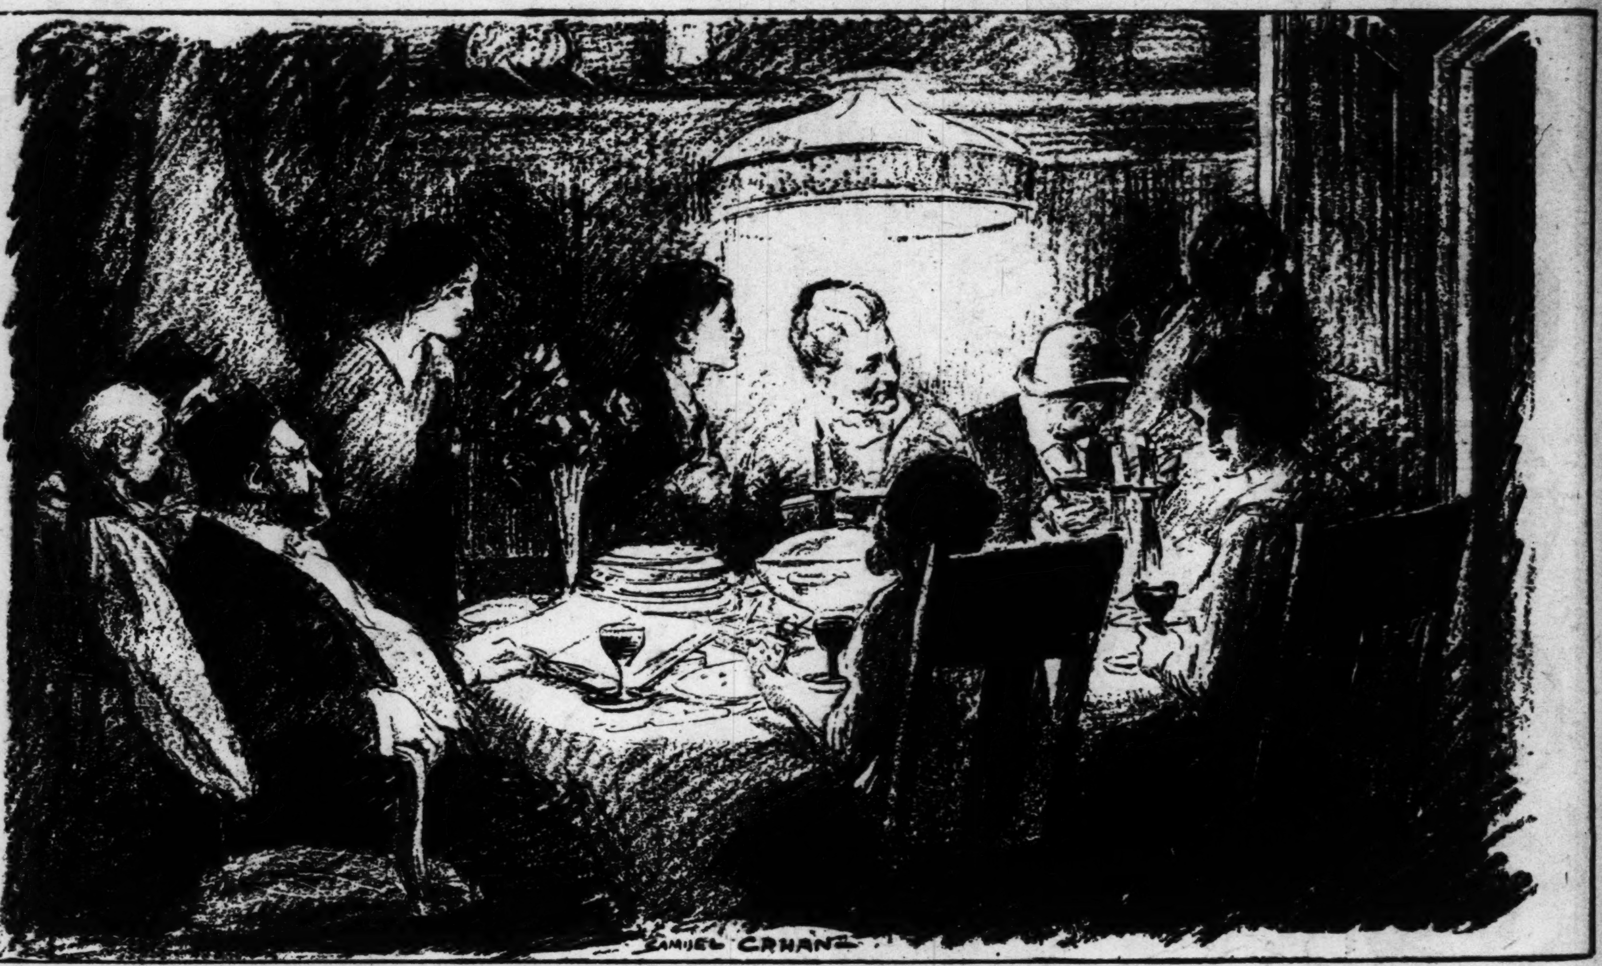
Passover, Commemorating Exodus of Jews From Egypt, Is Being Doubly Celebrated This Week



The Sedar, or family home festival, on the first evening of Passover.

Deliverance of 6,000,000 religionists from the yoke of autocratic Russia observed in connection with anniversary of the removal of the Children of Israel from under the cruel sway of the Pharoahs more than 3000 years ago

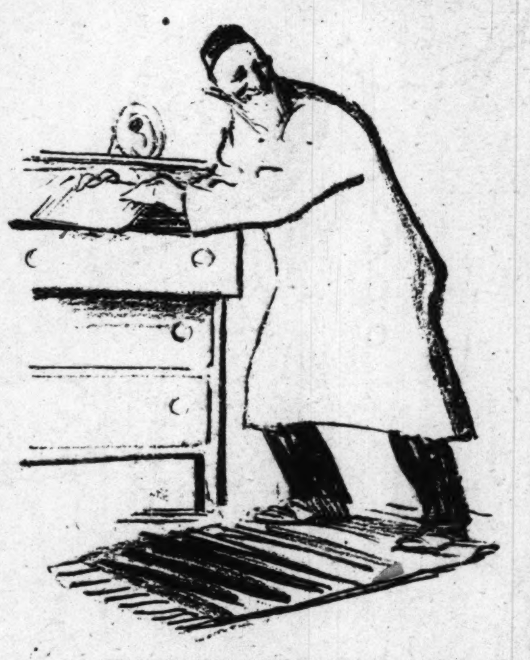
THOUSANDS of Jews in St. Louis, in common with their co-religionists throughout the world, today are observing the first of the seven days' feast of the Passover, in commemoration of the exodus from Egypt more than 3000 years ago, and the deliverance of the children of Israel from the divine wrath wrought upon the first-born of their oppressors.

The celebration this year will probably be the most joyous in the history of the Jews, for the wondrous miracle of Egypt has been repeated in Russia and 6,000,000 of the race have been delivered from the yoke of autocratic tyranny.

The Feast of the Passover actually began at sundown last night, when the "Sedar," a banquet conducted according to the rites handed down by Moses and Aaron in the wilderness, took place in thousands of homes in this city and in community houses.

The "Sedar" is a joyous feast that partakes of the nature of a family reunion. Great care is taken that every stranger in the city shall be provided for at some "Sedar" table to partake of the traditional unleavened bread (matzoth), the "bitter herbs" and the ritual wine cup.

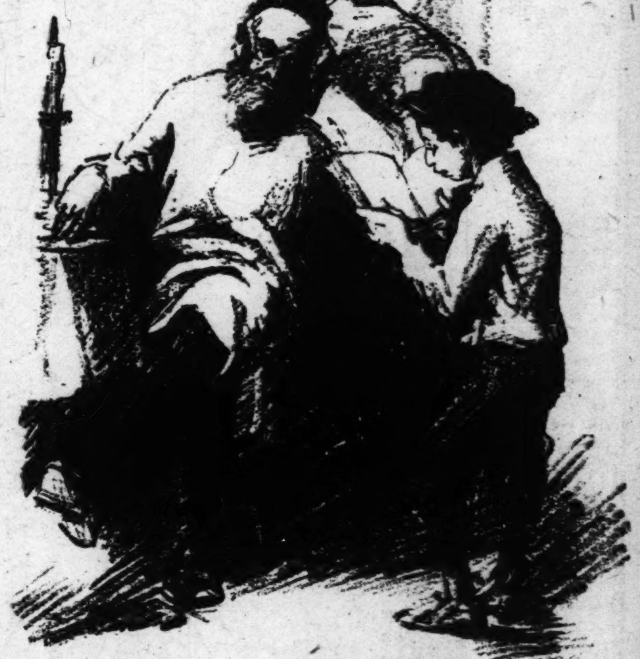
At the banquet among the orthodox families the men and boys keep their head coverings on and the father reclines on soft cushions. There is a 3000-year reason for it all, as well as for the quaint ceremonial preparations that have been in progress for several days past. The principal feature has been the grand cleaning up of "leaven," meaning food or refuse that might ferment. Every nook and corner of the house has been searched with infinite patience for every particle of bread crumb or other food. All refuse is burned. Not even a suspicion of "leaven" must remain on any dish, pot or pan that is used during the Feast of the Passover. It is customary in most families of an orthodox bent to keep a separate set of kitchen utensils and tableware just for use at this time. But everybody can't afford this, so the tinker man does a rushing business, scouring the kitchen utensils and giving them a new metal lining.



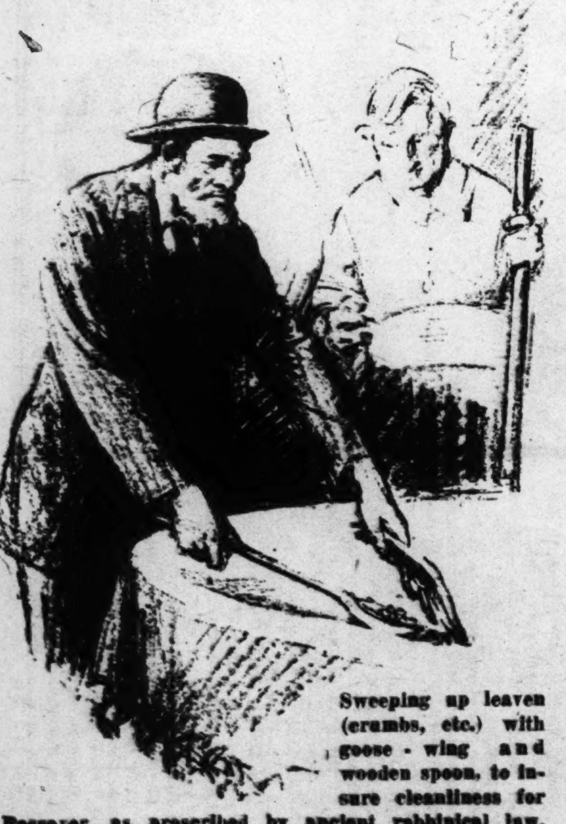
Hiding "Matzoth" for children to find and win prizes.

Like Easter, the Passover is a movable feast, the date being fixed by the new moon of Ahib, corresponding largely to our month of April. It resembles Easter in other respects. In Jewish families "matzoths" are hidden for the youngsters to seek out, just as is done with Easter eggs. According to tradition, the first Passover was ordained by Moses, at the command of God. The Jews in Egypt were commanded on the tenth day of Ahib to select a he-lamb of the first year without blemish, to kill it on the eve of the fourteenth and to sprinkle with its blood the lintel and sideposts and the doors of the dwellings, so that the Lord should "pass over" them when he went forth to slay the first-born of the Egyptians. The lamb, thus drained of blood, was to be roasted and entirely consumed by the Israelites, who should be ready, with loins girded, shoes on feet and staff in hand, so as to be ready for the exodus.

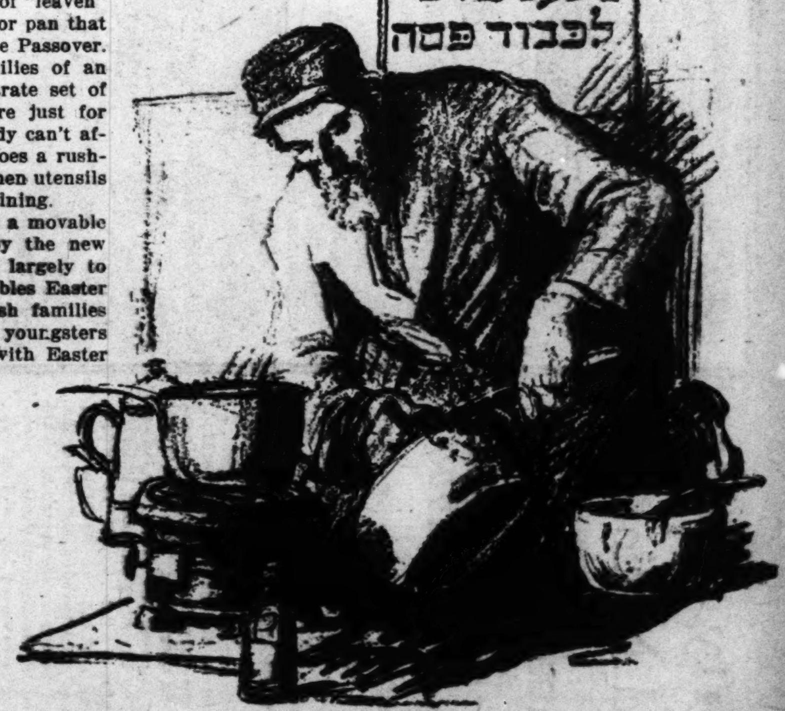
The following is the significance of the "matzoth," or unleavened bread: The Jews, in making their exodus from Egypt, were in such haste that they took dough before it was leavened and carried it with them on kneading troughs.



Jewish patriarch, reclining on left side on cushions, with head covered, and wearing "robe of Aaron," reviews with younger generation the Biblical miracles relating to Israel's deliverance from Egypt.



Sweeping up leaven (crumbs, etc.) with goose - wing and wooden spoon, to insure cleanliness for Passover, as prescribed by ancient rabbinical law.



Jewish tinker scouring and re-lining kitchen utensils for poorer families who cannot afford a brand-new Passover set.

Forty Races and Nations in Great War

Total Population Is 675,000,000

THE adjoining map and insets give a most vivid visualization of the scope of the great war. Forty races and nations are engaged in this most gigantic of conflicts and it is not improbable that before the world sees peace again other flags will have waved above a battle field.

Ranged on the side of the Teutonic allies are countries and races aggregating in population about 175,000,000. This is counting the entire populations of Austria-Hungary, Germany, Bulgaria and Turkey. The count of Turkey doubtless includes the Arabian tribes who have since revolted and joined the British invaders in Mesopotamia. This defection in the Teutonic total is probably counterbalanced by the loyal natives of German East Africa, the only colonial possession of Germany which has not been lost in its entirety.

On the side of the allies are lined up countries and races with a population in excess of 500,000,000. Should China, which has broken diplomatic relations with Germany, enter the war actively there would be approximately 1,000,000,000 persons, or half of the world under allied flags, against the 175,000,000 persons opposed to them.

By far the greatest number of races and countries in the war at present are under the British flag: English, Australians, Maoris, Sikhs, Pathans, Ghurkas, South Africans, Native South Africans, West Indians, Canadians, Canadian Indians, West Africans, Boers and Sepoys.

Under the tri-color of France are: Tonkinese, Anamites, Arabs, Nigerians, Senegalese, Turcos, Moroccans, Tunisians, Soudanese and Madagascans.

There are also Africans fighting with the Italians, Portuguese and Belgians.

Practically all of the nations enumerated in the map are taking an active part in the war. Many of the colonial subjects of France and England are not on the firing line yet thousands of Sepoys, Tonkinese, Anamaites and other coolie types are employed behind the firing lines building trenches and roads.

To get the number of men of possible fighting age it is customary to divide the total population by five. On this basis the entente in a pinch could muster 100,000,000 men, not counting China. The best that Germany, Austria, Bulgaria and Turkey could do would be 35,000,000 men, or about one-third of the entente's total.

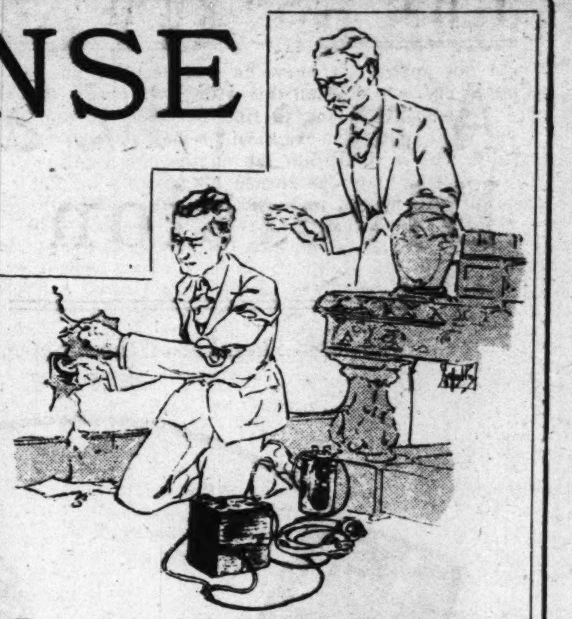
THE SIXTH SENSE

Newest Craig Kennedy Stories

BY ARTHUR B. REEVE



He was ruthlessly breaking through the plaster of the beautifully decorated wall.

"I SUPPOSE you have read in the papers of the mysterious burning of our country house at Oceanhurst, on the south shore of Long Island?"

It had been about the middle of the afternoon that a huge automobile of latest design drew up at Kennedy's laboratory and a stylishly dressed woman, accompanied by a very attractive young man, alighted.

They had entered and the man, with a deep bow, presented two cards bearing the name of the Count and Countess Alessandro Rovigno.

Julia Rovigno, I knew, was the daughter of Roger Gaskell, the retired banker. She had recently married Count Rovigno, a young foreigner, whose family had large shipping interests in America and at Trieste in the Adriatic.

"Yes, indeed, I have read about it," nodded Craig.

"You see," she hurried on a little nervously, "it was a wedding present to us from my father."

"Giula," put in the young man quickly, giving her name an accent that was not, however, quite Italian, "thinks the fire was started by an incendiary."

Rovigno was a tall, rather boyish-looking man of 32 or 33, with light-brown hair, light-brown beard and mustache. His eyes and forehead spoke of intelligence, but I had never heard that he cared much about practical business affairs. In fact, to American society Rovigno was known chiefly as one of the most daring of motor-boat enthusiasts.

"It may have been the work of an incendiary," he continued thoughtfully, "or it may no. I don't know. But there has been an epidemic of fires among the large houses on Long Island lately."

I nodded to Kennedy, for I had myself compiled a list for the Post, which showed that considerably over a million dollars' worth of show places had been destroyed. At any rate," added the Countess, "we are burned out, and are staying in town now—at my father's house. I wish you would come around there. Perhaps father can help you. He knows all about the country out that way, for his own place isn't a quarter of a mile away."

"I shall be glad to drop around if I can be of any assistance," agreed Kennedy as the young couple left us.

The Rovignos had scarcely gone when a woman appeared at the laboratory door. She was well dressed, pretty, but looked pale and haggard.

"My name is Mrs. Bettina Petzka," she began, singling out Kennedy. "You do not know me, but my husband, Nikola, was one of the first students you taught, professor."

"Yes, yes, I recall him very well," replied Craig. "He was a brilliant student, too—very promising. What can I do for you?"

"Why, Prof. Kennedy," she cried, no longer able to control her feelings, "he has suddenly disappeared."

"What line of work has he taken up?" asked Craig, interested.

"He was a wireless operator—had been employed on a liner that runs to the Adriatic from New York. But he was out of work. Someone has told me that he thought he saw Nikola in Hoboken, around the docks, where a number of liners that go to blockaded ports are laid up waiting the end of the war."

She paused. "I see," remarked Kennedy, pursing up his lips thoughtfully. "Your husband was not a reservist of any of the countries at war, was he?"

"No; he was, first of all, a scientist. I don't think he had any interest in the war—at least, he never talked much about it."

"I know," persisted Craig, "but had he taken out his naturalization papers here?"

"He had applied for them."

"When did he disappear?"

"I haven't seen him for two nights," she sobbed.

It flashed over me that it was now two nights since the fire that had burned Rovigno's house, although there was not reason for connecting the events, at least not yet.

The young woman was plainly wild with anxiety. "Oh, can't you help me find Nikola?" she pleaded.

"I'll try my best," reassured Kennedy, taking down on a card her address and bowing her out.

It was late in the afternoon before we had an opportunity to call at the Gaskell town house, where the Rovignos were staying. The Count was not at home, but the Countess welcomed us and led us directly into a large library.

"I'd like to have you meet my father," she introduced. "Father, this is Prof. Kennedy, whom Alex and I have engaged to look into the burning of our house."

Old Roger Gaskell received us, I thought, with a curious mixture of restraint and eagerness.

"I hope you'll excuse me?" asked the Countess a moment later. "I really must dress for dinner."

"I've heard of the epidemic of fires from my friend, Mr. Jameson here, on the Post," remarked Kennedy when we were alone. "Some, I understand, have attributed the fires to incendiaries, others have said they were the work of disgruntled servants, others of an architect or contractor who hasn't shared in the work and thinks he may later. I've even heard it said that an insurance man may be responsible—hoping to get new business, you know."

Gaskell looked at us keenly. Then he rose and approached me, raising his finger as though cautioning silence.

"Do you know," he whispered so faintly that it was almost lost, "sometimes I think there is a plot against me?"

"Against you?" whispered back Kennedy, "Why, what do you mean?"

"I can't tell you—here," he replied. "But I believe there are detectaphones hidden about this house!"

"Have you searched?" asked Kennedy keenly.

"Yes, but I've found nothing. I've gone over all the furniture and such things. Still, they might be inside the walls, mightn't they?"

Kennedy nodded.

"Could you discover them if they were?" asked Gaskell.

"I think I could," replied Craig confidently.

"Then there's another peculiar thing," resumed Gaskell, a little more freely, yet still whispering. "I suppose you know that I have a country estate not far from my daughter?"

He paused. "Of course, I know," he went on, watching Kennedy's face, "that sparks are sometimes struck by horses' shoes when they hit stones. But the shoes of my horses, for instance, out there lately have been giving forth sparks even in the stable. My groom called my attention to it, and I saw it myself."

He continued looking searchingly at Kennedy. "You are a scientist," he said at length. "Can you tell me why?"

Kennedy was thinking deeply. "I can't," he replied frankly. "But I should like to have a chance to investigate."

"There may be some connection with the fire," hinted Gaskell anxiously as he accompanied us to the door.

At our own apartment, when we returned we found our friend, Burke, of the secret service, waiting for us.

"Just had a hurry call to come to New York," he explained, "and thought I'd like to drop in on you first."

"What's the trouble?" asked Kennedy.

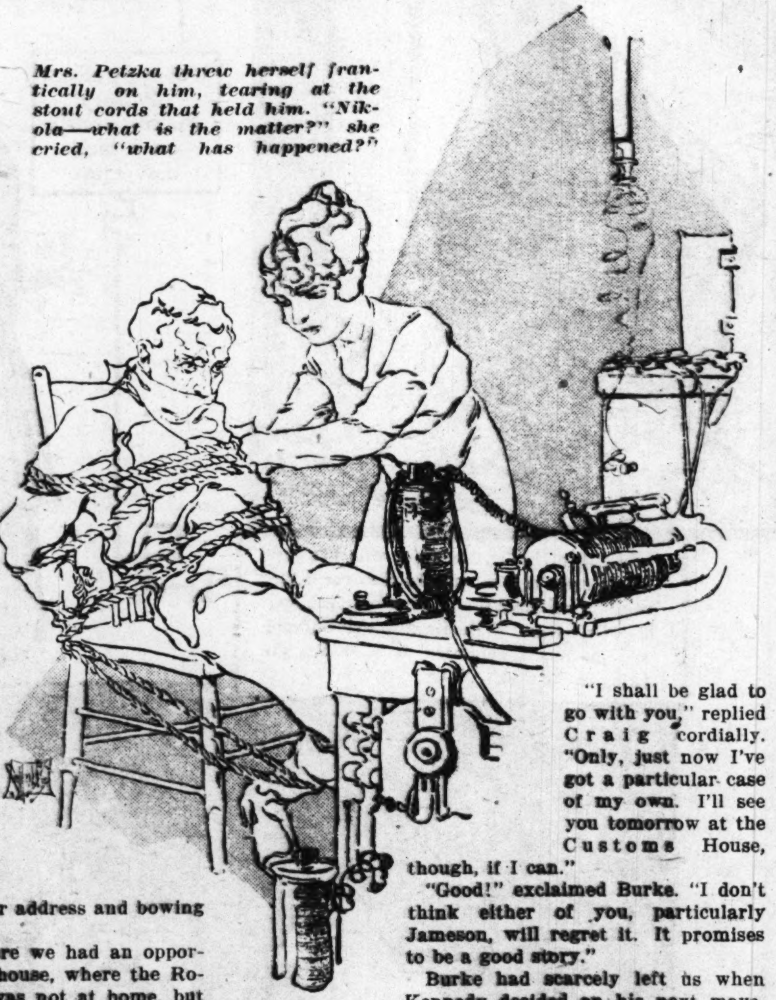
"Why, there's been a mysterious yacht lurking about the mouth of the harbor for several days and they want to look into it."

"Whose yacht do they think it is?"

"They don't know, but it is said to resemble one that belongs to a man named Gaskell."

"Gaskell?" repeated Craig, turning suddenly.

"Yes—the Furious—a fast, floating palace—one of these new power yachts, run by a gas engine—built for speed. The revenue cutter Uncas had been assigned to me. If you have nothing better to do, I'd like to have you give me a hand in the case. You might find it a little different from the ordinary run."



Mrs. Petzka threw herself frantically on him, tearing at the stout cords that held him. "Nikola—what is the matter?" she cried, "what has happened?"

"I shall be glad to go with you," replied Craig cordially. "Only, just now I've got a particular case of my own. I'll see you tomorrow at the Customs House, though, if I can."

"Good!" exclaimed Burke. "I don't think either of you, particularly Jameson, will regret it. It promises to be a good story."

Burke had scarcely left us when Kennedy decided on his next move. We went directly over to the Long Island Railroad station and caught the next train out to Oceanhurst, not a long run from the city.

We entered the Gaskell estate and looked it over as we made our way toward the stable to find the groom. Out on the bay we could see the Furious at anchor. Nearer in shore were a couple of Count Rovigno's speedy racing motor boats. Along the shore we saw a basin for yachts, capable even of holding the Furious.

The groom proved to be a rather dull-witted fellow, and left us pretty much to our own devices.

"Ya-as—sparks—I saw 'em," he drawled in answer to Kennedy's question. "So did Mr. Gaskell. Naw—I don't know nawthin' about 'em."

He had lumbered out into another part of the stable when I heard a low exclamation from Craig of "Look, Walter!"

I did look in amazement. There were indeed little sparks; in fact, a small burst of them in all directions, where there were metal surfaces in close proximity to one another.

Kennedy had brought along with him a strange instrument and he was now looking attentively at it.

"What is that?" I asked.

"The bolometer," he replied, "invented by Prof. Langley."

"And what does it do?"

"Detects waves," he replied, "rays that are invisible to the eye. For instance, just now it tells me that shooting through the darkness are invisible waves, perhaps infra-red rays."

He paused, and I looked at him inquiringly.

"You know," he explained, "the infra-red rays are closer to the heat rays than those of the upper end of the spectrum and beyond the ultra-violet rays, with which we have already had some experience."

Kennedy continued to look at his bolometer. "Yes," he remarked thoughtfully, half to himself, "somewhere around here there is a generator of infra-red rays and a projector of those rays. It reminds me of those so-called F-rays of Ulivi—or at least of a very powerful wireless."

I was startled at the speculations that his words conjured up in my mind. Somehow, the fact of the strange disappearance of Petzka, the wireless operator, kept bobbing up in my mind. Could it have been Petzka who was responsible for the fires? But, why? I could not figure it out.

Early the next morning we called at the Gaskell town house again. Kennedy had brought with him a small piece of apparatus which seemed to consist of two sets of coils placed on ends of a magnet bar. To them was attached a long, flexible wire which he screwed into an electric light bulb socket. Then he placed a peculiar telephone-like apparatus, attached to the other end, to his ears. He adjusted the magnets and carried the thing carefully about the room.

At one point he stopped and moved the thing vertically up along the wall, from floor to ceiling.

"That's a gas pipe," he said simply.

"What's the instrument?" I asked.

"A new apparatus for finding pipes electrically, which I think can be just as well applied to finding other things concealed in walls under plaster and paper."

He paused to adjust the thing. "The electrical method," he went on, "is a special application of well-known induction balance principles. You see one set of coils receives an alternating or vibrating current. The other is connected with this telephone. First, I established a balance so that there was no sound in the telephone."

He moved the thing about. "Now, when the device comes near metal piping, for example, or a wire, the balance is disturbed and I hear a sound. That was the gas pipe. It is easy to find its exact location. Hulloa"——

He paused again in a corner, behind Gaskell's desk, and appeared to be listening intently.

A moment later he was ruthlessly breaking through the plaster of the beautifully decorated wall.

Sure enough, in there was a detectaphone, concealed only by a fraction of an inch beneath the paper, with wires leading down inside the partition in the direction of the cellars.

He ripped the little mechanical eavesdropper out, wires and all, but he did not disconnect the wires, yet.

We traced it out, and down into the cellar, the wires led, directly, and then across, through a small opening in the foundations into the next cellar of an apartment house, ending in a bin or storeroom.

In itself the thing, so far, gave no clew as to who was using it or the purpose for which it had been installed. But it was strange.

"Someone was evidently trying to get something from you, Mr. Gaskell," remarked Craig pointedly, after we returned to the Gaskell library. "Why do you suppose he went to all that trouble?"

Gaskell shrugged his shoulders and averted his eyes.

"I've heard of a yacht outside New York harbor," added Craig casually.

"A yacht?"

"Yes," he said nonchalantly, "the Furious."

Gaskell met Kennedy's eye and looked at him as though Craig had some occult power of divination. Then he moved over closer to us.

"Is that detectaphone thing out of business now?"

"Yes."

"Absolutely?"

"Absolutely."

Gaskell leaned over.

"Then I don't mind telling you, Prof. Kennedy," he said in a low tone, "that I am letting a friend of mine from London use that yacht to supply some allied warship on the Atlantic with news, supplies and ammunition, such as can be carried."

Kennedy looked at him keenly, but for some moments

did not answer. I knew he was deciding on how he might properly dovetail this with Burke's case, ethically.

"Someone is trying to find out from eavesdropping just what your plans are, then," remarked Craig thoughtfully, with a significant tap on the detectaphone.

A moment later he turned his back to us and knelt down. He seemed to be wrapping the detectaphone up in a small package, which he put in his pocket and closing the hole in the wall the best he could where he had ripped the paper.

"All I ask of you," concluded Gaskell, as we left a few minutes later, "is to keep your hands off that phase of things. Find the incendiary—yes; but this other matter that you have forced out of me—well—hands off!"

On our way downtown to keep the appointment Kennedy had made with Burke the night before, he stopped at the laboratory to get a heavy parcel which he carried along.

We found Burke waiting for us, impatiently, at the Customs House.

"We've just discovered that the liners over at Hoboken have had steam us for a couple of days," he said excitedly. "Evidently they are waiting to make a break for the ocean—perhaps in concert with a sortie of the fleets over in Europe."

"H—m," mused Kennedy, looking fixedly at Burke, "that complicates matters, doesn't it? We must preserve American neutrality."

He thought a moment. "I should like to go aboard the revenue cutter. May I?"

"Surely," agreed Burke.

A few moment later we were on the Uncas, Kennedy telling Burke just enough of what he had himself discovered so as to enlist his services.

The captain in charge of the Uncas joined the conversation a few moments later, and then Kennedy took the heavy package down below. For some time he was at work in one of the forward tanks that was full of water, attaching the thing, whatever it was, in such a way that it seemed to form part of the skin of the ship.

Another brief talk with Burke and the captain followed, and then the three returned to the deck.

"Oh, by the way," remarked Burke, as he and Kennedy came back to me, "I forget to tell you that I have had some of my men working on the case and one of them has just learned that a fellow named Petzka, one of the best wireless operators—a Hungarian or something—has been engaged to go on that yacht."

"Petzka?" I repeated involuntarily.

"Yes," said Burke in surprise, "do you know anything about him?"

"Not much," replied Craig. "But you can find out about him, I think, through his wife. He used to be one of my students. Here's her address. She's very anxious to hear from him."

Burke took the address and a little while later we went ashore.

I was not surprised when Kennedy proposed, as the next move, to revisit the cellar in the apartment next to Gaskell's house. But I was surprised at what he said after we had reached the place.

We had scarcely secreted ourselves in the cellar storeroom, which was in a dark corner, where one might remain unobserved, even if the janitor entered the cellar, provided he did not search that part, when Kennedy took the receiving headpiece of the detectaphone and placed it over his head, quite as if nothing had happened.

"What's the use of that?" I queried. "You ripped the transmitter out up above."

He smiled quietly. "While my back was turned toward you, so you couldn't see," he said, "I slipped the thing back again, only down further, where Gaskell wouldn't be likely to find it, even if he looked. I don't know whether he was frank with us, so I thought I'd try the eavesdropping game myself, in place of the man who put this thing in in the first place, whoever he was."

We took turns listening, but could hear not a sound. Nor did anyone come into the cellar.

So a good part of the afternoon passed, apparently fruitless.

My patience was thoroughly exhausted, when, suddenly, a motion from Craig revived my flagging interest. I waited impatiently for him to tell me what it was that he had heard.

"At first I heard the sound of voices," he answered quickly. "One was the voice of a woman, which I recognized. It was the Countess. The other was the Count.

"'Giulia,' I heard him say, as they entered the room, 'I don't see why you should want to go. It's dangerous. And besides, it's none of our business if your father lets his yacht be used for such a purpose.'

"'But I want to go, Alex,' she said. 'I will go. I'm a good sailor. It's father's yacht. He won't care. I should think you'd want to go.'

"'Not I. I can get all the excitement I want in a motor-boat race, without risking my precious neck pulling the chestnuts out of the fire for someone else.'

"'Well, I want the adventure,' she persisted, petulantly.

"'But, Giulia, if you go tonight, think of the risk'——

"That was the last I heard, as they left the room, still arguing. Evidently, somone is going to pull off something tonight."

It did not take Kennedy long to make up his mind what to do next. He left the cellar hurriedly and in the laboratory hastily fixed up a second heavy and bulky package, similar to that which he had taken down to the revenue cutter earlier in the day, making it into two parcels, so as to distribute the burden between us.

That night we journeyed to Oceanhurst again. Avoiding the regular road, we made our way from the station to the Gaskell place by a roundabout path and it was quite dark by the time we got there.

As we approached the basin we saw that there were several men about. They appeared to be on guard, but since Oceanhurst at that season of the year was almost deserted and the Gaskell estate was out of the town, they were not especially vigilant.

Dark and grim, with only one light showing weakly, lay the yacht. It had been run into the basin. A hawser had been stretched across the mouth of the basin. Outside was a little tender, while a searchlight was playing over the water all the time. Evidently, whatever interference was feared was expected from the water rather than from the land.

We slunk into the shadow of a row of bathhouses in order to get our bearings.

Kennedy drew me back into the shadow, deeper, at the sound of footsteps on the board walk leading in front of the bathhouses.

From our hiding place we could now hear two voices, apparently of sailors.

"Do you know the new wireless operator who goes with us tonight?" asked one.

"No. They've been very careful of him. I guess they were afraid that someone might get wise. But there couldn't very well be any leak there. One of these Englishmen has been with him every minute since he was engaged."

"They say he's pretty good; who is he?"

"A Servian, he says, and his name sounds as if it might be so."

The voices trailed off. It was only a scrap of conversation, but Kennedy had not missed a word of it.

"That means Petzka," he nodded to me.

"What is he—a Hungarian or a Servian?" I asked quickly.

Kennedy had craned his neck out beyond the corner of the bathhouse and was looking at the Furious in the basin.

"Come on, Walter," he whispered, not taking time to answer my question. "Those fellows have gone. There's no one at all on this side of the basin and I just saw the men on deck go up the gangplank to the boathouse. They can't do any more than put us off, anyhow."

He had watched his chance well. As quickly as we could, burdened down by our two heavy packages, we managed to slip across the board walk to the piling that formed that side of the basin. The Furious had swung over with the tide nearer our side than the other. It was a daring leap, but he made it as lightly as a cat, landing on the deck. I passed over the packages to him and followed.

Kennedy scarcely paused to glance about. He had chosen a moment when no one was looking, and, bending down under the weight of the packages, we dodged behind a cabin. A dim light shining into the hold told us that no one was there and we dived down. It was the work of a moment to secret ourselves in the blank darkness behind a pile of boxes aft.

A noise startled us. Someone was coming down the steep, ladder-like stairs. A moment later we heard another noise. There were two of them, moving about among the boxes. From our hiding place we could hear them talking in hoarse whispers, but could not see them.

"Where did you put them?" asked a voice.

"In every package of explosives and in as many boxes of the canned goods as I had time. There wasn't much opportunity except while the stuff was in the boathouse.

I looked at Kennedy, wild-eyed. Was there treachery in the crew? He was leaning forward as much as our cramped quarters would permit, so as not to miss a word.

"All right," said the other voice. "No one suspects?"

"No. But the secret service has been pretty busy. They suspect something—but not this."

"Good. You are sure that you can detonate them when the time comes?"

"Positive. Everything is working fine. I've done my part of it. Changing wireless operators gave me just the chance I wanted."

"All right. I guess I'll go now."

"Remember the signal. As soon as the things are detonated I will get off, some way, by wireless, the S O S—as if it came from the fleet, you understand?"

"Yes—that it will be the signal for the dash. Good luck—I'm going ashore now."

As they passed up the ladder, I could no longer restrain myself.

"Craig," I cried, "this is devilish!"

I thought I saw it all now. In the cases of goods on the Furious were some terrible infernal machines which had been hidden, to be detonated by these deadly rays of wireless.

Kennedy was busy, working quickly putting together the parts he had taken from the two packages we had carried.

As I watched him, I realized that the burning of the Rovigno house was not the action of an incendiary, after all. It had been done by these deadly rays, probably by mere accident.

As nearly as I could make it out, there was a counterplot against the Furious. Somewhere was an infernal workshop, possibly hedged about by doors of steel which ordinary force would find hard to penetrate, but from which, any moment, this super-criminal might send out his deadly power.

The problem before us now was not only the preservation of American neutrality, but the actual safety of life.

Through the open hatch I could now hear voices on the deck. One was that of a woman, which I recognized quickly. It was Julia Rovigno.

"I'll be just as quiet as a mouse," she was saying.

"I'll stay in the cabin—I won't be in the way."

I could not hear the man's voice in reply, but it did not sound like Rovigno's. It was rather like Gaskell's.

Still, we had heard enough to know that Julia Rovigno was on the yacht, had insisted on going on the expedition for the excitement of the thing, just as we had heard over the detectaphone.

"Hadn't we better warn her?" I asked Craig, who had paused in his work at the sound of voices.

Before he could answer we were plunged in sudden darkness. Someone had switched out the light that had been shining down through the hatchway. Before we knew it the opening to the hatchway had been closed.

Kennedy groped about for a light, stumbling over boxes and bags.

"For heaven's sake, Craig," I entreated, "be careful. Those packages are full of the devilish things!"

He said nothing.

At last we had a little more freedom to move and I managed to find my way over to a little round porthole and open it.

As I looked out, I almost fainted at the realization. The Furious was under way! We were locked in the hold—virtually prisoners—our only company those dastardly infernal machines, whose very nature we did not know!

Why had Kennedy not foreseen this risk? I glanced at him. He had found an electric light, connected with the yacht's dynamo, and, before turning it on, closed and covered the port, so that it threw no reflection out.

Far from being disconcerted, on the contrary, he seemed rather pleased than otherwise at the unexpected turn of events.

What he was working on I did not know, but if it was some sort of wireless, even if we were able to send a message, what hope was there that it would get past the delicate wireless detector which this criminal must have somewhere near for tapping messages that were being flashed through the air? Had we not heard him say that the signal was to be an S O S, sent, as it were, from the fleet far out on the ocean?

I could have well believed that Kennedy could rig up some means of communication. But, if the possessor of this terrible infra-red ray, or wireless wave secret should learn that we, too, knew it, the only result that he would accomplish would be to insure our destruction immediately.

It was a foggy night and a drizzle had set in. The Furious could not under such circumstances make such good speed as she was accustomed to make. Fortunately, also, the waves were not running high.

Craig had taken a desperate chance. How would he meet it? I watched him at work, fascinated by our peril.

Finishing as quickly as he could, he put out our sole electric light, unscrewed the bulb and attached to the socket a wire which he had connected with the instrument over which he had spent so many precious moments.

Through the little porthole he cast a peculiar disk, heavy, such as I had seen him place so carefully aboard the Uncas.

It sank in the water with a splash and trailed along beside the yacht, held by wire, submerged, perhaps ten or twelve feet.

He made a final inspection of the thing as well as he could by the light of a match, then pressed a key, which seemed to close a circuit.

I could feel a dull, metallic vibration, as it were.

"What are you doing?" I asked, looking curiously also at an arrangement, like a microphone, which he had placed over his ears.

"It works!" he cried excitedly.

"What works?" I reiterated.

"This Fessenden oscillator," he explained. "It's a system for the employment of sound for submarine signals. I don't know whether you realize it, but great advance has been made recently since it was suggested to use water instead of air as the medium for transmitting signals. I can't stop to explain this apparatus just now, but it is composed of a ring magnet, a copper tube which lies in an air-gap of a magnetic field, and a stationary central armature. The magnetic field is much stronger than that in the ordinary dynamo.

"The copper tube, which has an alternating current induced in it, is attached to solid disks of steel which in turn are attached to a steel diphragm an inch thick. In the Uncas I had a chance to make that diphragm practically a part of the side of the ship. Here I have had to hang it overboard with a large water-tight diaphragm attached to the oscillator."

I listened eagerly, even if I were not an electrical engineer.

"The same oscillator," he went on, "is used for sending and receiving, for, like the ordinary electric motor, it is also capable of acting as a generator, and a very efficient one, too. All I have to do is to throw a switch in one direction when I want to telegraph or telephone under water, and in the other direction when I want to listen in."

I could scarcely credit what I heard. Craig had circumvented even the spectacular wireless. He was actually talking through water. Craig had virtually endowed himself with a sixth sense!

"Here's the answer!" he exclaimed in sudden exultation. "Burke is on the Uncas. He tells me that he went to see Mrs. Petzka and she is with him—insisted on going when she heard that her husband had been engaged by the Furious.

He waited a moment.

"You see, Walter," he resumed, "what I am doing is to send out signals by which the Uncas can locate and follow us. She is fast, and, thank heaven, this yacht has to go slow tonight. Sound travels in water at a velocity of about 4000 feet a second. For instance, I find that I get an echo in about one-twentieth of a second. That is the reflected sound wave from the bottom and indicates that we are in water of about 100 feet depth. Then I get another echo in something over two seconds. That is the wave reflected from the Uncas, which has been hovering about waiting for something to happen. They can't be much more than a mile and a half away, now. I had expected to signal them from the shore, a dock or something of the sort, using this oscillator to get round that fellow's wireless. But we're much better off on the boat."

I looked at him in amazement. "Surrounded by all this junk that may blow us to a kingdom come any second?" I demanded.

"Burke says steam is still up on all the ships tied up in the harbor, so that they can make a dash for it. They are evidently waiting for that S O S signal."

"That's all right," I said in desperation, "but suppose they blow us up first?"

"Blow us up first?" he repeated. "Why, don't you understand? It is not the Furious that they are after. The whole war fleet that is hanging around in this part of the Atlantic is to be blown up in midocean, as part of the plan to aid the escape of the interned ships in New York."

"Oh," I breathed with a sigh of relief, "that's it, is it?"

"Yes. We'll get in bad all around if we can't stop it—Burke with the secret service and ourselves with Gaskell, who doesn't dream that his yacht is being used for the exact opposite of the purpose for which he thinks he has lent it—to say nothing of the mess that our Government will have to face for letting these precious schemers play ducks and drakes with our neutrality."

We waited eagerly, Kennedy sending out and receiving the submarine signals, and I peering out anxiously into the almost impenetrable fog.

Suddenly, apparently from nowhere in the shifting mist, lights seemed to loom up. Instead of stopping, however, the Furious put on a sudden burst of reckless speed.

The Uncas was no match for her at that game. Would she escape finally, after all?

A sharp report rang out. The Uncas had sent a shot

The Big Man Produced by Revolution in Russia

dissolved violently and without the observance of existing legal forms. Such a dissolution was not in accord with the Constitutionalist principle.

"Well, what was the possible reply to such an act? The extreme party planned an insurrection, an uprising of the (accessible divisions of the) army and the fleet.

"We knew but too well that such an uprising would bring only a further increase of reactionary measures and the sacrifice of the lives of soldiers and sailors. So my party decided not to reply in that way to the illegal violence of the Government, and we employed the only means remaining—a means which in Anglo-Saxon countries has been considered constitutional, as an extreme measure which a constitutionalist group may take when it is attacked.

"We proposed passive resistance. The extremists indorsed our proposition because they recognized that at the moment they were too weak to reply in any other way.

"Both of us felt that this was the best way to preserve our unity in the face of reaction. Then the extremists tried other methods, in which we did not unite with them. They tried outbreaks in various towns. Our view proved correct and the outbreaks were easily put down.

"At the beginning of the passive resistance movement, which was inaugurated by the Viborg resolution, we laid down one condition, namely, that the passive resistance must be the resistance of a collective unity and not individual; for individual resistance could have brought no result.

"And in order to be a collective movement it was necessary first to prepare for the movement and then to start it in the whole of Russia. So in the spring the Viborg manifesto was signed by our party, and we used the two or three summer months to prepare for the movement of passive resistance throughout Russia and to determine whether there was any chance of victory.

"Then we met in congress again, discussed the situation once more and decided that it was impossible to start actively a movement of passive resistance, and that we must renounce the bringing into execution of the Viborg manifesto until the time was more ripe. We must first prepare the population. Therefore, we renounced the bringing into action of this principle, which was a principle we acknowledged always and do still acknowledge as a principle necessary for constitutional government."

Miliukoff is a great admirer of the United States and in his lectures has frequently referred to this country with the greatest enthusiasm. Often when he has risen to speak in the Duma he has been hailed with shouts of "American, American!" But instead of defending himself against these taunts he makes capital of them. Just the other day, when he received United States Ambassador Francis, who had called to notify him of America's recognition of the new Government, Miliukoff said:

"We in free Russia are going to try to follow the highest ideals of freedom in America."

Russia now is asking the question, republic or constitutional monarchy, which shall it be? If the influence of Miliukoff should prove to be the deciding factor, it probably will be the latter, for he does not believe that Russia is prepared for a republican regime. At any rate, his career would seem to indicate that whatever his course, he will be guided by wisdom and sanity.

Dr. Samuel T. Dutton, who served with Miliukoff in 1913 on the Carnegie Endowment Commission that investigated the atrocities charged against Bulgaria in the Balkan war of that year, has recently paid him a tribute including the following:

"He is a scholar, studious and hard working, a man of splendid physical strength, genial, not given to talking very much, but able to express himself forcibly at need. He acted as interpreter in our investigations.

"We were treated with marked respect everywhere, but it was noticeable that Miliukoff's presence gave us additional standing, for he was known as a friend among those in authority wherever we went. At Sofia, where we spent two weeks taking depositions of all kinds of people, but particularly Macedonian teachers and professional men, apartments in the Parliament House were turned over to us.

"In his investigations Miliukoff showed himself remarkably careful at arriving at the truth and exceedingly cautious about accepting statements unless they were thoroughly verified. I remember that I went out with an interpreter in Macedonia to investigate and met a physician whose house had been burned and his son killed when the Bulgarians massacred the people of Doxato. His wife, looking from her window, saw her son killed and their home set afire. Running down the street, she appealed to the officer, who had enjoyed their hospitality for a month. That officer drew his revolver and shot her twice.

"When I told Miliukoff of it, he decided we could not print the report unless one of us returned to Saloniki and got the woman to affirm it. A man of that type is not an anarchist nor a man who distorts facts.

"He has always favored education for the peasantry. He has introduced bills to that end in the Duma and has lectured in behalf of it."

The "Lounge Lizard" of Tango Parlors

"blinds" to cover the loss of diamond rings, gold watches and other jewelry, as well as money, which cunningly has been appropriated by the "tango pirates."

What chance would a woman have to inform her husband she had been robbed of her diamond ring? None. There would be too many questions, and were the detectives summoned to locate the "stolen" articles, beyond a doubt it would be but a short time before friend husband learned where his wife spent her afternoons. How much simpler it is to announce the family heirloom has been lost.

This, according to the police, is what hundreds of women have decided, and as a result the extent of the blackmailing practiced by these human reptiles of the dance parlors will never be known.

An inspection of the lair of the lizards only a few days ago showed that the scores of bejeweled and expensively dressed women have not been scared from their afternoon haunts as the result of the Hilair murder. Relatively few of the women attending the afternoon sessions at the tango parlors are young. In general their faces are hard and they appear of a type easily flattered by the glib words of the tango men.

In several of the dance resorts the professional companions wear red, pink or white carnations so they may be distinguished from the guests. They are not permitted to converse with the patrons after dancing. In fact, at one of these places along Broadway, the pale-faced, sloping-shouldered, dull and wary-eyed professionals are not even permitted to select their own partners. This is done by a "hostess," who, inquiring from the unescorted patrons, learns whether they desire to dance. If they express such a pleasure, the "hostess" notifies one of her "flock," and when the band begins its syncopated music the woman glides off with her appointed escort.

The music ends, the woman is seated at her own table and the dancer backs off to the seclusion of the lounge room. This type of companion receives very little compensation and while not supposed to accept "tips" from the restaurant's patrons, it is generally conceded such a practice is pushed to its utmost.

across our bows, so dangerously close that it snapped one of the cables that held the mast.

The vibration of our engine slowed and ceased, and we lay, idly wallowing in the waves as the revenue cutter bearing our friend Burke and help, came up.

A couple of boats put out from the cutter and in almost no time we could heard the tread of feet and the exchange of harsh words as the Government officers swarmed up the ladder to our deck.

It was only a moment later that the hatch was broken open and we heard the welcome brogue of Burke, calling, "Kennedy—are you and Jameson all right?"

"Right here," sang out Craig, detaching the oscillator and replacing the electric bulb, which he lighted.

The Countess was surprised, and, I felt, rather glad to see us at a time when we might, possibly, exert some influence in her favor if matters came to a more serious pass.

There was scarcely time for a word. Burke's men were working quickly. They had entered the hold, after a word from Kennedy, and far out into the ocean they were casting the boxes and bags overboard, one at a time, as fast as they could. They worked feverishly, as Burke spurred them on, and I must say that it was with the utmost relief that I saw the things thrown over.

The boxes sank, but rose again and floated, bobbing up and down, at least some of them, perhaps a third above the water and two-thirds below.

It was not for several minutes that I noticed that with those who had come aboard the Furious from the cutter stood Bettina Petska. A moment later she caught sight of Kennedy.

"Where is my husband?" she demanded, running to him.

Kennedy had no chance to reply.

Suddenly a series of flashes shattered the darkness. A terrific roar seemed to rise from the very ocean, while a rain of sparks lighted up great spurts of water and then fell back, to perish in the dark waves. The Furious trembled from end to end.

We looked, startled, at each other. But we were all safe. The things had been detonated in the water.

"Only the fact that he would have blown himself up prevented him from blowing up the yacht and all the evidence against him, now that we have discovered his plot," cried Burke, excitedly, dashing down the deck.

Recovered scarcely from our surprise at the explosion and the queer actions of the secret service man, we rushed after him as best we could, Craig leading.

He led the way to the little wireless room. The door was bolted on the inside, but we managed soon to burst it open.

I shall never forget the surprise which greeted us. In a chair, bound and gagged, as though he had been overcome only after a struggle, sat Petzka.

Mrs. Petzka threw herself frantically on him, tearing at the stout cords that held him.

"Nikola—what is the matter?" she cried. "What has happened?"

Through his gag, which she had loosened a bit, he made a peculiar, gurgling noise. As nearly as I could made out, he was struggling to say, "He came in—surprised me—seized me—locked the door."

Julia Rovigno stood rooted to the spot—utterly speechless.

There, surrounded by electric batteries, condensers, projectors, regulators, resonators, reflectors, voltmeters and ammeters, queer appartus which he had smuggled secretly on the Furious, before a strange sort of device, with a wireless head gear still over his ears, stood the owner of at least two of the liners of the belligerents which were to have made a dash for the ocean after he had succeeded, by his new wireless ray device, in removing the hostile fleet—Count Rovigno himself.

Rheumatism

A Home Cure Given by One Who Had It

In the spring of 1893 I was attacked by Muscular and Inflammatory Rheumatism. I suffered as only those who have it know for over three years. I tried remedy after remedy, and doctor after doctor, but such relief as I received was only temporary. Finally I found a remedy that cured me completely, and it has never returned. I have given it to a number who were terribly afflicted and even bedridden with Rheumatism, and it effected a cure in every case.

I want every sufferer from any form of rheumatic trouble to try this marvelous healing power. Don't send a cent; simply mail your name and address and I will send it free to try. After you have used it and it has proven itself to be that long-looked-for means of curing your Rheumatism, you may send the price of it, one dollar, but, understand, I do not want your money unless you are perfectly satisfied to send it. Isn't that fair? Why suffer any longer when positive relief is thus offered you free? Don't delay. Write today.

To End Catarrhal Deafness and Head Noises

Persons suffering from catarrhal deafness and head noises will be glad to know that this distressing affliction can be successfully treated at home by an internal remedy that in many instances has effected a complete cure after all else has failed. Sufferers who could scarcely hear a watch tick have had their hearing restored to such an extent that the tick of a watch was plainly audible seven or eight inches away from either ear.

Therefore, if you know some one who is troubled with head noises or catarrh, or catarrhal deafness, cut out this formula and hand it to them, and you will have been the means of saving some poor sufferer perhaps from total deafness. The prescription can be prepared at home, and is made as follows:

Secure from your druggist 1 oz. Parmint (Double Strength), about 75c worth. Take this home and add to it ¼ pint of hot water and 4 ozs. of granulated sugar; stir until dissolved. Take one tablespoonful four times a day.

The first dose should begin to relieve the distressing head noises, headache, dullness, cloudy thinking, etc., while the hearing rapidly returns as the system is invigorated by the tonic action of the treatment. Loss of smell and mucus dropping in the back of the throat are other symptoms that show the presence of catarrhal poison, and which are often entirely overcome by this efficacious treatment. Nearly ninety per cent of all ear troubles are said to be directly caused by catarrh, therefore there must be many people whose hearing can be restored by this simple home treatment.

Every person who is troubled with head noises, catarrhal deafness, or catarrh in any form, should give this prescription a trial. —ADV.

Tobacco Users: Attention!

Some people think they must smoke or chew to soothe their nerves, to get stimulation or for sociability. Eminent physicians agree that tobacco is a cause of cancer, blindness, heart failure, gastritis, insomnia, nervousness, irritability and even insanity. Most indulgers of the "fragrant weed" do not realize these dangers.

A very interesting book has been compiled by Edward J. Woods, 135A, Station E, New York City, proving the injury done by tobacco and why there is no necessity to suffer that awful craving or restlessness which comes when one tries to quit voluntarily. Best of all, it shows how tobacco habit can be easily overcome in three days with delightful benefit. The author, who is a business man of wide experience, desires to help those who wish to rid themselves of tobacco habit and a book will be sent free, postpaid, to anyone who writes to him and mentions the name of this paper.

You want tranquillity of nerves, greater efficiency, better health and a new lease on life, so get rid of tobacco habit!

ering glance, "that all of you are paying strict attention to what I'm saying, but I'll warn you now: you'll rue the day you break one of these orders."

This last brought us all to attention, and we received a barber ticket, for $1 in trade, and a tailor ticket, for 75 cents in trade. Closer attention also was given lessons in regulation bed dressing, the most difficult part of which was placing the mattress in its case, which the Sergeant, an old hand at this, deftly executed by placing the mattress on his head and letting it slip from this position into the case which he held open. Nearly all the men got hopelessly involved trying to perform this seemingly simple feat, but fortunately managed it just as the Sergeant was about to deliver a scathing lecture on "solid ivory."

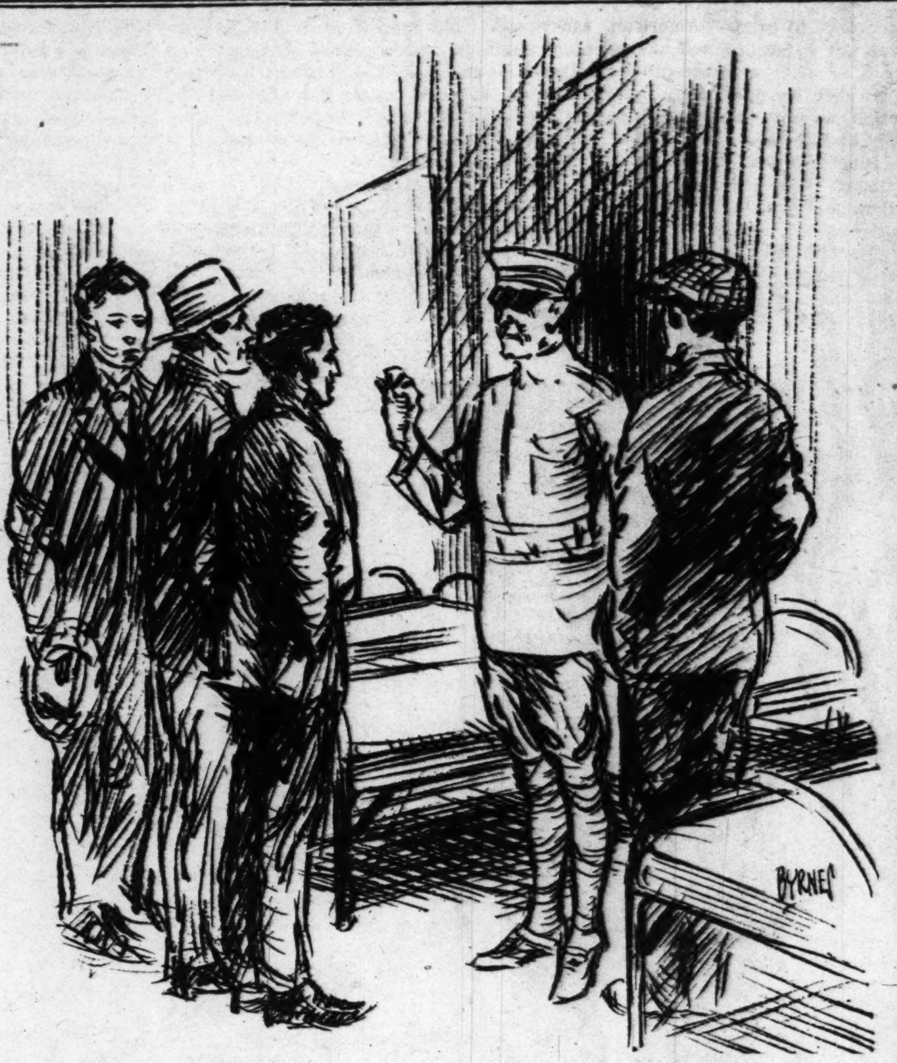
One recruit had the temerity to ask the sergeant for a piece of string. The scene that followed recalled the tragic incident of poor little Oliver Twist asking for more gruel. He wanted the string to fasten his identifying number to the clothes chest.

"Now, ain't that too bad," sighed the Sergeant, with mock commiseration. "The poor boob ain't got no string, and worse still, we ain't got no nurse in the army to get him a piece of string. Oh-h-h, now, ain't it terrible when a poor boob ain't got no string!

"Now, men, listen to me: Don't ever do a thing like that. Don't ever ask your officer or the Colonel, for instance, for a piece of string or the like; don't ever ask anybody to do something for you that you can do yourself, or you might rue the day of your laziness."

We had come to respect this Sergeant.

A trip through company barracks followed. He explained each room and its purpose; which rooms to enter, which to avoid, and how to enter them, and we were taught how to clean cuspidors.



Squad room beds are for sleeping purposes only.

"Them things is privileges," he explained, pointing to a cuspidor, "and if you want to get along in the army, never take liberty with a privilege. When you want to use a cuspidor, spit in it, not at it; it ain't a target; if you miss the cuspidor, men, you'll find yourself on your knees with a scrub brush. You must not heave big gobs or cuds or throw matches or cigarette butts on them nice floors or that fine grass outside."

The Sergeant released us with a sigh of misgiving and we had dinner of split-pea soup, German pot roast, canned tomatoes, browned potatoes, gravy, bread and rice pudding. Then we were taken by the same Sergeant to the rear of company barracks for rudiments of drill, or foot movements. An hour of this was enough for the men and almost too much for the Sergeant, who remarked upon leaving that we had done as much as might be expected, "which was little enough, to say the least."

Passing through company barracks to the squad room, he stopped suddenly in front of a door.

"See that door, men?" he warned. "Stay away from there unless you have orders to go there. That's the commanding officer's office. I can't make this command too strong, men—STAY AWAY FROM THAT DOOR!"

Pointing through the barracks door, across the parade grounds, he said:

"Them's the officers' quarters. Whatever you do, men, and I'm telling you fair, don't go over there and parade up and down in front of them houses to show off your new uniforms."

Supper consisted of chili con carne, biscuits and butter, apricots and coffee. Another evening at the movies and the second day passed.

The first duty on arising the third day was to dress the bed for inspection, and we went about this important detail clumsily and ill at ease, for we could not quite shake off the forebodings created by the Sergeant's "rue the day." It was necessary to observe closely the manner in which members of the "permanent party," or permanent members of the company on recruiting duty, folded and tucked their sheets and blankets before we left the bed for the morning toilet, and it was plain that many had their doubts that the beds would pass inspection, for they appeared uneasy even after the final pat of the pillow.

After breakfast the first of four one-half-hour rudimentary drills, to be given that day, took place in platoons on the parade ground, under the direction of our Sergeant. He was much refreshed, apparently, after the night's rest, but was quite as impressive in his commands as the day previous. Between drills he lectured on general orders and post regulations. A Captain talked half an hour just before dinner, on army life and its requirements of the men and how they could profit by good behavior.

At dinner we were thoroughly hungry, as the morning had been an active one in the cool, fresh air. Succotash was on the menu and it was good. We ate our fill, but one unfortunate evidently overestimated his capacity for this delectable dish and filled his plate a third time, heaping full. He ate a small portion of the last helping and was about to rise and leave the remainder in the dish. But that was a mistake, a serious blunder, we soon learned.

A heavy hand pushed him back on the stool and a Sergeant—another one—eyed him critically.

"Don't you like succotash?" he inquired of the recruit.

"Yy-y-es," the recruit faltered.

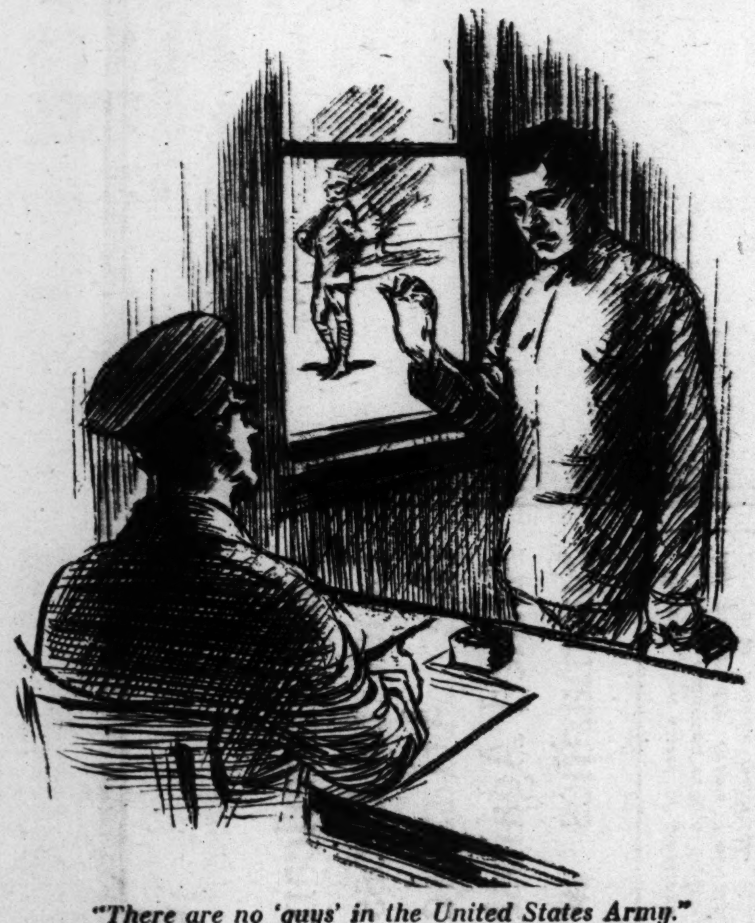
"Why don't you eat it, then?"

"Got enough."

"Why did you heap your plate up, then?"

"I thought I wanted it, but I"——

"Oh-h-h, I see. You thought, did you? Well, just eat that succotash, every bit of it. You can't get away with that civilian foolishness here. We waste nothing in the army."



"There are no 'guys' in the United States Army."

We were required to stand by while the unlucky recruit, with some difficulty, got away with the dish.

"He won't be able to look succotash in the face for a month," the Sergeant remarked as the recruit, very much embarrassed, left the mess-room. "If we didn't do that," the Sergeant explained, "those men would waste more food than they eat. They may eat all they like of any and all dishes, but they must not leave a big gob of perfectly good chow" (army parlance for food) "to be thrown to the hogs."

One of our recruits went to the Sergeant's office in the receiving barracks to get his first papers.

"Who sent you here for your first papers?" demanded the Sergeant.

"That guy out there," answered the recruit, pointing to a soldier lounging on the parade ground.

"Guy?" queried the Sergeant, struggling to contain himself.

"Uh huh; he told me."

"Now, stand right where you are and look me in the eye," commanded the Sergeant. "I'll give you to understand that there are no guys in the United States Army—you find them things only in civilian life. You are a soldier and a man, and the soldier who sent you in here is a man—a man, MAN! You ought to be ashamed of yourself, calling a soldier a guy. GET OUT OF THIS OFFICE! Your first papers haven't come back from the examining barracks."

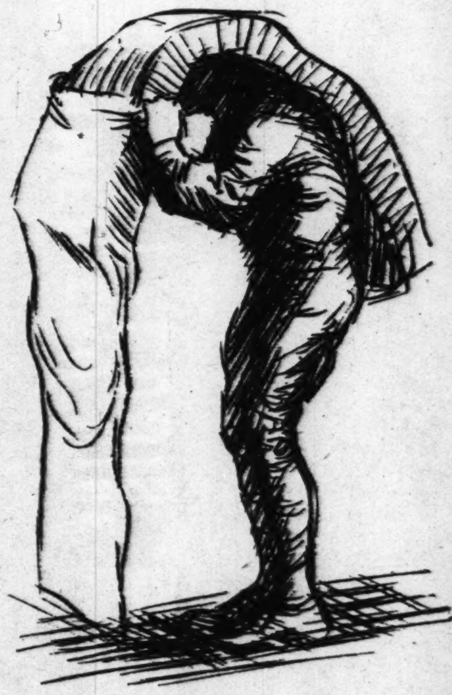
"Guy, guy, GUY!" the Sergeant fumed, pacing the floor. "The nerve of him. He thinks he's still a civilian."

At Jefferson Barracks there are many Sergeants who enlisted as privates in 1898 and fought through the Spanish-American War, and there are others who have seen service in Mexico, Cuba, Central America and the Philippines. These men are in love with army life and intend to stay with the colors in their remaining days or until forcibly retired. They are of the type who understand that to get the most out of life is to make the best of its trying situations.

One of these men, Sergt. William Levin of Twenty-seventh Company, was a newsboy in St. Louis 25 years ago. He entered the army in 1898 and participated in the Philippines campaign. Army life today, even at barracks or posts, is much easier on the man than when he entered the service. In the Philippines, for instance, the soldiers slept on the ground for months, or until Miss Helen Gould, now Mrs. Finley J. Shepard, sent them thousands of cots, he said. This type is still called the Helen Gould cot and is used at the barracks to accommodate men in tents when quarters are crowded.

Levin is one of the hardest-worked men at the barracks. He has charge of the receiving room, lectures the applicants, appraises their civilian clothes, cares for their valuables, prepares them for examination by the surgeon, keeps a complete record of their first steps and acts as general adviser before they take the oath of allegiance. Having served in peace and war, he is naturally familiar with the benefits derived from the life of regular soldiers.

"Many men come to the army as a last resort," he explained, "broken in spirit and purse; some with only a flickering desire to live. As a rule, they have no regular habits, never restrain themselves and know nothing of hygiene. We like to get hold of a chap in this pitiful state, just to witness the transformation that takes place when he wakes up.



How to case the mattress.

"The bath is a marvelous rejuvenator, and the sense of feeling clean and fresh immediately generates hope of better things. New clothing adds buoyancy to the depressed spirit, and a day's drill accomplishes positive wonders in the shiftless man.

"Not until the recruit becomes strictly amenable to discipline does he fully appreciate the value of military training in its fullest sense, and he soon learns that to get the good out of life he must become a useful and necessary part of the harmonious system.

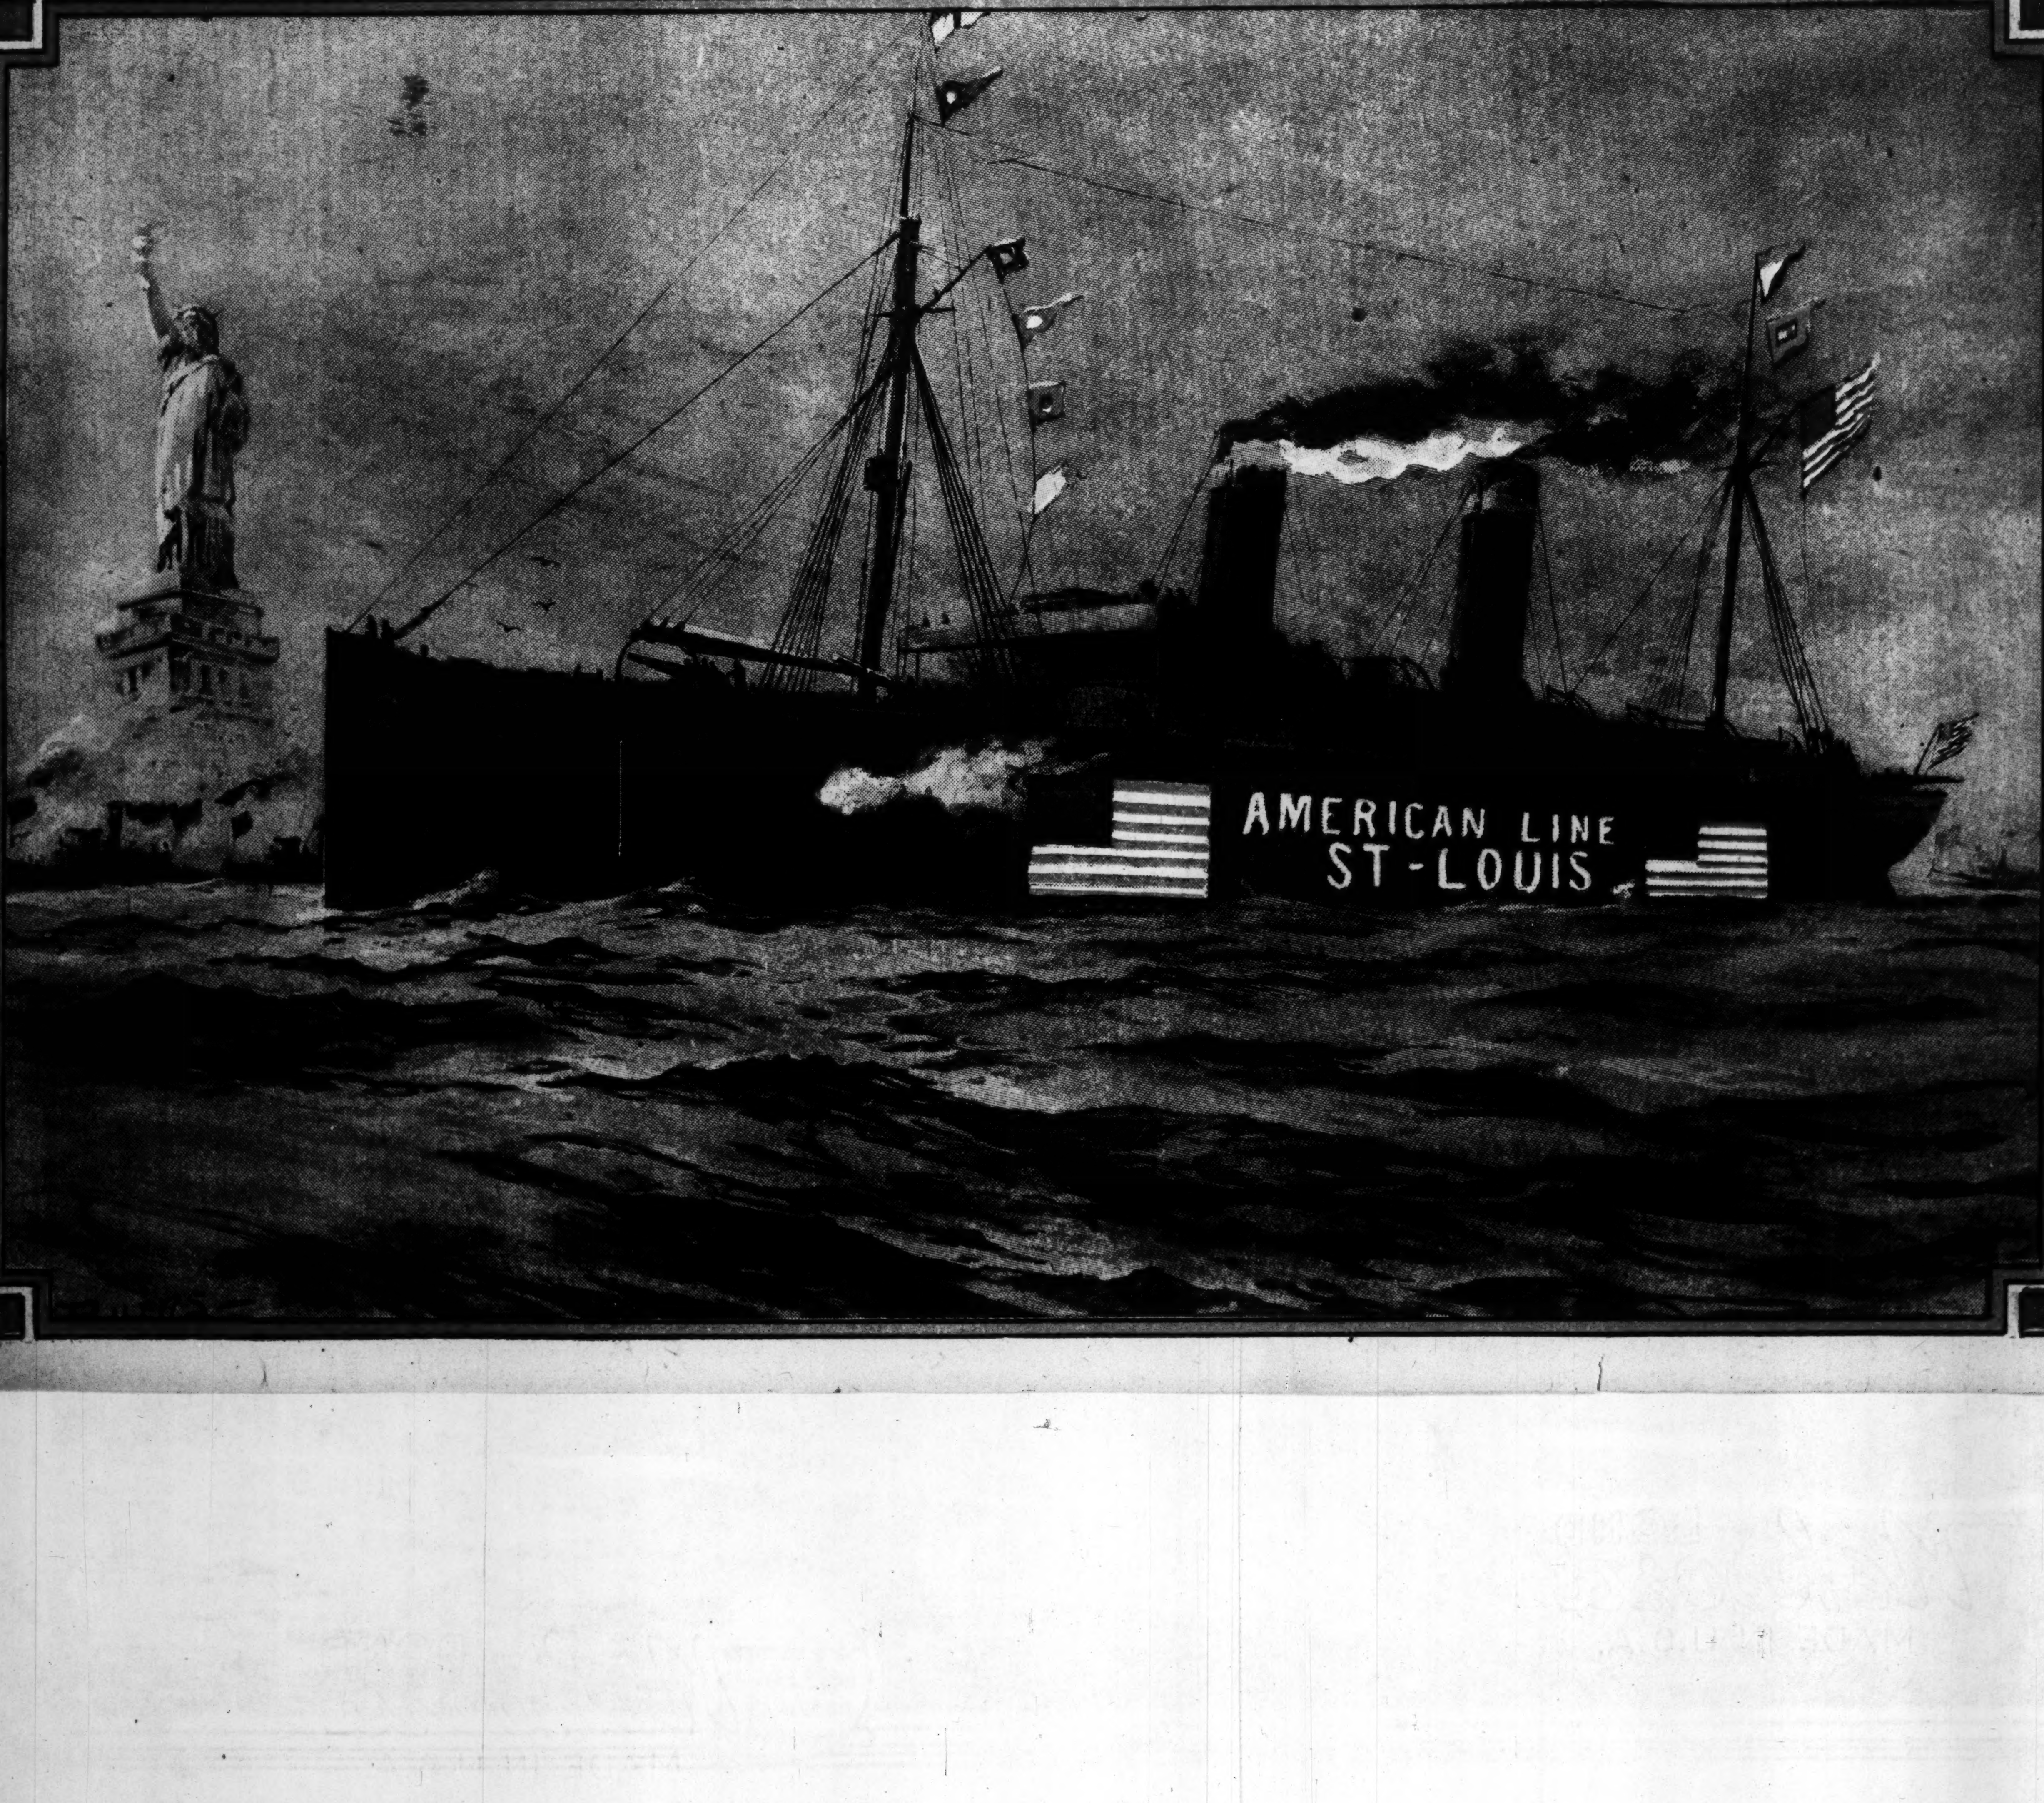
"The recruit at first might surrender to little mental rebellions against the strict order of things, but he soon learns that it is all for his own benefit. We never coddle the man; it is a mistake to do so, even in civil life. We command them, and, after they have come to their senses they obey with a pleasure that must be experienced to be appreciated.

"It requires at least 10 days for a recruit to get wise to the fact that becoming a soldier is not a joke, and 15 days more of vigorous handling to bring him to a state of sufficient control to be of actual usefulness to the army, and we never send them away to join their companies until we have satisfied ourselves that they have conquered their old habits and fully realize the responsibility of a soldier. We find very few really bad men, and some of the most efficient among us came to the army in a frightful state of mind. The more intelligent a man is, the less difficult he is to handle, of course, and the more easily is he amenable to discipline, however rigid it might be. As in civilian life, he is usually the man who gets ahead.

"We never impose upon or humiliate a man because of his ignorance or otherwise. On the contrary, every effort is put forth to establish him in the good graces of himself, and the man who behaves half way right in the army finds the life surprisingly pleasant and profitable."

Levin is one of a score of Sergeants who have been recommended for commissions by their companies, and likely would be made a Captain should the Government's plan to elevate noncommissioned officers materialize.

Foot movements are taught the first five days, handling the rifle the next five days and marching with the rifle and guard duty after that. With 25 days of training, the men are ready to be sent away for regular service. In the period after the fifth day, they must attend five lectures a week, delivered by an officer, touching every phase of the life they are entering.



First American Liner to Cross the Atlantic Armed Against Submarines

Second of a series of paintings by noted American artists depicting present-day events that are certain to become historical.

THE St. Louis, armed fore and aft, sailed secretly from New York at 12:30 p. m., on March 17, for a European port, in defiance of Germany's war zone edict. Its safe arrival at its destination across the Atlantic was announced on March 26 by Secretary of the Navy Daniels. The St. Louis of the American Line carried 31 passengers, of whom 14 were Americans. Of the crew of 394, 131 were citizens of this country. The last time an armed American merchantman ventured into the Atlantic was in 1802.

This painting is the work of M. J. Burns, noted marine artist, from a sketch made as the ship was passing the Statue of Liberty. Burns formerly was connected with the London Graphic and Harper's Weekly. Other vessels of the American Line are the Philadelphia, St. Paul and Kroonland. It is generally assumed that these three liners are also being armed and will make trips similar to that successfully completed by the St. Louis.

At the time of the German submarine order Berlin proposed a zone of safety for the four American liners from New York to Falmouth, but under such restrictions that the United States did not even consider the proposal.

How Scholars Made The World's Storehouse of Knowledge for the Use of Every Home.

Distinguished Editor of Greatest Reference Work Ever Published Writes of Marvelous Achievement—All Known Facts in Universe Collected and Indexed for Quick Use

By HUGH CHISHOLM, M. A.

Editor of the Encyclopaedia Britannica (11th Edition)

OUR idea in building the new Encyclopaedia Britannica was that we had to make it common ground between the public and the experts, who at present are generally absolutely divorced.

The special knowledge, for instance, of technical men has a direct bearing on many things we wear, the things that go into the construction of our houses, or that serve us in our occupations, our fads, our pastimes.

The only way to get correct knowledge on these things is to go to the men familiar with them through actual everyday experience.

This is one of the ways in which The Encyclopaedia Britannica bridges the gulf between specialism and the man-in-the-street.

Draw on Practical Experience.

This applies to special knowledge of many sorts, and we drew upon men of practical experience in many lines. Thus we regarded it just as important to get expert information on the tricks of the conjurer who mystifies you with his marvelous skill as on the latest theory of radio-activity. So for the article Conjuring we went to a practicing magician, the inventor of some of the most famous conjuring feats of the present day.

For the article Ceramics, we went to the manager of a great tile and pottery factory, formerly chemist for Josiah Wedgwood and Sons; to write on modern printing presses for the article Printing we secured the manager of a great printing house; and to write the article Process, which deals with the making of half-tones, three-color printing, etc., we went to the art director of a prominent publishing house. The article on gem-cutting is by an American expert of international reputation.

Each Writer an Expert.

The valuable article Glass was written by a manufacturer of glass. We had a fur expert on furs, a dog expert on dogs, and a leather expert on leather.

The writer on Electric Lighting is a consulting electrical engineer, intimately associated with the practical applications of electrical science, especially in electric lighting, during the last 25 years.

The chief engineer of a great American electric company wrote for us on Electric Power Transmission and for the article Tunnels we secured the engineer in charge of the subway system of a great American city.

Drowning and Life Saving is by the founder of the Royal Life Saving Society, who gives useful advice to swimmers.

The articles Brick, Shoe and Bookbinding are full of information of the practical sort, supplied by practical men.

When we wanted to deal with Life-boats in A Compact Organization.

A compact, systematically directed organization collected, edited and published this new Encyclopaedia Britannica. Editorial will governed and directed the activities of the contributors and harmonized them to a single purpose. We had, besides, an Intelligence Department, the function of which was to make a note of current progress in every field and in all countries, and to gather material pertaining to these new discoveries and advances for the contributors to make such use of as they saw fit.

This unity of our organization, probably greater in its combined intellectual powers than had ever before been applied to the achievement of a single purpose, made it possible to embody in the new edition more and better information, to handle it with less error, less chance of omission or waste of space through duplication than would be possible under any other plan. Such a system of making an encyclopaedia could, however, be employed only where the financial resources and the influence at the command of the editor-in-chief were as great as they were in the case of the new Encyclopaedia Britannica.

Its Working Fund Unlimited.

A million and a half dollars was spent on the Eleventh Edition before a copy was printed, and yet it is remarkably low-priced; it can be bought for only one dollar down and small instalment payments for a limited period.

It is by far the most popular and most widely used encyclopaedia ever published. The grand total of all sets sold, for all editions, in all the English-speaking countries of the earth, would exceed 800,000 sets, or about twenty-two million volumes—more volumes than are contained in all the vast national libraries of London, Paris, Berlin and Washington combined.

HUGH CHISHOLM, M.A.
EDITOR of the ENCYCLOPAEDIA
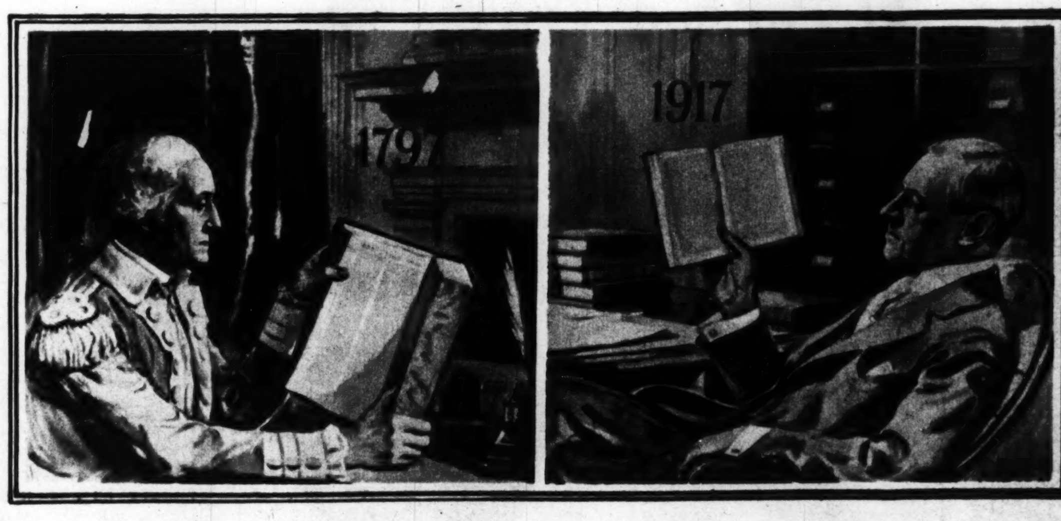
BRITANNICA.
(11TH EDITION)

THE Editor-in-Chief of the 11th Edition of The Encyclopaedia Britannica is an Englishman, a graduate and M. A. of Oxford University, and a journalist of wide experience and diversified sympathies. He has visited the United States several times; and before he undertook the task of editing a new edition of the Britannica, spent a whole year traveling in this country for the purpose of studying American conditions at first hand. He organized an American editorial staff in New York, which worked for eight years in co-operation with the London editorial office, the two forming a veritable college of research which kept in touch with the 1500 specialist contributors from 21 lands.



THE FIRST PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES owned and used the Britannica, 3rd Edition, in its original, bulky, unwieldly form, printed on old-fashioned THICK PAPER, which necessitated a large awkward book that had to be supported upon a table.

THE 28th PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES has the advantage of using the Britannica, 11th Edition, which contains 50 per cent more reading matter, but is printed on thin INDIA PAPER and is as easy to hold in the hand and read as a magazine.

published not as a money-making venture for the profit that was in it, but as an educational work, as a means of spreading useful knowledge.

The Editors of the Britannica alone of all books published were not under the control of the business office. The only question the Editors had to ask themselves was, how and where can we get the best article or the best illustration or the best map? Who is the man best qualified to write on this or that subject? The financial consideration was never though of.

That is the reason why the Encyclopedia Britannica is the best work ever published, and that is the reason why more copies of it have been sold in the United States alone than of all other encyclopaedias in all languages the world over.

Universal in Its Scope.

The new Encyclopaedia Britannica is A History of All Nations; an International Dictionary of Biography; an Exhaustive Gazetteer of the World, the first adequate History of Modern Europe; an Encyclopaedia of Religion, Philosophy and Sociology; a Library of Languages and Literature; a Handbook to all the Arts and Sciences, Manufactures and Engineering; a complete Atlas of the World; an Exhaustive Compendium of Sports and Games. The Biographies appended to the major articles are an index to the Literature of the World. And the whole work is written so the everyday home folks of the world can understand it. It is all plain English, solid truth and edited with common sense. This wonderful Eleventh Edition of the Encyclopaedia contains:

458 articles on the Development of the Human Race and of Civilization, Races and Antiquity of Man, Mythology, Folk-lore.

Beauty in 1885

It's all wrong for a woman of less than forty years to have a wrinkle on her face or show signs of bad complexion. Follow the celebrated beauties. They kept their internal system in order. Since 1885 the best looking women of America have been using Dr. Campbell's Complexion Wafers, and never a complaint. They contain a touch of arsenic, which as your doctor will tell you, gets right into your stomach and liver and eliminates the causes that make for bad complexion. Guaranteed safe. Mailed in plain cover for 50c and $1.00.
